BEFORE Secretary Hoke Smith left Washington last week he gave out an interview in which he declared that the Administration had the utmost confidence in Pension Commissioner Lochren, and that it did not intend and would not change the pension policy in any way. And everybody who knows President Cleveland will place entire confidence in Secretary Hoke Smith's assertion that the pension policy will not be changed, but that veterans will continue to be lopped off from the pension rolls and the payments for pensions decreased, notwithstanding the fact that there are 700,000 claims remaining to be adjusted.

THE splendid display made by the eruber Columbia in her unofficial trial trip Tu-aday will encourage a wider belief in the wisdom of the counsel which Admiral Tryon gave to the Americans only a short time before he perished with his great battleship Victoria. That was to go on building fleet cruisers. He was of opinion that they are in the main more effective than the heavy fighting ships, having the one important advantage that they can deal a blow and begone before it can be returned. Secretary Herbert, however, is not of that opinion, and in his next annual report will argue that we have enough cruisers for the present, and, indeed, for several years yet, and that whatever money is to be devoted to the new navy bewatter should be to fighting ships of the type of the Illinote, the model of which was seen at the Columbian Exposition. These he considers necessary to make the many an offensive as well as a defensive 2.00
