cemed to him that he had just returned from the grave and this curious sensation was due to a miraculous escape he had from a plunge into eternity during the afternoon. Raudenbush is employed in the breaker

f the Turkey Run colliery and it is his duty to keep the bars of the dump thute clear.

Yesterday afternoon, just as a big oad of coal was dumped into the chute, the young man lost his footing and went sliding down over the bars and along he chute with the debris.

The trip seemed a death journey for Raudenbush, as he was being forced down by the running coal to the lower end of the chute, where the incessantly working rollers would crunch his body into mince meat. He realized this and yelled lustly for help. His calls were heard none too soon, for he was but a hort distance from the rollers when a ouple of the employes succeeded in stay-
