This case shows one of the dangers by which physicians are constantly surrounded and how easily, they may be victimized by designing people. Dr. Hochlerner became one of the examining physicians for the society while a resident of Philadelphia a few months ago. A member presented himself for examination, claiming be was ill and autities to benefits. The Soctor questioned the man and then prescribed for him, but the society afterwards claimed that the man was not ill. The doctor was bound by the statement of the patient. He could not open the man to see if a complaint really existed.
