The following remarkable event in a lady's life will interest the reader: For a long time that a rerrille pain at my heart, which fortered aiment incessantly. I had no appetite and could not sless. I would be essipated to sit up in bed and belieft gas from my store such until I thought every militude would be made to sit up in bed and belieft gas from my store such until I thought every militude would be my last. There was a feeling of oppression about my beart, and I was afraid to draw a full breath. I couldn't sweep a room without sitting down and resting; but, then food, by the help of New Heart Cure all that is past and I feel like another woman. Refore using the New Heart Cure I had taken different so-called renedles and been treated by doctors without any benefit until I was both discouraged and disgressed. My husdam bouth discouraged and disgressed. My husdam bounds me a bottle of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and am happy to say I never regretise, it, as I now have a splendid appetite and seep well. I weighted 125 pounds when I begin taking the remedy, and now I weight the forth my case has been truly marrelous. It far surpasses any other medicine have ever taken or any benefit I ever received from physicians."—Mrs. Harry Sing. Portsville, Pa. Crober 12, 182.

A THANKSGIVING SACRILEGE.

The Pride of the Feast In Strange Dregs

ing-Turkey In Greece. The following experience of these who in Greece tried to have "a real old fashioned New England Thanksgiving dinner" is very cleverly told in The Christian Union "We sit and walt. Surely the tur ey is not done. We have come too soon. Sudden by there is a chopping sound from the mys-terious sersen that hides the secret doing of cook and carver. What if they are cutting it up? eried one, 'Oh. I feel a though a friend were being guillotined, though a friend were being guillotined,' eries another. 'The suspense is unbearahie. Can no one put a stor to it?' seks a third, 'We ordered a whole bird, and of course it will come,' inters the calm dignity at the head of the able. The chopping sound ceases. There is another ominous purse, and then the footateps of the waiter is heard. 'I avert my head,' says the poet.
'I have not the courage to look.'
"The rest do look as the smiling waiter draws nour and places before the astonished dignity who presides a platter is which rests the mutilated remains of nicely browned creature, calmly reposin on chopped lettuce and olive oil Wh had been the original form of the anim only a zoologist could have determined The graef cleaver had severed it into 15 o 20 pieces of equal size, regardless of bons or muscle. Even the dignity at the head of the table was startled. 'Well, we have seen a good many restorations, but I think that is beyond the power of the restora-tionist,' he mutters. So the sentiment of carving the Thanksgiving turkey vanishs into thin air. The 'whole turkey' was there, but, also they had not understood that we wanted the turkey whole?"

"Give Thanks Unto the Lord,"

Look abroad and see this great country For these many years whose hand has turned back from our land the violence of plagues which have swept with their train of terrors through other countries? Who Sicilian or Russian grainfields? Who hath raised up our national enterprise to lead back wilderness and plant town after town, till every gleam of the wave on the lakes is answered by the gleam of city towers and the roar of the ocean at one side of the har-bor has been answered by the din of a great metropolis at the other?

Something higher than the American plow cultivated the harvests. Something sharper than the American ax hewed down the forests. Something heavier than the American hammer built the cities. He who walked Gennesareth hath traversed our lakes. He who helped Simon Peter with his net bath blessed our fisheries. He who plucked golden ears of corn, rubbin them in his hands, bath helped gather our harvests. He who tarried at Bethany hath set all around about us the villages. Not a ship's keel but he helped to launch it; not a wheel's tire but he helped to forge it, or a bouquet's blossom but he helped grow it, or a robin's wing but he tinged it.

If as you sit at your sumptions repusts one be absent from you and absent from earth whose voice was most gleesome last Thanksgiving, do not let your grief overpower your gratitude, but after all are seated at the table and merry voices are hushed bow your heads for a blessing and

Are we poor? We might be beggars. Are We might be lepers. Are we lepers? Our sickness might be unto death. Is it unto death? We have yet a heaven beyond. For all let us give thanks-thanks and even in illness there is much reason and occasion to be found for a grateful heart. Has trouble come to us now? It might be worse. Are we alone? There is poorer company than ourselves to be had. Have we lost our dearest and best? They, at any rate, are not here to suffer. Has the year dealt crushing blows in business? It has not taken away also our power and will to work. Have we work? Then for that and the rest we give thanks again. Give thanks that we live and breathe and have our being in this world of wonder and light and beauty, for poor and sick and sad though we may be, though

NEW ENGLAND'S DAY.

WHERE THANKSGIVING TRADITIONS ARE STILL OBSERVED.

The Memory of a Happy Day Perpetuated In the Spirit of Old Colonial Times, Home Comings and Feasting Celebrate the Festival-The Bill of Fare.

Thanksgiving day! What memories are Thanksgiving day! What memories are conjured up by the stoople moning of this day of festivity! It is an offspring of early New England, and it is not New England's own day of rejoicing, manisated under conditions which we, in our days of self-seeking and of plenteons case, rarely attempt to pause and contemplate.

The history of Thanksgiving day reaches back to the parise calonial days, when a back to the carrier calonial days, when a back to the earlier colonial days, when a little band of strong heartest carned men and women who had ventured across the sens in search of freedom of life and libert of conscience were knowing the suffering which is so generally a part of pioneer life. Their bearts were filled with a new hope and thrilling with a deep joy, and their hands were steadfastly set to the plow of courageous advancement.

Though they were suffering from the rig ors of a new clime, with insufficient mean of protection from its severity, even though they were suffering from severe privations.

ret they were not cast down nor discour They were largely cut off from commun they were largely on on from communication with all the civilized world, they had the deep, wide, restlessly pulsating sea hemming them in on one side, and the wide, pittless wilderness encompassed them on the other, and they were surrounded by on the other, and they were surramated by Savages of whom they stood in unceasing dread and fear. Added to all these was the appalling fact that their provisions had run low and their expected ships of reliaf had failed to appear.

Yet, with starvation staring them in the face, their courage was undaunted. They had taken their lives in their hands and had come forth with stern heroic resolution. They were going to establish new homes in a new land, and in those bottee there should be freedom. They were de-termined to succeed, and their prayers for succor were the prayers of faith, not of de-

One happy day the word came to the devoted company that the relief ships were in the offing. Their faith had not failed them nor led them astray. Relief had come. From the fullness of their grateful, devoted hearts they gave such thanks as verflowing trusting heartscan give.

Those Paritan ancesters of ours had a goodly fashion of acknowledging with un-limited grace of heart the good gifts that came to them. They were ready and will-ing to suffer and die, if need were, for conscience's sake, and when any of the suc cesses or good things for which they longed and toiled came to them they gave thanks with the humble devotion of gratitude of those who received it as a gift and not as a

The festival which was so long ago inau-gurated still survives. Each year the presi-dent of the United States sets apart a day for thanksgiving. In New England somewhat of the earlier spirit is attached to its celebration, and no other feast day takes its place there. It is the day of the family home guthering. Men and women leave their professional, social and worklily cares and interests and go back to their homes and friends and the days of their childhood. (Children visit the scenes and green interests) Children visit the scenes and are initiated into the youthful recollections, pastimes and associations of their ancestors. Even the bill of fare is traditional. The united its own home rooftree, to tables loaded down with the same viands.

The turkey is sacred to the day, and the accompanying vegetables, fruits, ples and puddings are also traditional. It is not essential to have soup, but if one does, syster soup is the kind to be served. The turkey is a matter of course; chicken pie is usual part of the regular menu; enableary sauce is as generally used atmost to the turkey itself, and mince and pumps in pressing are on every bill of fare. To these are fre-quently added plum pudding, rice panding or the old fashioned cracker pudding, and many if not most people add not only ap-ples and chestnuss and bickory nuts, but raisins, grapes and other nuts, not always nor altogether of home growth.

Thanksgiving day is one of especial enjoyment, looked forward to with keen anticipation, enjoyed with pleasant participation and enjoyed in retrospection. But with these pleasant home unfiling qualities and remembrances the memories of the first appointed and observed. Thanksgiving should be bleaded and held most sucred in all our thoughts, for such memories should incide in us the desire and embravor. all our thoughts, for such memories should incite in us the desire and endeavor to make our lives worthy of the noble, earnest, consecrated lives of our New Eng-land ancestors, the real fathers of our country, who baptized with their loyalty to truth, their devetton to principle, their heroism, their deathless hope and no less deathless faith the new country to which they came, and which they have left to us, a heritage of such value as no pen can nor a heritage of such value as no pen can por

May the sacred influence of their lives still reach down to bless us abow into bigger freedom and truer liberty. May we grow into truer ways of hearthess, unself-ishness, simplicity, sincerity and kindness, which shall make us worthy descendents of those heroic forefathers of ours who have bequeathed to us "the freest country in the world."-New York Observer.

The President's Turkey.

The binnest and bestrurkeys in the wor are raised in southern Rhode Island in seastern Connecticut, particularly in No Stonington. In this region were develop the splendid "bronze" turkers, which ha a peculiar fuscious game flavor and some times weigh 40 pounds. The meethum size ones are adjudged to be the best. The flesh is tenderer and the flavor mor piquant. Sometimes the president's bir is procured in North Stonington and some times in Westerly. It is always the choic est turkey raised in southern New Eng-land. For a number of years Judge Wil-liam H. Hilliard of North Stonington prodroed the bird that graced the White House table at Thanksgiving, and he is usually called upon to help select the pres-ident's fowl,—New York Sun.
