VETERANS AT SERVICE

Sermon in Commemoration of Decoration Day.

A PATRIOTIC DISCOURSE!

Members of the Grand Army of the Republic and its kindred organizations partake of a Feast of Patriotic Sentiment and Wholesome Advice.

It is the custom of the Grand Army of the Republic to have sermons commemorative of Decoration Day preached in the churches of all the towns and cities in the United States on the Sunday preceding that day, and in accordance with this custom the members of Watkin Waters Post, No. 146, G. A. R., Henry Horncastle Camp No. 49, Sons of Veterans, and the Women's Relief Corps and Ladies' Aid Society connected with the respective organizations assembled in the Presbyterian church, corner of White and Oak streets, last evening and listened to a sermon by Rev. T. M. Morrison.

The pretty edifice was filled by a large and attentive audience, the front seats being occupied by the societies, members of the congregation and visitors occupying the other seats. The wall of the pulpit was decorated with a large American flag, the post colors and guidons, making a very pretty combination. The discourse was an exceedingly interesting one and abounded in patriotic sentiment.

Rev. Morrison preceded his discourse with a few formal remarks to the members of the organizations present in which he said that in the name of the First Presbyterian church of Shenandoah he bids them welcome. He added that when the committee of the G. A. R. asked him to preach last evening he hesitated, but had they asked him to deliver an oration he would undoubtedly have refused. He would have felt himself unable to take up such a task and do justice to it. But they asked him to preach a patriotic sermon and he believed he could do that—in some way at least, for the Master—Jesus of Nazareth—has furnished a gospel of patriotism. Rev. Morrison continued: "I can tell you what he says on the subject of our duty to our country and I shall try to tell it to you in a plain way. When I turned to the Bible to look for a passage that would seem suitable I turned to this: 'Other men labored and ye are entered into their labors.'"

The text was taken from St. John 3, last clause of the 28th verse. Rev. Morrison said these words must have been very impressive when spoken by the Master. He had been journeying across the country of Samaria and came to the city of Sychar. He sat down at Jacob's well and while his disciples had gone away to buy bread a woman came out to draw water. Jesus entered into conversation with her and revealed Himself as the Messiah to her. She returned and the woman withdrew. After a while she was seen coming out again followed by a host of men. She told them she had found the Messiah and that He was sitting at the well. Jesus was in the city already to harvest. And herein is that saying true, one sower and another reaper. I sent you to reap that whereon ye bestowed no labor: other men labored, and ye entered into their labors."

Following the line of the text Rev. Morrison said it is not infrequently the case that one man may plant a tree and not eat of the fruit. As no individual stands alone in this world, so no age of generation stands alone; the succeeding ages and generations reap the fruits. Every age is dependent more or less on the age that has preceded it and it was to this that Christ referred when he said "Other men have labored, and ye are entered into their labors." One of the blessings which we have received from our fathers is a form of government, which, if followed will make more perfect our nation, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for common defense, promote general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty to every inhabitant of the land.

Rev. Morrison referred briefly to the many occasions upon which our forefathers had to defend the government and the principles upon which it is founded. And in speaking of the rebellion he said the southern forces were the very strongest because they fought for what they considered was principle. Had not the principle been the thought and inspiration that drove them on they would have been suppressed long before they were.

to be willing to study the foreign languages so as to be able to teach these people our language and the principles of our government. We cannot hold the United States together if we have these people to grow in our midst in ignorance, and the nation depends upon the Union.

Then it is our duty to educate and educate that great mass of negroes that we freed. They are here. They came not themselves. They are a mighty power in the country to-day. They will be a still mightier power in the future and it depends upon us to educate and elevate them. It is also our duty to develop the country, establish it more firmly, defend it against attack and proclaim the principles upon which it is founded. The nation was not founded by the goddess. Whenever you hear of the goddessness spoken of this nation stand up for it, defend it. Whenever you hear it denied that it is a Christian country proclaim that those who founded it came here out of religious principles. The first state paper was written in the "Mayflower" and it began "In the name of God, we, the Congress of 1777, when it handed down the rights to the people, it appealed to the protection of Almighty God, and they declared their dependence upon Him. They went further than that. They asked the ministers of the Gospel of Jesus Christ to read the address from their different pulpits. It was read by ministers of every denomination. When our first President was inaugurated the ceremonies were presided by service of prayer in every church in New York city and the same has been the custom ever since again for days of thanksgiving and prayer. The Bible is the book on which we swear in our courts and political conventions are frequently opened with prayer.

In speaking to the people to guard the country Rev. Morrison warned against a church state. He said there is a difference between a country being founded upon Christian principles and one governed by a church. Let the church and state be separated forever. Let us stand up for the principle of the Declaration of Independence "all men are created equal." Stand firm for freedom of thought and speech. Men deprived of this are on a level with the brute. A state that denies freedom of thought and speech can never rise.

In closing his sermon Rev. Morrison said "O, if I could but bring the citizens of this country to the feet of Jesus. He is the author of the principle upon which our government is founded. It was He who taught us to look to God and call Him Father. He taught us the brotherhood of man, and it was He who proclaimed that great doctrine of union, 'I will give you a new law, that ye love one another.'"

THE HEROIC DEAD.

An Able and Patriotic Sermon by Rev. W. H. Harrison.

A large congregation listened attentively and with much profit to a sermon on Decoration Day by Rev. W. H. Harrison in the English Baptist church, on South Jardin street, Sunday evening. The text was taken from Revelation 3: 4—"And they shall walk with me in the white, for they are worthy." Rev. Harrison said: "Decoration Day is the outcome of a nation's gratitude. It is a day set apart for the expression of our admiration of the noble deeds of those who suffered, bled and died in the defense of the Union and for them who were held in the cruel bondage of slavery. Perhaps there are here present this evening some who are not very deeply interested in this national display of patriotism, as none of their immediate friends suffered in the great struggle for liberty; but, as loyal citizens of the state and of the nation, it is our duty to honor the day and memory of the dead, as we are also participants in the blessings that cost so much of the good blood, as well as the rich treasures of America. The religion of Jesus Christ teaches men to be patriotic; therefore it is the duty of every one to realize the claims of the state, as well as to be obedient and faithful to their duties to God. The Christian who holds the cross of Jesus Christ in his right hand and the stars and stripes of his country in his left will make a good citizen. Next Wednesday is Decoration Day, and the people of the United States, from Maine to California, and from the lakes to the gulf, will assemble in thousands to keep high the banner of our country. And it is the valiant deeds of those who fell on the battlefields in defense of the principles of Union and Liberty. The bugle call will be heard in the land, and in response to that call tens of thousands of veterans, soldiers and citizens will in due time and their measured tread will beat time to the martial strains of a thousand bands; rifles and swords will gleam in the sunshine and prancing steeds, with their riders, will add to the glory of the scene as they march to the cities of the dead, as the almoners of floral tributes to decorate the resting places of those who sleep beneath the sod, waiting patiently the trumpet call to muster at the great review on the fields of eternity. Thirty-one years ago ten states, with a population of ten millions were in open rebellion and the blood of three hundred thousand men was offered on the altar of sacrifice as the price of Union and Liberty; and, for the time being, the blood-red demon was satisfied. Since that time there has been peace within our borders and on Wednesday, next, the banner of the Union will float from every capital dome, flagstaff and masthead in the nation, in commemoration of the men of patriotism who deluge the land; it will sweep over every city; its waves will lap the foot of every mountain, inundate the plains, surge through every valley, and its dashing spray will fall upon every hillside of the nation. And as though a tear will drop here and there in loving memory of the father, the son and the brother, it will be, nevertheless, a sea of gladness—and impulse of patriotic sympathy—brooding and pulsating throughout the length and breadth of the land. A stranger in our midst might ask the question: Why this great demonstration? The answer is: because Liberty lives! and sits and reigns enthroned in the hearts of the people, as the Queen of the nation. Liberty is the fair sister of truth. She is one of the sweetest angels of mercy in the universe of God. As a messenger from Heaven she comes to us to uplift the down-trodden, to break the bonds of tyranny, to snap the shackles of superstition, and to unloose the bars of political captivity. She wears on her feet the sandals of helplessness, her wings fan the breath of freedom and her hands pour out blessings all along the pathway of humanity. Her eyes are a fair as the morning; there is light in her eyes, kindness upon her lips, and her smile is a benediction. Her garments are from the looms of progress and her girdle is strength. It was she who stood beside the emancipated

Collieries Resumed Operations On Full Time To-day.

SOME STILL TROUBLED!

The Water Holds the Upper Hand at West Shenandoah and Elksgowan—Novel Means for Operating a Fan at Packer Colliery No. 5.

All but one of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron Company's collieries in this immediate district resumed operations this morning on full time.

The colliery which is still idle is the West Shenandoah. The water there is still very high and it is said the place may remain idle for three weeks.

Knickerbocker colliery, at Yatesville, resumed operations this morning, but the Elksgowan colliery is in about the same condition that West Shenandoah is.

Wm. Penn colliery will start again tomorrow for the first time in over a week, but the new slope just will remain idle.

It was reported this morning that there was a cave-in on the Lehigh Valley Railroad at Robinson Junction, but the report proved to be groundless. In making an engine back the P. & R. Company pulled some of the ground from beneath the Lehigh Railroad sills, and the people who observed this concluded that there was a cave-in. The disturbance did not prevent cars passing over the tracks.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad bridge at Humesville which was swept away by the floods last week has been replaced. The repairs were completed Saturday night and trains commenced to run through to Ashland yesterday.

The recent floods so affected Packer colliery No. 5 as to block and cut off all air courses. This stopped the work of the men engaged in fighting the fire in Packer No. 1, as they were dependent upon the courses of No. 5 for ventilation. The difficulty has now been overcome. A new air course was made at Haysville and as the course was located a mile and a half from the boiler house of No. 5 it became necessary to devise a new means for propelling the new fan. This was accomplished by the cooperation of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company. Shifting engine No. 107 was sent down from Delano and placed on a siding especially constructed for the purpose. The engine is connected by pipe with the fan, which is three hundred yards distant, and furnishes a supply of steam which keeps the fan going regularly and furnishes the fire fighters in No. 1 with all the ventilation required.

The latest report about the fire in Packer No. 5 is that it is under control, but there are no important developments.

James Dunston, who deserted his wife and family and eloped with Mrs. Catherine Heck, a married woman of Mt. Carmel, has returned to his family at Mt. Carmel. He claims he was drunk when he eloped and his wife has forgiven him. In an interview with a Shamokin newspaper man on Saturday Dunston said: "My mother lives at Lost Creek, a little town about two miles this side of Shenandoah, and when the train arrived at that place I got off and in my drunken condition asked Mrs. Heck to accompany me. When we arrived at my mother's house she raised a fuss about the presence of the woman and we left the premises. Where she went is more than I know and from that time to this I have never seen her."

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

A Costly Exploit in Which Two Shenandoah Men Engaged.

MAHANOA CITY, May 28.—Two drunken young men of Shenandoah last evening caused considerable excitement here by driving their horses up one of the streets at a dead gallop. Chief Burgess Stern accosted the drivers upon their return and upon examining the horses found that one was almost exhausted and the other had been driven without shoes on its fore hoofs, which were badly torn. The Burgess attempted to advise the men kindly by telling them that they should go home and the animals were in no condition to be driven. The advice was not taken. On the contrary the men aimed the Burgess and told him that the horses belonged to them and they would do as they pleased, whereupon they were arrested and taken before Justice Sherman, who fined them $10.00. One of the men refused to pay and was locked up. Shortly after his friend paid the fine both in addition to a considerable fee of one dollar for locking up and releasing the stubborn man. The parties gave their names as H. I. Hobart and John Mitchell.

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONIES.

Annual May Reception of the Annunciation Sodality.

The Annunciation church on West Cherry street was the scene of an impressive festive event, the occasion being the May reception of the ladies of the Sodality connected with the church. The church altar was elaborately decorated with flowers and plants of many kinds and the magnificence of the picture was enhanced by the appearance of three hundred boys and girls in holiday attire. The former were distinguished by brilliant red neckties and carried bouquets. The girls were dressed in white, wore pink crowns and carried pretty bouquets. In the early part of the evening the children assembled in the old temperance hall, near the church, and marched from that place to the Annunciation church. Their marching through the aisles of the latter place was an inspiring incident. During the service the children sang sacred selections and some of them recited gospel pieces. Rev. Father Koran, of Chester, preached an eloquent sermon and Rev. H. F. O'Reilly made an appropriate address. Rev. Walter J. Duffy, late of Philadelphia and formerly of Mauch Chunk, was also in attendance. Rev. Duffy succeeded Rev. Kane as curate of the Annunciation church.
