LONDON'S LATEST BUTCHERY. A Septuagenarian Murdered and His Body Hid in a Trunk. LONDON, March 19.—This city has for a comparatively long time been exempt from murder, but yesterday a sensation was caused by the discovery of a crime that in its details somewhat resembles the notorious Gouffe murder that occurred some time ago in Paris. The scene of this latest London horror was in Grafton street, in the Soho district, which is infested with foreigners of the lowest class.

An American woman named Marie Hermann, who is well known to the police as a night prowler, recently rented a small room in one of the Grafton street houses. She, in company with an elderly man, was seen to enter the room. A woman named Hutchins, who lodged with the Hermann woman, found blood stains on a sink, and, suspecting something was wrong, informed the police.

The police forced open a trunk found in the woman's room and in it was the body of the missing man. His head had been battered, evidently with some blunt instrument. The body presented a frightful appearance, and the clothing in which it was attired was drenched with blood. The Hermann woman was at once taken into custody on a charge of wilful murder.

The body has been recognized as that of a well-to-do ex-journalist named Stevens. He was 75 years old. It is believed that the Hermann woman had an accomplice in committing the murder, as Stevens was a muscular man. The prisoner is 43 years old.
