REVIVAL OF WATER TALK

A Committee of Citizens to Ask the Borough Council to Lay the Public Water Works Pipes in the Alleys—There Will be Considerable Opposition.

HERE is considerable speculation as to what will be the next step in connection with the Shenandoah Public Water Works. It is hinted that it will be a movement to get the members of the Borough Council to adopt a plan which has been so often discussed at the meetings of the body and as frequently endorsed as the proper thing, namely: that hereafter all water and other service pipes, wherever practicable, be laid through the alleys, and not the main thoroughfares.

It is claimed that a committee of citizens will be present at the next Council meeting to urge this reform, and one of the main arguments will be that if the Council hopes to ever restrict service pipes and wires to the alleys it had better commence with its own line.

While the idea appears to be a popular one, it is by no means supported by a unanimous concurrence of opinion, and it would not be surprising if the movement would precipitate a warm battle of opinions.

One gentleman who had heard of the proposed movement said to-day that he did not think it would be successful. One of the objections would be that the alleys are so narrow they would be completely closed up while the pipes are being laid or repaired, and consequently would bring great inconvenience and loss upon the busy men and others having stables.

It is contended that the alleys are the proper place for such pipe lines, but at the same time it is maintained that as the gas, water, steam heat and sewerage pipes run through the main street and cannot be transferred to the alleys it would only be proper to also put the pipes of the public water works in the same streets, especially when an actual loss would be incurred by tearing up the alleys. There are dozens of arguments on both sides, however, and should the matter be properly brought before the Borough Council the discussions will be lively and interesting.

The result of the injunction suits are also creating much speculation. Only two of them have been argued. The third was to have been disposed of on Monday last, but was postponed until December 10th. This is the case of the Shenandoah Water Company against the borough. The cases argued are those in which the Thomas Coal Company and the Hildreth Estate are plaintiffs. One of the attorneys interested stated yesterday that he would not be surprised if a delay of three or four weeks more should intervene before the court renders a decision, as the papers submitted in the cases are very voluminous.

OSB'S OBSERVATIONS.

What He Sees and Hears During His Travels.

The near approach of tomorrow brings visions of nicely roasted fat turkeys with savory "braising" inside, and of course those who are fortunate enough to have the wherewithal to purchase more than a sufficiency of turkey for their own families are extending invitations to their friends to share Thanksgiving dinner with them. This reminds me that a certain Shenandoah girl enjoys the fidelity of three lovers, two of whom reside in the town and the other one in a nearby town. She recently informed her out-of-town beau that he must make an engagement for Thanksgiving dinner, as her parents expected him to dine with them. A day or two ago she was amazed by getting letters from the other two chaps, each informing her that he had invited himself to her home for Thanksgiving dinner. How to manage this affair, it is almost needless to say, is causing some pondering.

What would the coming fast day be to us without the turkey? Thanksgiving with a chicken, a goose, a duck! One stares at such a suggestion. A German might be satisfied with a goose, a Frenchman with a duck, a dork with a chicken, for which he has a most singular affinity, which draws him out of bed at night, and makes a hon roost seem to him the most splendid of the handiworks of man, but to the English speaking citizen the crowning glory of the table is a turkey. The turkey enters of the world as the Americans and the English, and the Americanized English especially. If that day ever comes, which Andrew Carnegie thinks he sees, when the United States and England are reunited, and the common Parliament will meet in Washington, it will come through the common fondness for the turkey, in which is united so many of the common ancestral sentiments.

But, not to wander, the turkey is a native American. Franklin wanted to make his national emblem instead of the eagle. That belongs to all lands; the turkey has gone over the civilized world, like our political ideas, but his home is here. The American turkey is the dandy of all turkeys, and in the United States he is without a peer. That was admitted by an Englishman as far back as the seventeenth century, who, writing from New England, gave him the special honor of spelling his name with an e, thus:

"The Turkey is a long Fowl, of a black colour, yet is his flesh white; he is much bigger than our English Turkey; he hath long Legs wherewith he can run as fast as a Dog, and can fly as fast as a Goose."

It may be that owing to his "long Legs" and his ability to "fly as fast as a Goose," the darkey has never taken kindly to him. Besides, owing to his size, it is not so easy to hide him under a vest as it is a chicken. But that is neither here nor there. In addition, the darkey's fondness for chicken has been greatly exaggerated by numerous humorists. It is well-known that he has an equal fondness for young pig.

The Spaniard knew the turkey early in the 16th century and described him, but did not think of taking him home and roasting him. Oviedo, the Spanish historian, who came over early in the history of American discovery to supervise the smelting of gold in San Domingo, described him and because he spread his tail and stretched grandly, like the true American that he was, dressed him with the peacock. Besides him with his head up, his eye gleaming, his feathers spread, who would blame old Ben for wanting to make him the emblem of the Americans, who had dared to tread on Johnny Bull's east tail and pitch his tea chest into the waters of Boston harbor? The eagle is all right on the coat of arms, but it is the turkey, our glorious native American bird, that comes to our hearts and helps us to celebrate Thanksgiving and Christmas.

The turkey in 1575 established his connection with the Christmas festivities, and since then he has been a power in both England and the United States. In the United States, at least, there are none so low but they rise to him, this true American bird. To him which is chicken, duck, goose? No more than frog legs or knut. He is a national bond. In his stately presence there are no Northerners, no Southerners, no Democrats, no Republicans, not even Populists or Protectionists, but only Americans. All party passion and prejudice die out in sight of one his "long Legs wherewith he can run as fast as a Dog" or of one of his wings with which he can "fly as fast as a Goose." Welcome Thanksgiving! All hail, great bird!

SIGNS OF WEAKENING

The Local Opinion on the Lehigh Strike.

RAILROADERS WAIVER!

Some Who Had Great Faith in the Men on the Main Line Now Concede That the Indications Are Against Success for the Strikers.

It is generally believed in this vicinity that the Lehigh Valley Railroad strike is on the decline, and that the beginning of next week will find the main line in full operation again. This opinion is based more upon local observations than upon the dispatches from the places affected by the strike, and they are such that but very few people here now believe that the employees can win the strike, or that they can prolong it much longer.

The past twenty-four hours has caused a great change of opinion and even some of the railroaders who have heretofore placed great faith in the determination of the men on the main line now say that they fear the cause is lost.

All passenger trains in this section, with the exception of the mail train due here at 2:25 p.m., are now running as they were before the strike and the exceptional train is arriving here nearer its schedule time every succeeding day, showing that the railway company is improving the handling of the main line traffic every twenty-four hours.

The freight traffic also shows much improvement and several long trains are passing east and west every day. The only complaint about non-arriving freight comes from the brewing company. Two car loads of machinery shipped from Chicago before the strike are in a blockade somewhere between Wilkes-Barre and Sayre.

The company which keeps up the town supply of dressed meats reports that it is receiving its cars regularly over the Lehigh Valley road, which is another indication that the railroad company has a large number of new hands at work and has succeeded in raising the blockade to some extent.

The coal traffic also indicates that there is a big gap in the main line blockade. One of the collieries at Park Place, the Centralia collieries and the Packers No. 3 and 5, are now working steady, and in response to inquiries to-day the officials stated that they are being kept supplied with empty cars and expect to work every day hereafter. The other Packer collieries may start up again early next week.

To Use a Plow.

After the fall of snow last week the Schuylkill Traction Company sent a force of men to town to shovel the snow from the tracks. Supervisor Lewislyn interfered and said that he would compel the company to cart away the snow as it was shoveled. The workmen withdrew and as the snow soon melted the matter dropped. The company has now attached a snow plow to one of its "dinkies" and will use it hereafter when there is a fall of snow instead of putting on a force of men with shovels.

Branches Being Organized at Mt. Carmel and Shamokin.

George Harris, who is engaged in re-organizing the Miners' and Laborers' Amalgamated Association, returned from Mt. Carmel yesterday. He says a most enthusiastic mass meeting was held there on Monday night and between the addresses music was furnished by a brass band which had volunteered its services. Another mass meeting will be held at the same place on Friday night.

On Saturday night the miners and laborers at Shamokin will hold a mass meeting and organize.

Last night the branch at Gilberton met and took in several new members. It now has over fifty names on the roll.

To-morrow night the local branch will hold a meeting in the upper hall of Robbins' opera house and will be addressed by Mr. Harris, who expects a large attendance of those interested.

GIVE FREELY.

A Thanksgiving offering for the Kensington Sufferers.

In accordance with previous announcements, union Thanksgiving services will be held in the Trinity Reformed church to-morrow morning, at 10:30 o'clock. This was decided upon at a ministerial meeting held about three weeks ago, and nearly all the clergymen in the town will take part in the services. A collection will be taken for the relief of the Kensington sufferers and it is hoped the response will be a liberal one.

PERSONAL.

Miss Laura Acker, of West Coal street, is spending several days with Wilkes-Barre friends.

Miss Irene Shane, who suffered for ten weeks from an attack of typhoid fever, has resumed teaching school again.

Tax Collector M. J. Scanlan has sufficiently recovered from his illness to be able to take walks on the streets.

Ex-Postmaster George W. Johnson and Justice Elmer Johnson, of Lost Creek, were among the spectators at Ferguson's theatre last night.

Christ Ferguson, an officer in the U. S. Army and stationed at Fort Russell, near Cheyenne, Wyoming, arrived in town last night and is the guest of his brother, P. J. Ferguson. The visitor left here about twelve years ago and consequently finds a big change in the appearance of the town.

TEACHERS TO BE FURNISHED.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Schaeffer has in mind several important reforms which he hopes to see in the near future. One of these is that each high school shall adopt a course of study that will enable the graduates to enter the freshman class of any respectable college. Only a small percentage of high schools now have such a course, many of them being deficient in mathematics and Greek. Superintendent Schaeffer is anxious to have the teachers' salaries advanced and may advocate an act to provide for the pensioning of teachers who shall have been actively engaged in teaching for 20 years.

A Big Antidote.

Congress and Grant's "The Dazzler" company played a return engagement at Ferguson's theatre last night before a crowded house. Every seat was taken long before the curtain went up. The musical farce was presented in its usual brilliant manner and there was almost a continual roar of laughter while the curtain remained up. The encores were frequent and the audience seemed unable to see enough of the specialties. A number of Knights of Pythias were in the audience to welcome Mason and Balston, who are members of the Order.

A Social.

This evening Miss Mamma Williams will give a unique social at her residence, on West Oak street, to which the public is cordially invited. The proceeds will be donated to the paragon fund of the Presbyterian church. Rev. Maxwell Morrison, the new pastor of the church, will be in attendance and hold a reception.
