Justice May has received a letter from the father of Joe Gordon, the runaway boy who was returned to his Philadelphia home last Saturday, saying that the lad received home safely and was content.

This lad took his way from Mahanoy to Frankville via Reading and Pottsville, about three weeks ago, and walked to Shoemaker's where he secured employment in a breaker. Though but 13 years old he had the coolness and effrontery of an old timer on the road.

When asked by a HERALD reporter about his adventures, he gazed for an instant at the reporter, lit a cigarette, took a couple of whiffs and began his story which was to the effect that he ran away from a stevedore, N. Y., because "the boy did not seem to be as bad as he was advertised, and positively disclaimed being the reader of dime novels. The letter from his father, who is a commercial traveler, thanked Squire May and Oliver Watt for the kind treatment to his wayward boy, and among other things requested the "quire to get a ring the lad had left with a man named Long, at Shoemaker's. "It's only a trifle," the letter ended, "but the only present Joe has from his dead mother."

The clap that took a bottle of medicine and coughed no more, used Dr. Coxe's Wild Cherry and Seneka. It cured him.

Our Growing Navy.

PHILADELPHIA, March 21.—There are three government ships now undergoing the finishing process at Cramp's shipyard, which the company hope to turn over to the navy department by the 1st of October.

These are the battleships Indiana and Massachusetts and the fast protected cruiser Minneapolis, the latter being a sister ship of the peerless Columbia.

Almost everybody connected with the Armory at that the Massachusetts will prove a world beater, and that she will exceed the Columbia's unprecedented record of 238.10 knots by more than a knot. The big battleships Iowa and Brooklyn will not be launched until late in the fall. When these are completed the firm will have no more government work in its yard.

He Fell Among Borrowers.

According to the Sheriff (Or.) Star, there is a schoolmaster in that state who has had enough of boarding with people who treat him as "one of the family." He was boarding around and in the course of his peregrinations arrived at a house where there were several grown up sons and daughters. He was taken at once into intimate fellowship.

On the second morning William, one of the boys, came into the new boarder's room and borrowed his toothbrush. The schoolmaster demurred and went so far as to enter into particulars about microbes and malarial infection, but William took the brush.

"I ain't afraid to use it after you if you ain't after me," he said.

The next evening Samuel, another son, borrowed the master's best white shirt to wear to a dance, and Maria, one of the daughters, while trying to extract some of his perfume, spilled the greater part of it upon her clothes.

So matters went on with increasing friendliness, and when the teacher took his leave the mother was wearing a pair of his socks, the girls had begged his tooth powder, and the remainder of his perfumery, the old man had worn out his slatter hunting dog, and the boys had on two of his white shirts, two pairs of his socks, a vest and a hat.

One of the girls had made love to the boarder's $4 silk umbrella, but though the fact is not stated we are given to understand that her suit was unsuccessful.

WAYLAI'D BY RUFFIANS.

Jersey Experience of a Young Actress in Jersey City.

JERSEY CITY, March 21.—Just as the curtain falls on the mysterious attack on May Barrowell in this city, through that young woman leaving the place, comes news of another murderous assault of a similar character. This time the victim is a young actress, and the police vary the usual story by capturing the offenders. Word was sent to police headquarters that a woman was being murdered in a lot at the corner of York and Hudson streets. Officers were dispatched to the place, and in an unoccupied house, standing on the stoop, they saw a woman struggling to free herself from the grasp of a number of men. She was screaming and crying for help.

Three men succeeded in making their escape over a side fence, but the others, four in all, were put under arrest. The woman was Adeline Waters, a young actress playing with the McKee Rankin company. Her clothing was torn almost from her back, and she showed signs of having been frightfully abused. The men were arraigned before Justice O'Donnell, who held them for trial. The prisoners gave their names as Henry Fagan, John Connolly, Michael Klugenberg and William Gurr.

Miss Waters lies at the city hospital in a critical state from the shock, and it is feared she cannot recover. When the McKee Rankin combination was playing a week ago she was taken sick in the railroad station, and had to be removed to Taylor's hotel, where she has since been under the care of Dr. J. J. Nivis. She had been taking morphine to allay her pains, and it is supposed that while delirious she left the hotel without the knowledge of the doctor, wandered away and fell into the hands of the men who assaulted her.

An Educational Controversy.

NEW HAVEN, March 21.—Papers were served on Dr. Jay Seaver, physical director of Yale university, and John C. Keblahan, a local importer of Turkish goods, in a suit brought by the president and fellows of Harvard college to recover $100 on a bond of $400 given by Dr. Seaver and Keblahan as a guarantee that the tuition and other bills of Sarkis Keblahan while a student at Harvard would be paid.

The defense will charge the authorities at Harvard with having turned young Keblahan from Yale by offering him flatteringly inducements which were never realized. Furthermore, the claim will be made that the Harvard authorities, in a desire to oust Yale in the race for numerical supremacy, have indulged in this practice to rob Yale of her under graduates.

Porterhouse and Tenderloin.

A carcass of beef is cut in 19 pieces. All the pieces and the names are in the dictionary. Look at the list, and you will find the names "porterhouse" and "tenderloin" two names that the inexperienced buyer has always on his lips.

The porterhouse is a delicious and a snare in 69 cases out of 100. The tenderloin is the thick part of the sirloin after a few round bone steaks have been cut off and is called the filet de beef. It makes a choice piece for roasting, but if not sold in a lump is cut into sirloin steaks of three grades. The first and second grades are technically "hip sirloin steak" and "flat bone sirloin steak." These are the tenderloin steaks that the young housewife pays extra for. There are not over six of each kind in one carcass, so the chances are that she pays her good money for a third cut, or "round bone" sirloin, which is itself a capital steak.

Porterhouse steaks are cut from the small end sirloin steak, and one carcass contains but a few of them. Ingenious butchers understand the knack of stuffing the small end sirloin so as to include other portions of the beef, thus enabling them to sell both at porterhouse prices.

Good beef has a juicy or sappy appearance, with a fine, smooth grain, which is easily noticed. The fat, both outside and through the muscles, presents a clear, straw colored appearance. The flesh should be cherry red. When meat rises quickly after being pressed, it may be considered prime. When the dent made by pressing rises slowly or not at all, depend upon it the beef is poor.—Washington Post.

Relics of Charles I.

There are several relics still extant of the trial and execution of Charles I. Sir R. Palgrave, the learned clerk of the house of commons, has been able to specify the exact spot occupied by the king during his trial in Westminster hall. The chair on which he sat is in the boardroom of the hospital at Moreton on the Marsh, Gloucestershire. The hat of the president of the court, Bradshaw, who remained covered throughout the trial, is in the Ashmolean museum at Oxford. The footstool on which the king knelt, or more probably supported himself when he laid his head on the block, lying down prone, is with an escutcheon and other relics of Charles I. in possession of Mr. Martin Edmunds, Walmers, Kent, and the room where the death warrant was signed is a little compartment off the members' cloakroom in the house of commons and is commonly known as Cromwell's chapel.—Westminster Gazette.

A Cat Appeals to a Dentist.

A correspondent of the Philadelphia Call writes: I have a friend, a dentist, who is the owner of a kitty. This animal is very observant and frequently sits near the chair watching the doctor operate on patients.

For several days it was noticed that pussy had not taken her food as quickly as usual, and she frequently yowled in apparent distress, but no attention was paid to it.

One morning after a patient had left the chair pussy jumped into the place he had occupied, and raising her head gave a pitiful cry and then opened her mouth. The doctor looked and found the gum badly ulcerated from a defective tooth. He drew the incher out, and after having her gum dressed the cat jumped down and expressed her thanks by purring in a contented manner.

The Last Was First.

Teacher—To new pupil—What is your last name?
New Pupil—Tommy.

Teacher—What is your full name?
New Pupil—Tommy Jones.

Teacher—Then Jones is your last name?
Tommy—No, it isn't. When I was born, my name was Jones, and they didn't give me the other name for a month afterward.

The Difference.

A good story was told at Middleboro by the Rev. Bryan Dale. He said that at the meeting on the previous day an old Yorkshire woman had defined the difference between the sects thus: "Wesleyans drag 'em out of the gutter, Baptists wash 'em, and Independents starch 'em!"—Exchange.

A MICROBE PROOF BUILDING.

The Wonderful Invention That Japan Has Given to the World.

A new kind of dwelling house has been invented. It is remarkable in many ways, being suitable for any climate, whether tropical or arctic, air and water tight and as near disease proof as any building can be made.

It is warranted microbe proof, and should any stray disease producing germ through any accident or oversight find its way within the forbidden precincts the conditions it finds there will be so obnoxious to its taste and feelings that it will immediately die of despair. The new kind of building is a Japanese invention. Dr. W. van der Hayden of Yokohama is its originator and builder. He has constructed one for his own use, and has lived in it for over a year, testing its good qualities before publishing to the world any of its particulars. The tests applied have been satisfactory in their results that the world is now informed of them.

Glass is the chief article of construction in the new building. Its walls are constructed of a series of glass boxes filled with a solution of alum. These boxes are formed of two panes of glass each four-tenths of an inch in thickness. The glass is fixed in iron frames screwed together. The whole is so constructed that the building will resist the influence of heat, cold, shocks and earthquakes. Between the joints of the iron frame work felt is inserted, and the space covered with boards. The roof is flat and is supported by cast iron pillars. It, too, is glass, with strips of rubber covering the joints. Over the glass is spread a thin layer of ashes, and upon this is placed a light wooden frame, which is covered with cement to protect the interior from the radiation of heat. The building has outer and inner walls, with a space between affording air passages to neutralize all atmospheric influences without.

No doors or windows appear in the building proper. The superstructure is placed on a foundation of brick, the walls of which inclose a sort of basement, and it is through this basement that ingress and egress is obtained. The building is heated and ventilated on the most scientific principles. Pure air is secured from the upper atmosphere and conveyed to the interior of the building through pipes after it has been screened through fine wire netting and filtered through cotton batting so as to deprive it of any microbes or other disease germs it might contain. After being used it escapes from the house through valves fixed in the walls and ceilings for that purpose. The heat is also brought to the house from the outside through pipes running to open flues in the rooms, and as it passes away through these a draft is created which assists in ventilating the rooms. The whole limits of the building are made of zinc as a wound dressing of Heter—Chicago Post.

IN SENATE AND HOUSE.

The Tariff Bill Fairly Launched in the Upper House.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The tariff bill was yesterday fairly launched on its way in the senate. Mr. Voorhees, the chairman of the finance committee, reporting it to the senate and giving notice that on April 2 he would move to take it up for consideration. The rest of the day was taken up by Senator George, of Mississippi, in a discussion of the legal aspects of the matter to the president. Several unimportant bills were passed in the afternoon, and after a brief executive session the senate adjourned.

The sundry civil appropriation bill was passed by the house without division. The amendment to the appropriation for the general land office amending the provision to the act of 1891 repealing the timber culture and pre-emption acts, which was adopted in the committee at the suggestion of Mr. Holman, and which was bitterly opposed by the western members, was defeated in the house. The clauses which sought to require an accounting by the disbursing officers of soldiers' homes to the treasury department and annual reports by the board to the secretary of war fell under Mr. Black's point of order.

The bill, as passed, carries $217,000 more than it did as reported from the committee on appropriations. The four appropriation bills passed by the house (District of Columbia, pension, fortification and sundry civil) carry a net reduction of $24,844,955 as compared with the same bills for the current fiscal year. After the disposal of the sundry civil bill the O'Neill-Joy contested election case was called up, but the Republicans raised the question of consideration against it, and then declined to vote. Their purpose is to force the Democrats to produce their own quorum to unseat Republican members. The roll call showed but 154 Democratic members present, and a resolution was adopted reserving leaves of absence, after which the house adjourned over until tomorrow.
