OFFICIALLY COUNTED!

The Final Result of Tuesday's Election Announced.

NO MATERIAL CHANGES.

The Estimated Majorities of Some Candidates Were Considerably Cut Down, and Those of Others Were Increased, But the Alterations Did Not Change the Result.

THE official count of the votes cast in Schuykill county on Tuesday's election was concluded shortly after 11 o'clock last night and resulted in the increase of some majorities and decrease of others, as compared with tables previously published, but the changes were not sufficient to alter the elections.

The official returns are as follows:

Official count showed big differences with the figures which some of the candidates were given by the calculations of friends. The count furnished a big surprise in the Dechert-Folmer case. The correct estimates gave Dechert 594 majority, but the official count gives him 788.

There was also a big drop in the Severn-Mulholland figures. According to the corrected estimates Severn had 1922 majority over Mulholland, but the official count cut it down to 1601, which is still a rousing majority.

The majorities of Shortall, Matten and Day were also decreased by the official count, while those of Weidman, Schwarzbaum and Geary were increased.

This count has been accepted by all sides as final and there will be no contests. In Pottsville, however, there is much dissatisfaction over the city charter vote and a movement will be inaugurated at once to have another vote taken at the spring election. It is claimed the vote taken on Tuesday was illegal because the ballots used were not printed and distributed by the officials prescribed by the ballot law.

OB'S OBSERVATIONS.

What He Sees and Hears During His Travels About Town.

The borough of Mt. Carmel has some citizens of which Shenandoah would be proud. They are not of the sickly, drooping characters who worry themselves to death because they fear the town will only live about fifty years longer and if they don't succeed in selling their properties all will be lost and they will be obliged to go to the poor house. On the contrary, they are of the we-are-here-to-stay-men and they have subscribed a fund of $15,000 to induce the location of machine shops in their town. They believe in the fixity of home industries and deserve praise for it.

A Tompkins dealer in cigars and tobacco, who sells cigarettes because he thinks it policy to keep anything in the way of tobacco product that his customers demand but who abhors the very sight of the paper rolled little things, has a novel advertising sign revealing the fact that he keeps cigarettes on sale. An artist has painted for him on white card board in colors, a very black and shuddering looking coffin. The head of this is removed and inside the coffin, may be seen a young man, with his eyes closed in death, but still sucking at a cigarette. The nails used in this coffin are formed like cigarettes. The sign simply bears this legend: "We Sell Them."

While visiting the house of an acquaintance last evening I met an old lady who was brimful of politics. She was small and slight, white-haired, and her face a net-work of fine wrinkles. When she smiled in an introductory sort of way it was revealed that she hadn't a tooth in her head. But her form was unimpaired, her step was light, and her gray eyes were just flashing. "Isn't it grand?" said the old lady as one of the party made reference to the Republican victory. "My! My! did you ever see the like of it?" and McKinley! He is a great man. McKinley is the coming man. He'll be the next President as sure as you and I are standing here. And he'll run the country with his own party. He won't have to call on the Democrats to help him out of a hole as Cleveland had to call on the Republicans. Oh, but it did me good to see it. Why, young man, the Democrats can't run this country. They never could. Don't I know? Look at 1837 and 1859 and 1867, and 1861. All these years I've kept track of them and their doings and they were never right."

The old lady stopped for a moment to take breath and then exclaimed, "And there's a man for you! there's a statesman! Honest John Sherman! All these years he has been guarding the finances of the people. The man who works day's work ought to bless John Sherman, for he has given him honest dollars for his work. But they don't mind what there used to be. Why I can mind back long before you were born. How old do you think I am? Well, I was born in '31. I'm 73 years old, and I can read without glasses. Don't mind 1840—'old Tippens and Tyler, too? I wasn't married then. I was learning the dressmaking trade in West Chester, Chester county, Pennsylvania. That's where I came from. Were you ever there? Oh, that's a pretty country, isn't it?"

"Well," she went on, "how was it then? We then had free trade. We were buying all our stuff across the waters, and sending the good money out of the country to pay for it. And what was left for us? Shiploads! That's a nice name for people's money, isn't it. Pieces of paper—61 cents, 121, 151, 25, 37, 50, 621—why you'd have a roll of it as thick as your arm, and it all wouldn't be worth 50. In '40 I used to go to big meetings with a lot of other girls and we'd ride in wagons and sing—"

And with a memory the fight of the more than half a century that lay between her girlhood and her old age had not weakened, she repeated one of the old campaign songs of 1840—one of those quaint political songs that set forth the issues of the contest much more forcibly than do those of our day. One of the verses ran something like this:

Come all ye young Whites of Ohio,
And all ye sick Democrats, too,
Come out from that old old party,
And vote for old Tippens!

The old lady sang the song half under her breath, to a quaint tune, and after finishing it said with a pleasant laugh, "Last fall I was just as hot over politics as any man who had a vote or carried a district in his pocket. When I saw old Cleveland's picture put up I went to bed and didn't care whether I ever got up again or not. What did get into the people last fall? Why, they just went crazy. But they got all the change they wanted and now they have come to their senses." One.

A FRUITLESS MISSION

The Shenandoah Post Office Fight has Been Renewed.

THE GERMANS ACTIVE!

A Delegation Makes a Call Upon Reilly In the Interest of Master, but the Congressman Tells Them He is for Mellet-Lively Fight Expected.

SPECIAL HERALD CORRESPONDENT.

POTTSTVILLE, Nov. 10, 1893.

It is quite evident that the German Democrats assume much of the credit due for the defeat of the Democratic party on Tuesday. At least this is so with the German Democrats of Shenandoah. Yesterday a number of them came down to Pottsville and made their way to the office of Congressman James E. Reilly. The delegation did not make known its mission on the streets, but it was pretty generally understood that the visit had some bearing upon the post office fight in Shenandoah and was in the interest of M. H. Master, one of the applicants for the office.

From what can be gleaned the German Democrats held a meeting in Shenandoah after the polls closed on Tuesday night, and they decided that in view of the Republican sweep the time had arrived for the Germans to make a decisive claim upon Congressman Reilly for his support of M. H. Master, the German Democratic applicant for the Shenandoah post office. Accordingly a committee was selected and yesterday it came down here to put its instructions into operation.

From all appearances the trip was a fruitless one, but it was not such because the delegation failed to read the riot act to Mr. Reilly. A gentleman who claims to have been close enough to hear all that was said at the meeting says that the delegation lost no time in paying homage or offering apologies to the Congressman, but went straight at him on the principle that if he did not think their way at the time he would have cause to think so later.

The delegation told Mr. Reilly plainly, that notwithstanding the claims of some people the German vote in this county amounts to something; without it the Democratic party would have gone into retirement long ago, and if the Irish element of the party persists in ignoring it the retirement of Tuesday will be continued. They told Mr. Reilly that they were tired of being made the instruments for electing other nationalities to office all the time without any recognition, and they wanted their share. Then the delegation particularized and told the Congressman as plainly as words could convey their sentiments that if Mr. Master should fail to receive the Shenandoah post office appointment the German Democrats would repeat the dose given on Tuesday.

The delegation added that in years gone by the German Democrats were always faithful to the Democratic party and had been most valuable allies of the Irish element, but now the time has arrived when they should receive something more than promises, and if they do not get it they will leave the party.

It is reported that the visit of the delegation gained nothing and there is justification also for saying that the report that the Irish element of the Democratic party has no use for the German element is well founded. The Irish Democrats declare that the Germans will be paid with interest for helping to bring about the sweeping defeat on Tuesday.

So far as the visit of the delegation is concerned the result is in keeping with this sentiment, Congressman Reilly will stand by his choice—Mellet. He, it is understood, has no fear for the future, at least so far as he is personally concerned, as he will not be a candidate for Congress again, and he has received all the honors the Democratic party can give him. By the grace of Cleveland, he will take care of his immediate friends.

And there it stands. It is war so the knife. Reilly will not budge and if Quinester Master want the post office they must secure it without the Congressman's assistance.

The Germans are not without hope. One of them told the correspondent before leaving Pottsville that they expect to find a political Moses who will lead them to victory at the time when the enemy considers itself the best entrenched, and Master's friends will not submit quietly.

The illness of Mr. Quin caused a cessation of open hostilities, but his friends have not been idle.

This post-office fight causes as much interest here as it does in Shenandoah. N.

"AN AMERICAN BEAUTY."

Our Thanksgiving Gift to Every One of Our Readers.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are enabled to make every one of our readers a present of an exquisite oil picture, 20 inches high, entitled "An American Beauty," which has been admired by all who have seen it. This superb picture is from the brush of the same artist who painted the "Yard of Pansies" and "Yard of Roses." The reproduction is equal in every respect to the original, from which it cannot be distinguished, and accompanying it are full directions for framing at home at a cost of a few cents, thus forming a beautiful ornament for the high, narrow wall-space for which it is so difficult to obtain pictures of the proper shape. It is a superb Thanksgiving gift. Send your name and address to the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th street, New York, with three cents (either in stamps or pennies) to pay for the packing, mailing, etc., and mention that you are a reader of THE HERALD and you will receive by return mail one of these valuable works of art.

A Good Show.
A first-class entertainment was given at the opera house Thursday evening by Sweeney, Alvino and Gustave's Minstrels, which is without doubt, one of the very best minstrel companies in existence. The singing and dancing were good, there was an abundance of fresh jokes, and the specialties were way above the average. Especially fine were the juggling, rope-walking and feats in gymnastics, and everything pleased the audience to the fullest degree.—Lancaster, (Pa.) New Era, Dec. 23. Miscellaneous.
Upon hearing the result of the election the other day T. R. Boddall, Esq., remarked to a friend that the news made him feel as good as if he had been made the father of a boy. The statement was misconstrued, and Mr. Boddall's friends and the newspapers were misled into the announcement that the lawyer had been made a happy father. Mr. Boddall has been stormed with congratulations since the newspaper announcement. He says he had no idea that an increase in his family would so much interest the community.
