The Senate Calls for Information on the Subject.

HILL OPPOSES THE PRESIDENT.

The New York Senator Can See, No Reason for Withholding the Pacts from Congress-Senator Sherman Takes the Same Position on the Subject,

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7 .-- In the senate yes-WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—In the senate greaterday Mr. Voorbees introduced a bill declaring a pension a vested right, regulating suspension of pensions, and granting appeals to the supreme court of the District of Columbia; also a bill defining sundry crimes against the United States in the administration of pension laws. Both bills were referred to the pension committee.

The resolution offered on Tuesday by Mr. Hoar, requesting the president, so far as in his opinion is not inconsistent with the public interest, to communicate to the senate copies of all instructions given to any representative or any naval officer of the United States of the the United States since March 4, 1881, in regard to the preservation of public order in Hawaii or the protection of the lives or property of American citizens, or the recognition or support of any government, was laid before the menate by the vice president.

Mr. Mills (Tex.) appeared the resolution. It called for information, but meanwhile its author proceeded to "shell the woods" before he got that information, and charged the president with mediatating an act of war. He (Mills) denied that statement. ment. The president's action in the mat-ter had been strictly confined within the limits of executive authority.

Mr. Vilas moved that the resolution be

Mr Hill (New York) said he did not propose to cross the Ifawaiian bridge till be reached it. He had no reflections to cast upon the preceeding or the present admin-istration and no unkind word to say in reference to the provious or present min-ister to Hawaii. There was a disputed state of facts as to what actually took place when the government of Rawaii was overthrown, and it might be that congress in its whelom should see lit to send a commission to that country to investigate and report as the facts.

It had been said, continued Mr. Hill, that instructions had been given—he did not say so, however, and he hoped it was not true—from which it was inferred that force might be used to restore the precongress, to use the army or may to restore the previously existing condition of affairs, even consecting that the government had been planted by fraud or even by force. There were three departments of the government, and the executive department was but one of them.

Congress wanted information because it was entitled to it. Under the resoluformation if he desired. Mr. Hill could imagine no good reason why it should be withheld from the senate for a single moment after the resolution should reach the White House. For himself, Mr. Hill declared, he could see no reason for the in-sertion of the words "so far as in his

Wreck of the Ship Jason Off Massachusetts' Coast.

TWENTY-FOUR OF THE CREW LOST.

The Survivor a Boy of Nineteen, Who Was Unconscious When Picked Up by the Life Savers-The Vessel and Cargo

PROVINCETOWN, MIGH., Duc. 7: - The PROVINCETOWN, Mass, Dec. 7,—The British ship Jason, Captain Modillan, Calcutta for Boston, went ashore Tuesday night off Eastham, and was broken to pieces in the terrife gale. Of the crew of twenty-five only one toy compad, he being washed ashore with a spiratered spar, to which chang the remnants of a sail. The life savers, who had been watching for signs from the wreck all night, seized the now unconscious boy and hurried him to the liftle shanty which housed the crew. They worked over him for half the crew. They worked over him for half an hour, and then he opened his eyes slowly and spoke. He told this simple story:

The British ship Jason was a ghastly wreck. Why he was not just too was the greatest surprise. He only knew that he was in the rigging with what remained of the twenty are men who manned the ship after she struck. Then the spars came crashing down and the men went with them. them, and he was in the water. He held on for life and that was all. He knew no more until he found himself in the line savers! but. The men wrapped him in warm blankets and put him into a cot. They dosed him with braudy, and he stept. And while he stept the crews of the life boats ran up and down the beach and dashed into the surfafter every piece of wrecking and habled it high up on the beach and looked for more clinging unfortunates. But no more came.

Then the first gray strenks of dawn ap-Figure 1. The first gray streams of dawn appeared, and with them the storm, abated. Slowly daylight approached and then, not two hundred yards from the bench where the little group bad spent a fearful night, the broken hull of a mighty ship was seen. The great seas cosmed high over ser and whirled about the broken strips of her spars. The life savers brought their powerful glasses to bear upon the rem nants of the wreek. They were looking for men clinging to the battered half. Every inch of what remained above water was scrutinized a dozen times by a dozen pairs of eyes. But they all gave it up. Not a human bedy was visible. Like the good ship lason, they had given up the struggle in the sact off Cape Cod. Twenty-four souls had found their graves on those

And the hospitable ship in which they made their home across the wide expanse of the Indian and Atlantic ocean was now their tomb. In an hour or two, as the men watched, the great hull parted, and out from the dark interior of her hold our from the tark interior of her hald great bales of jute poured and dotted the ocean. It usine in on top of the still mountanions sees and washed up on the beach by the side of the broken spars. It was while he was lying weak and belpless upon the life savers not that the boy, who gave his name as Somuel Evans, kisage as it, and his home as Greeneek, Scotland, told his story to a reporter of the Associated Press. He said: "The ship Jason, Captain McMillan, suited from Calcutta in February fast for Beston with a cargo of jute. When but a few days but we encountered a torride cy-clone and lost our masts and also our first officer. Mr. Walker. We put in at the late of France and repaired. We had fine weather after leaving there marry the en-tire passage. On Tue-day morning it he gar to snow, with the wind strong from absoutheast. It was very thick, and we could not see more than three shiplemeths thend. We run under one three lower topsails at a p m. It clear up a limbs, and we saw breakers off the poet bow, Wa could not tack ship, so we harded close, with all the sail the spars would stand, in hopes to crowd her by the cape.

"The gale increment as night came an, but still hoping to weather the cape we continued to crowd on sail. At 7.15 she struck the bouch with a crush and the main and missing mosts went over the side and the skip broke in two amousting About all of the crew, including myself went into the mizzen rigging when a struck. When the most went went went with it. I knew no more until I bound myself in the sands and was being pulled out of the sart.

"Of all my shipmates, not one is teft.

"Of their names I know has few. They were mostly trish and Norwegians. The captain's name was McMillan, and the mate's name was Walker. Both, I hellow, he longed in timenest. The second mate, of the second mate, of the second mate, longed in Greeneck. The second mate, Gelbruithe, and Beatswaft, Black were from Seikirk.
