A REPENTANT ORATOR

Mr. Breckinridge Under the Fire of Cross-Examination.

FEELS REMORSE FOR HIS FOLLY.

"There Is but One Punishment I Have Not Deserved, and That Is to Marry the Weman Who Was Concerned with Me in the Act."

Washington, April 8.—Great expecta-tions have been focussed upon the cross-examination of Colonel W. C. P. Breckinridge by ex-Congressman Jere M. Wilson, particularly here in Washington, where the abilities of both men are appreciated. The expectations began to be realized after the noon recess yesterday when the colonel was delivered over into the hands of his opponents. He had continued his story of the intrigue with Madeline Pollard through the morning, entering many and reitered denials of various statements made by her, and relating his own versio of the interviews with the Washington chief of police, and of the correspondence between himself and the plaintiff.

He had been testifying for nearly two court days when his direct testimony was finished, and although Mr. Wilson plied him with questions all the afternoon, the cross-examination seemed to have been but just begun. It had been expected that the colonel would be requested to reconcile his position as a churchman and a moralist with his course of conduct, and this expectation was not a misguided one, for the expectation took that direction for the examination took that direction

The first time that the defendant has shown marked embarrassment during the trial was when an envelope was handed up to him with the request that he read the direction and the contents, which he did with some reluctance, because it was an invitation sent to Miss Pollard in February, 1893, requesting the honor of her presence at a reception to be given in monor of Hon. W. C. P. Breckinridge at the Norwood Institute, and the Norwood the Norwood Institute, and the Norwood institute is the most exclusive and fash-ionable seminary for young ladies in Washington, patronized by the first families of Virginia and the south.

An embarrassing presumption which Judge Wilson clung to throughout was that the same standard of morality should be decreased of morality should be demanded of men as of women. Along this line he questioned the gray haired congressman upon his reading of Byron and Burns, and when the attorneys across the table interposed their objections he justified his course with the reminder that the same questions had been asked his client. To establish the fact of the nis cient. To establish the last of the colonel's familiarity with those two poets Judge Wilson quoted several passages from the "Cotter's Saturday Night" and other publications, which contained a decidedly personal application, and under which the witness could not help but wince. Then he tested his recollection wince. Then he tested his reconcition regarding Louis XIV, Henry VIII, the fourth George and other historical personages noted for their disregard of marital obligations, putting the witness in a position which might have been laughable had it not been so serious, Again the colonel was impaled upon the horns of a dilemma when his inquisitor led him artfully to receat the advice which he alleges he had given Miss Pol-lard, who (according to Breckinridge) had been intimate with Mr. Rhodes, that her only honorable course was to marry him, and made him choose between admitting that the same rule must apply to his case, or that he established a different basis of action under such circumstances for a man and a woman. Between the two afterna-tives Colonel Breckingleige chose the lesser evil, averring that he would tender different advice to a young woman and a young

Mr. Breckinzidge's most embareassing position was when Mr. Wilson plied him remorselessly with questions regarding his ride in a closed carriage with plaintiff. After he had admitted that he was in good health that night, and had no throat trouble, nor chilis (as Mr. Wilson jocosely asked), he was asked whether it was not a rather unusual proceeding to select a closed carriage for a drive on a hot summer evening, to which the colonel replied:
"Oh, no; I don't think it was," and the audience laughed. Of the conversation or the ride he could only remember that Miss ollard did most of the talking "You were not inclined to talk?" Mr. Wilson commented.

"Oh, that depends upon the company 1 un in," replied the colonel. Continuing se described how Miss Pollard had talked of her aspirations to be an authoress, as how he had encouraged her, telling that other women had been authors but that it was a matter of work like any other vocation.

"When you put your arm around her had there been anything of a suggestive

"Well, I cannot answer that definitely Well, I cannot answer that definitely.
There was no particular word or act that I could lay my hand on. There was just something internally that moved me to.
If she had reproved me I could not have said you have encouraged me, and yet I would have been surprised if she had re sented it."

"Did you give her any friendly advice on that occasion?"
"I did not."

"You were a man of 47 and she a girl of

"Then I understand you to say that the ormity of the act cannot be overstated "There is but one punishment which I have not deserved, and that is to marry the woman who was concerned with me

By further questioning Mr. Wilson elic ted the information that the colonel last June and delivered a speech to a woman's scatery in Nashville and been presented with a backet of flowers. He denied that he had said that he had no wife to present them to in his response, and was anxious to explain what he had said, but Mr. Wil-son would not permit.

Finally at the close of the day, having secured the statement that he had written no letters to Madeline Pollard in 1886, Mr. Wilson sprung something very like a trap by dropping into a line of questioning which indicates that he has in reserve tea-timony to show that the member from

DESERTING TILLMAN

The Newberry Rifles Dismissed from the State Militia,

THEIR RESIGNATIONS DECLINED.

The Governor Sends Them a Lecture on Dischedience and Bemands Their Epulpments-He Declares That He Will Enforce the Law-Quiet at Darlington.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April S.—There is no warlike aspect about the capitol city to-day, and everything is peaceful. The guards at the executive mansion have been with drawn, all the local militia are giving up their guns and Governor Tillman himself The worst is over and order now

The governor has had offers of their services from several outside military com-panies, all of which he has declined. The telegraph censorship has not been discon tinued, but the governor himself passe upon all telegrams, rejecting some and changing others. The sensation of the day here was the refusal of the Newberry Rifles to remain stationed at the telegraph offices and supervise the telegrams and their notice to the governor of their resig nation. At a dress parade of the troops stationed here the following letters were rend by Jungs Advocate John Gary Evans: To his excellency B. R. Tillman, governor of South Carolina:

To his excellency B. R. Tillman, governor of South Carolina:

DEAN SIN-I have the henor to inform you that we, the Newberry Rifles, have performed the duties assigned us, that of guarding the state house and telegraph offices. The latter duty being exceedingly distasted to the entire command, and as the company responded to your order to appear here under the belief that they were nested for the purpose of protecting life and property, and not for the purpose of sucretaing a scrattery over the private affairs of the clitters of South Carolina, a duty not only distasteful but, in the judgment of the company, municerstant and calculated duty not only distasterni but, in the judgment of the company, unnecessary and calculated to irritate the people all the more under the present state of affairs, the members of the company, not caring to be subject to such orders in the future, beg leave herewith to tender their resignation, and to say that their arms, etc., are at your command.

3. J. MCCAUGHEY, Capitals.

Captain S. J. McCaughey, Commanding New-

Capian S. J. McCaughey, Commanding Now-berry Riffes:
Sin—Your communication of this date has just been received. Under the laws of South Carolina the governor is clathed with discre-tion and power to call out the militia when-ever in the judgment of the governor it may be necessary, and when so called into service of the state militia shall be subject to the benceesary, and when we called into service of the state millia shall be subject to the same rules and articles of war as the troops of the United States. The artion of your company and your darling to expl to me under these rales is muthay and an insult to the commander-in-chief, who was given his commission by the people. The duty of the soldiers and the millia as soldiers, when called into service, is ulind obscime to orders from their superiors, and not to question them in any degree. You have failed to learn the first lesson and I will make of you and your company an example. Your resignation is not accepted, but you are dismissed from the service of the state so the state as tinworthy to wear its uniform. The arms and other state property in your possession will be delivered to Colonel John thry Watts, assistant adjutant and inspector governly and you can depart to your homes. You do not deserve it, but I will pay your hotelpill, and Irrust that I may never be bettered with any more such bandlors and bailday soldiers.

The reading of the governor's raply to adders. It is a transfer of the governor's reply to McCaughey brought deafening appliance from the 200 troops, who are all supporters of the governor. Their enthusiasm was of the governor. Their enthusiasm was so great that they continued to cheer louldly for "Ben Tillman" aftermarching back into the penitentiary grounds.

There is but little news to be given out from Darlington, as absolutely optimized a startling or even interesting nature has occurred. There is not a more quiet town in the state. The town is still under mar-tial law, and the troops are still there, and they have marched and drilled all over the town, but that is all they have done, The two spies reported to have been found dead in the woods near Timmonsville are supposed to be two of those wounded here in the molec of last Friday. It is not de-nied that the bodies have been found, but no one knows or will tell what has become of them. The supposition is that they are concealed in a large and almost impene tradic swamp about ten miles from Tim-monsville. The people of Darlington real-ize that the troops, with few exceptions, are their friends, and will not harm them. There is, however, the natural feeling of restraint over the fact of being placed un-

The altustion in Charleston is remark ably quiet, but it is that calm that may at any time burst into a storm. It is no exaggeration to say that the people of the state are virtually living on a volcano. It is no secret that there are thousands of is no secret that there are thousands of people all over the eastern section of the state who are piedged and ready to go to Darlington upon the least hint that they are wanted. It is asserted that the governor intends to order a renewal of the hous to house search for contraband liquor in this city, but this is not credited. Should this be done there is very little doubt the cene of war will be transferred from Darlington to Charleston.

The governor declares that he will here-after enforce the dispensary law more rigidly than ever. Said he:

"The blood which has been shed at Dar lington and elsewhere in the enforce of the law was a necessary sacrilege to the molock of whicky, and this insurrection is the last expiring agonles of the whisky
