> In he simply absurd to talk about free trade giving as enlarged marketabroad. Nobody is going to give us any more for what we produce, or buy any more of us, because we have free trade. Business is not done on a basis of gratitude or friendship, An Englishman who buys a bushel of American wheat does not let the fact of our having free trade or tariff have the slightest effect on him. He simply wants a bushel of good wheat, and begoes into the market to buy it as cheap as he can. If he can buy Russian wheat one-tenth of a penny a bushel cheaper than he can American, Australian, Argentine, or Indian wheat, he buythe Russian wheat, and vice eersu. It is childish prattle to assume that be is going to buy more wheat than he wants or needs just because we have favored some countryman of his by le ting in the latter's goods free of duty.
