MIRACULOUS ESCAPE!

Three Men in the Face of Death.

TWO OF THEM INJURED.

A "Slip" of Coal Falls Upon Them While They are Within the Narrow Limits of a Mine Car—The Injuries not Dangerous—Other Local Items.

TWO men had a most miraculous escape from death in a gangway of the Shenandoah City colliery yesterday afternoon. Patrick Higgins, George Davis and a laborer named Joseph Savlosky were standing in a car engaged in putting a piece of timber called a "collar" in place. It was necessary to dig some coal out of the side to make room for the end of the piece of timber, and as Davis was in the act of doing this a large piece of coal slipped out. In its descent the piece of coal grazed Higgins' head, slid over the shoulders of Savlosky and fell against Davis' leg. Although the latter was the most seriously injured Savlosky yelled so much that he attracted the men from all the neighboring parts of the mine and for the time great excitement prevailed.

Inside Foreman Fred Carl hastened to the scene and had both men removed. It was thought at the time that both were very badly injured, but a subsequent examination showed that both had escaped fractures and after a few days' treatment they will be all right again.

IMPORTANT SCHOOL POINT.

The Children of Old Soldiers Must be Admitted.

At the beginning of the present school term, the Mahanoy City School Board considered the question of the admission of pupils from outside districts. Heretofore it has been customary to admit pupils from out of the borough at certain fixed rates, but this year, owing to the crowded condition of the schools, it was decided not to admit pupils from outside at all. This cut off some pupils who had been regularly attending the schools for several years past. Among the applicants for the admission of his daughter to the High school was a resident of Gilberton, who, it now appears, according to a law enacted at the last session of the Legislature, is entitled to have his children instructed in this district if he prefers, he having been a soldier in the civil war.

The law in question is found in the Pamphlet Laws of the last session, page 23, and reads as follows:

"That any child or children of any person who was a soldier in the service of the United States in the late war of the rebellion being, or who shall be, temporarily or otherwise within any school district of the Commonwealth shall, upon application, be entitled to admission and instruction the same as resident children, and notwithstanding such child or children may have or may come into such district for the purpose of attendance at such school, and the residence of the parents, guardian or other person or persons entitled by law to the custody of such child or children be in another district."

"The Power of Woman."
Madame, and her son Augustine, Neuville will appear at Ferguson's theatre on Thursday evening, November 9th, in a production of "The Power of Woman." These popular stars are this season surrounded by a company of competent performers. They carry all the scenery, properties and mechanical effects used in this production and among the special scenic features is a locomotive run by steam for three minutes in view of the audience, at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour. This is introduced simply as an incident, as "The Power of Woman" is not a railroad play. This play was recently read by a number of New York's prominent newspaper men and dramatic critics who were unanimous in pronouncing it one of the prettiest stories and best written dramas of the day.

How to Vote if Not Registered.

A great many voters never take the trouble to ascertain whether or not they are registered. Any voter who has been a resident of a district for the required time, and can get two men to swear to the fact, is entitled to vote, whether or not he is registered. There is one qualification, however, required of a voter that cannot be evaded. This is the payment of a state and county tax within two years. The last day to pay this tax to secure a vote at the coming election was October 7th.

SIX HUNDRED GONE!

Mr. Walter's Costly Chat With a Stranger.

A STORY WITH A LESSON

Chance Acquaintance Results in a Cline Which Enables a Scoundrel to Deprive a Poor Man of Savings From Years of Hard Labor—The Details.

MR. WM. WALTER, who resides in the western part of town, tells a story of sensational experience which may have occurred on Thursday night. Mrs. Walter, it seems, had laid away a snug sum of money with the intention of investing it in a farm in the Catawissa Valley. Instead of putting it in bank she secreted the money in an old tin coffee pot which rested on a shelf at the side of a stairway leading to a cellar. The money had been there for years.

On Tuesday morning Mr. Walter went over to New London to make arrangements for the purchase of the farm he had in view. Mrs. Walter says at about 8 o'clock in the evening of that day a well-dressed young man, having much the appearance of a "city chap," called at her house and said that her husband had met with an accident and would not return home until the next day, but he had brought the negotiations for the purchase of the farm to a point at which immediate payment of part of the money was necessary in order to secure advantage of an exceptionally good bargain. The young man's knowledge of the farm negotiations served as a letter of credit, and Mrs. Walter accepted the statement as a bona fide one. She went to the old coffee pot and took from it $200. As the money was being handed to him the young man seized it and at the same time grappled with and overpowered the woman. Having bound and gagged Mrs. Walter the scoundrel went to the stairway and took the balance of the money, which amounted to four hundred dollars.

After the plunder the stranger left the house. Mr. Walter arrived home at about 11 o'clock that night and found his wife bound and gagged. He is almost frantic over the affair and says that the stolen money was the result of several years' savings, as he has been earning but laborer's wages.

A reporter found Mr. Walter at his home to-day. The unfortunate man seemed to be distracted. When asked how it was possible for a stranger to have a knowledge of the farm transaction, he said that on his way to New London he stopped at a hotel in Ring town and there made the acquaintance of a young man who claimed to represent a New York book publishing house. The stranger explained that he was in Ringtown gathering farming statistics. Mr. Walter says that he was with the young man for about two hours, during which time he spoke of the farm negotiations. The stranger said his name was Wilmet and pressed Mr. Walter for his address in Shenandoah so that he could make a call when visiting the town. The address was given and with a knowledge of the farm business the road was clear for the scoundrel.

OBE'S OBSERVATIONS.

What He Sees and Hears During His Travels.

A prominent citizen of this town, who is of Welsh descent, claims that the Welsh in the United States number as many as their countrymen in Wales. He likewise claims a lineal right to residence here since one of his ancestors forestalled Columbus in the discovery of America by 272 years. These assertions, he claims, are based on historical traditions and the manuscripts of all Welsh bards on the one hand, and on the prevalence of Welsh in many of the languages of the Indians, both of North and South America, on the other.

I was in company with a social party recently which included a lady who had been married the second time, and who had been divorced from her first husband. The latter is still a resident of this town. This particular married lady is anxious to know what sort of mourning she should wear in the event of her second husband's death. While not wishing to establish a precedent, I would suggest half mourning.

The following essay on cigarette and cigar smoking was handed to me yesterday: The other day, happening to be in a town not a hundred miles from Shenandoah, I thought I would get shaved. There is nothing remarkable about that, as I, like a great many other men, have often been shaved before. On getting into the chair I paid special attention to the shallow-looking, out-of-faded individual who proceeded to perform the honorarial act. At first I thought the young man's complexion was due to some unpleasantness he might have had with his girl, but to my disgust I very soon learned differently. It was caused by cigarette smoking. Of all the tortures a man can endure, the worst is to allow one's self to be shaved by a barber who smokes that vile extract of the gutter snipe—a cigarette. Anyone addicted to the habit of smoking cigarettes must certainly be a burden to himself and an offense to anyone who possesses a sensitive nasal appendage. We have seen many men suffering from an injury or sickness and have pitied them; but the man or boy who needs pity is he who cannot control his appetite for cigarette smoking. He will in time reap the whirlwind and the more he smokes the sooner will the tide turn against him. The fact has been demonstrated time and again by the medical profession that cigarettes have a tendency to heart disease, consumption and other insidious attacks upon the system. But we need not consult a physician to learn this. Anyone who keeps his eyes open when walking along the streets can find enough subjects to fully remove any doubt as to the effects of cigarettes. Two-thirds of the applicants for admission to West Point and Annapolis are rejected because they are addicted to the cigarette habit and have suffered from the results. At the rate at which our young people are going into dissipation, smoking, profligacy, and kindred evils we may well be alarmed at the outlook for the future of our country. "Live as long as you may," says a writer, "the first twenty years form the greater part of your life. They appear so while they are passing; they seem to have been so when we look back to them; and they take up more room in our memory than all the rest which succeed them." It tells us, how important it is that we should pass these years in planting good principles, and avoid all those things which lay up bitterness and sorrow for time to come. Begin by the abstinence of the cigarette habit. Ours.

The Final Act.

The Board of Health will soon be in a position to assert its authority. Last night a committee of the Borough Council met and made arrangements to have the rules and regulations published as required by law, and it is expected the publication will be made on Monday. Ten days after the publication is made the board will be in a position to enforce the laws. Dr. Spalding, the president of the board, is very anxious to have the time come when the body can act legally. He says that the delay in taking the necessary steps to clothe the board with legal authority has resulted in having the health law defied in many respects. Notwithstanding ample notice has been given and blanks furnished for the purpose, but a comparatively small percentage of contagious diseases have been officially reported and the law in regard to certificates of death and burial permits have been almost entirely ignored.
