THE SUNDAY SERVICES

What the Reporters Heard at the Church.

ANNIVERSARY PROGRAM.

The Young People of the Methodist Church, Celebrated the Rebuilding of the Edifice With Melodious Songs of Praise and Thanksgiving—Other Services.

OLD and disagreeable as the weather was yesterday a large number of people flocked to the Methodist Episcopal church, on East Oak street, yesterday morning to attend the special services held in commemoration of the rebuilding of the church after the great fire in November, 1882.

In the evening there were also special services—a young people's meeting under the direction of Mr. T. R. Edwards—in commemoration of the same event. Rev. William McCullough, D. D., of Philadelphia, preached an eloquent sermon in the morning.

The evening services were opened by the singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name" by the congregation, and Rev. William Zwick, the pastor, led in a recital of the Lord's prayer. Miss Libbie Balbridge gave a touching, sacred recitation entitled "The Night Cometh," and seven little girls rendered "The Cold Water Cross" very sweetly. Rev. William McCullough followed with a three-minute address on "Thanksgiving," after which the choir rendered "Immortal Praise," an anthem, with profound effect.

A corset solo, "Sweet By and By," was excellently rendered by Miss S. Reddick, and James Hough recited "Lend a Hand" with considerable effect. A soprano solo, "He Wipes the Tears From Every Eye," by Miss Jennie Bevan, was a splendid rendition. Rev. Pawick made a brief but very interesting address on "The Power of Song," after which an instrumental duet, "He Shall Feed His Flock," was very pleasingly rendered by Messrs. Reddick and Hittling. "Consider the Lilies," a soprano solo by Miss Jennie Christian, had an impressive effect upon the congregation and a recitation, "The Changed Cross," by Miss Jennie Guter, was also very impressive. J. J. Price's, "The Cross of Christ," was a fine tenor rendition. The choir rendered a selection, "Surveying the Cross," and the dismissal number, "Praise the Lord," both of which showed that the choir is composed of excellent voices and the members are in the hands of a good director.

The pretty little chapel of the Protestant Episcopal church, on East Oak street, was crowded last evening to listen to a special sermon by the pastor, Rev. O. H. Bridgman, to the members of the Maj. Jennings Council, No. 287, Jr. O. U. A. M. About eighty members of the Council were present, in accordance with proclamations issued by the National and State Conventions. It is an annual custom of the order to attend divine worship the first Sunday following Thanksgiving Day. Rev. Bridgman's sermon was attentively listened to, which proved of special interest to the members of the order.

As a prelude to his sermon, the pastor dwelt at some length upon the relation of the Episcopal church of this country to that of the state church of England, proving conclusively that they are two distinct bodies so far as government is concerned. He then very ably reviewed the principles and objects of the J. O. U. A. M., dwelling especially upon that portion favoring the reading of the Bible in the public schools. He closed his remarks by a glowing tribute to the work already accomplished and to be accomplished by the order, wishing them much success in the noble work they have undertaken. Rev. Bridgman is well thought of by the members of All Saints' church, and his discourse last evening was favorably commented upon by the members of the order present.

There was a good attendance at the Trinity Reformed church, on West Lloyd street, last evening to hear the pastor, Rev. Robert O'Boyle, preach the first of his new series of popular sermons. The text was taken from St. John VIII: 12—"I am the light of the world." The subject of the sermon was "The Great Search Light" and the discourse was a very interesting one. Rev. O'Boyle opened with a description of the manufacturers building at the World's Fair at Chicago, which led him to a description of the arrangement, size, method of manufacture and usefulness of the two great search lights which were on the towers of the great building. Several lessons were drawn from the subject of the discourse. One of them was the effect of light. The clergyman said that as he stood beside one of the great lights on the fair grounds he beheld in the powerful rays of the light a statue of Abraham Lincoln, fifteen miles distant. When the light was turned off, all was miserable darkness. Jesus Christ is the great search light of the Christian soul and when the soul is illuminated by that light it is happiness, but when it is shut out, all is darkness and misery.

Miss Clara Boyd, a Philadelphia evangelist, conducted a two-week mission in the Primitive Methodist church, corner of Jardin and Oak streets, yesterday morning, when there was a large attendance. The attendance in the evening was also large.

Rev. Maxwell Morrison, the new pastor of the Presbyterian church, corner White and Oak streets, preached two very interesting sermons yesterday. Rev. Morrison has an excellent delivery and his arguments are backed with a force that is thoroughly convincing. He has already become very popular with the congregation and his connection with the church promises to be a very successful one.

A BOLD BURGLARY!

Evidence of Desperate Work This Time.

SYMPTOMS OF VICTIMS!

Burglars Take Possession of a House and Thoroughly Search Every Nook and Corner Without Disturbing one of the Several Inmates.

MOST during burglary was perpetrated at the residence of Patrick Conville, on West Erie street, at an early hour yesterday morning. The circumstances indicate that the burglars were of a desperate character and they must have chloroformed all the inmates of the house in order that they might do their desecrating work untroubled.

There were six people in the house and not one of them knew that the house had been robbed until they awoke at the usual hour yesterday morning. Then they found closets, trunks, wardrobes and bureaus in a very disordered condition and they plainly saw that they were victims of marauders.

The last of the family, which consists of brothers and sisters, retired at about half past one o'clock, yesterday morning and everything in the house was secure.

The first of the household to awaken was Martin Conville, a lad of 14 years. It was about 7 o'clock when he left his bed and as he attempted to cross the floor he staggered and fell over a rocking chair. The noise aroused the other occupants of the house and all complained of ill symptoms. They felt dizzy and some of them were almost ill enough to vomit. The bed clothing in the several rooms and a strange and sickening odor, Martin was so much affected that he was obliged to leave the house later in the morning while services were in progress.

The symptoms of the family were sufficient to warrant the presumption that the burglars had made use of chloroform. The witnesses say the house could not have been given such a thorough overhauling without awakening somebody if a drug was not used.

The burglars entered the house through a back kitchen window after cutting out a pane of glass and releasing the curtain blinds. Every considerable building piece in every room of the house showed traces of the visit, and indeed the traces lead some to believe that the burglars now something of the occupants' habits.

In the house was a chest having three locks. The burglars opened all with keys taken from the clothing of John Conville and secured over sixty dollars in cash. They also took a silver watch belonging to Patrick Conville and valued as a family memento. Two other silver watches of minor value which had been taken from the bed room were found on a table in the dining room. Four empty pocketbooks were found at the bottom of the staircase leading from the dining room to the upper floor.

All the closets and other places where clothing was kept were thoroughly ransacked and the clothing scattered upon the floors. Two empty revolvers which had been placed upon a chair close to one of the beds were found on a chair at the other end of the room, covered by a vest.

A tin box of a make similar to ordinary cash boxes was found forced open, but the burglars were disappointed to learn that it contained only old nails and other trash.

The finding of the two silver watches on the dining room table is accepted as evidence that the burglars left the house in a hurry.

A woman residing in a neighboring house says that at an early hour yesterday morning she heard some men talking on the street in a half undertone and one of them said, "Never mind them, let 'em go."

A chest which had evidently been used in the burglary was found in the slumby of the Dilman property next to the Conville property. The burglars had also forced an entrance to the slumby, but recovered nothing.

The burglars evidently took their time and did not overlook any possible place of concealment. Miss Conville left a clock in the front room on the first floor when she retired Saturday night. She left in one of the pockets 55 cents in change and a gold ring. In the morning the clock was found on the floor. The money had disappeared, but the ring was still there. On the inside of the ring was engraved a name, and the burglars took no taking any chances. They took no clothing or anything else by which they could be traced, save the one silver watch. The amount of cash they secured was $75.19.
