The Trials of Criminal Cases Taken Up.

STORY OF OCHS' MURDER

The Widow Tells of Harry Manfred's Visit to the House on the Fatal Night and the Circumstances Which Led to the Killing of Her Husband.

Special Herald Correspondent.

POTTSVILLE, Nov. 15. RIMINAL court at this place yesterday disposed of motions to quash and other preliminary business and settled down to trials. The first and most important case on the calendar is the one of the Commonwealth against Harry Manfred, the young Italian charged with the murder of George Ochs at St. Clair. On Monday a motion to quash the indictment was made, but as the court denied it the case was taken up for trial yesterday and a jury was empaneled.

Mrs. Ochs, the widow of the murdered man, is now a resident of Shenandoah, making her home with relatives who reside on Chestnut street. She was called to the witness stand and the story of the crime, which she witnessed, in a low tone of voice.

The woman testified that on the night of August 15th, last, Manfred called at her house in St. Clair and asked for something to eat. Mrs. Ochs's husband and father were in the house at the time. The Italian only nibbled at the bread given him and when told to leave so the house could be closed up for the night he took a pitcher and went for beer. Mrs. Ochs endeavored to show that the beer was drugged and said her father was made sick by drinking it. Manfred said he could not go to his own home because his wife and mother-in-law had turned him out, but he finally left and Mrs. Ochs locked the doors.

Sometime during the night Mrs. Ochs was awakened and discovered Manfred in her bedroom. She cried out and her husband awoke. He sprang from the bed and made for the Italian, who drew a pistol and fired. Manfred ran to the upper part of the house and jumped through the window by which he had entered. Ochs followed and fell dead across the window sill. Mrs. Ochs admitted, on cross examination, that she has a husband living in Minersville and that neither had been divorced. She said she married again because her husband married first, and she believed she had as much right to do so as he had. The witness stoutly refused all insinuations against her character on cross examination.

The case is still on trial. The most important case beside the Ochs trial before the court yesterday was that of John Briggs for complicity in the Giffert riot last August. Hon. C. N. Brown, counsel for Briggs, made a motion on Monday to postpone the case until the next term of court, and in support of that motion Dr. G. M. Hamilton, of Shenandoah, was put on the witness stand yesterday to testify as to the physical condition of County Detective Amour, who is one of the most important witnesses. The doctor swore that in his opinion it would endanger Amour's life to have him appear at court and put on the witness stand this term. Amour, he said, is still very weak from the effects of the injuries he received in the riot, and while he has appeared on the streets recently he has been obliged to walk very slow and the distances have been very short. The doctor thought that while Amour might have entire control of his nervous temperament while on the stand and appear to undergo an examination without much uneasiness, yet the forced talking might be followed by a relapse which would perhaps place his life in great danger. Dr. Hamilton said he believed Amour would be sufficiently strong to appear at the next term. This ended the matter for the day and the case was postponed until next Saturday, when the court will decide whether or not Briggs' trial will be postponed until the next term.

Shared the Applause. When County Auditor-elect John E. Doyle passed down to his seat in Ferguson's theatre last evening there was applause which showed that a number in the house were pleased with his recent election. Mr. Doyle blankly bowed in acknowledgment. He received official notification of his election yesterday. In making the office Mr. Doyle showed he had considerable strength in his party, as Fogarty is by no means a weak man.

POLITICAL POINTS.

How Things Are Shaping in the Democratic Ranks.

The post office fight is absorbing all political discussions in the ranks of the Democracy in this vicinity. George Fulmer is the latest applicant for the position, according to street rumor.

The absence of Squire "Jack" Monaghan seems to be much regretted by his followers. Much as they liked to see him rewarded, they do not think it was a safe move to give him a position which takes him away from his old stamping ground.

By the way, Squire Jack was one of the most aggressive politicians—a Democrat of the David B. Hill stripe. Those of his party in the First ward who were not of the "select" were much relieved when the Squire took himself away to the Quaker City, and are encouraged to look for some of the crumbs dealt out in that ward.

The former dispenser of justice in the First ward may also be called lucky. Several months ago he got a post office in his house; then his eyes turned towards the Democratic nomination for Prothonotary. Fortunately for himself he was coaxed out of the field by the Philadelphia appointment before his party could nominate him.

The report that "Jack" Toole, the defeated candidate for Clerk of the Courts, contemplates taking up a residence in Shenandoah again has revived the hopes of his followers. Just what he will accomplish none will pretend to say at present, but the Republicans will be wise if they keep an eye on him. It is also said that "Jack" has his eye on either the Shenandoah or Pottsville post office. There is no law to prevent him claiming either, or the earth, for that matter.

It is stated with much earnestness that Senator Monaghan will not seek a re-election next year. Some of his hear friends make the statement, but the Senator himself has not made any such assertion. It seems to have been understood that F. P. Spiess, of Tanawago, was to be the next Democratic candidate for Senator, and, in fact, a bargain to that effect seems to have been made. As a part of this alleged bargain it is said that our townsman, J. J. Francey, the Wannamaker of Schuylkill county, is to be the nominee for Congress. Since the election, however, it has been whispered that Mr. Francey does not desire the nomination. There is no question but that he can have the nomination if he wants it, and if any Democrat can be elected to Congress, he is a dyed-in-the-wool Democrat and has acquired an extensive acquaintance in national, state and county political circles. Besides this he has the prestige which usually attends a successful business man and his wealth runs close to if not into the six figures.

The impression prevails that whether or not the present is his last term in the Senate, Mr. Monaghan will not renounce politics very soon. He is a young man, but has made his mark and although a minority Senator has become much respected and sought after by the Republican members. He also stands well with the Governor. He and Senator Grant Herriot, another Shenandoah "boy," were among the leaders in the last session and secured more favors than the veterans in their party.

Mutholland, who was vanquished in the recent election by Controller elect Severn, is seeking an appointment as a haul for his wounded aspirations. At least so street talk has it.

Mercitorious Production. A genuinely mercitorious production of modern minstrels was given at the Grand last evening by the Seacey, Alvino and Goetz Company. Shank, in a monologue, consisting of original songs and prologues, played his part like a veteran, and received considerable applause.—Reading Herald. At Ferguson's theatre to-morrow evening.

MR. MONAGHAN'S FALL

The Injuries May Have a Fatal Result.

FRACTURE OF THE SKULL

The Victim Remained Unconscious For Over Twelve Hours, but Regained Consciousness This Morning—Little Hope For Recovery.

OWHILE descending a stairway at his residence on West Centre street last evening Michael Monaghan, an old and prominent resident of this town, fell and sustained injuries which the attending physicians fear will prove fatal. Mr. Monaghan had not been well for some time. His illness was due to dyspepsia and an inclination to vertigo. He had just returned from Wm. Penn where he had attended the funeral of the late William Dougherty, and was somewhat exhausted. The stairway Mr. Monaghan attempted to descend consists of twelve steps. When he stepped on the second one from the top he suddenly reeled and fell, his head striking the floor at the bottom with great force.

Dr. S. C. Spalding, the family physician, was immediately summoned and upon making an examination of the injured man, found that the inner table of the right side of the skull was fractured. Mr. Monaghan was breathing heavily and appeared almost in a dying condition. Blood was flowing from the mouth, nose and right ear.

Dr. Spalding pronounced the case a very serious one, and Dr. D. J. Langton was called in. After a consultation the physicians could give no hope and Rev. Kane, of the Annunciation church, was summoned to administer the last rites.

Mr. Monaghan remained unconscious from the time of the accident, 6:30 last evening, until 8 o'clock this morning, when he roused. He recovered and retained consciousness, but has been unable to speak. His condition was somewhat improved this afternoon, but a relapse may set in at any time. The injuries being internal it is impossible to say what the result will be.

Peter and Anthony, Mr. Monaghan's sons, now in attendance at college in Georgetown, D. C., have been summoned home.

OBSERVATIONS.

What He Sees and Hears During His Travels About Town.

A gentleman of town says there was more truth than poetry in a recent article published in this column in which the present system of public education is conducted. The article referred to the ramming and cramping of numerous studies into the minds of the children, but the gentleman I now refer to says the subject can be taken in another light. One day he visited a school and a little girl was called to present her slate. Ten words were found wrong and the sentence of the teacher was that the pupil should write each of the words thirty times, making 300 words in all. This system, the critic thinks, needs some moderation.

The announcement that the Board of Health had decided to put placards on houses where typhoid fever exists was very unpleasant to many, but, as the Board puts it, the sentiments of the few must be subservient to the safety of the many. It will certainly be very disagreeable to have these unsightly placards on one's door, but it is one of the misfortunes of this life and not a whim of the health officials. The Board has found that there has been too much carelessness where contagious diseases have existed.

It is at once marvellous and superb, the conduct of the small boy during grass apple time. I have seen him within a few days, this year, when his stud his pockets with these bullets of nature's making and emptying along the street, watching his impromptu meal and shying the cores at a stray cat with all imaginable cast. Just to look at him was calculated to make an old and more thoughtful person melancholy for the day; and one called up a vision of night, with an agonized mother and a hastily summoned doctor as protagonists. But such anxious imaginings are always quite amicably never in the history of the world has a small boy been wrested in an encounter with grass apples. It is always the people that suffers, not the boy. A curious phase of the matter is that the individual boy gets no real enjoyment from the act of eating an unripe bit of fruit; it is a shallow mistake to suppose that just because he is young and care free, his soul is sweet in his mouth. No, if you catch him when he doesn't see you, you will find his face-pucker sometimes, just as yours would be under like circumstances. It is tradition, a respect for juvenile good form, which leads him to tamper with the laws of God and man. He is shrewdly aware that old folks wait until the fall berries (with ripe fruit) and also aware that it is a mark of the great boy tribe to anticipate the season, a trial distinction and peculiarity, something testifying to the fact that one boy is another and superior being to the man. Innumerable custom lies behind the early forage for apples, which are the irritation of orchard owners and the terror of parents. Arguments, biological or moral, are of little avail. You must destroy the clumsiness of the act before results may be looked for, until then, the rightly constituted boy will look upon the apple when it is green and it will, for him, take on the lures which may be imputed to the tree of Eden's garden.
