THEIR FINAL REST!

Remains of the Colorado Mine Victims Interred.

THE INQUEST TO-NIGHT!

A Brother of One of the Victims Makes a Fruitless Search For Money the Dead Man Was Supposed to Have on His Person.

The fact that the bodies of the two missing miners have been recovered is a great relief to the public at large as well as to the relatives of the deceased and the operators of the mine, yet the after-escape may be such that some people may yet wish that the remains had remained entombed. As in many other cases money is the root of the evil. It will be remembered that at the time the men were entombed it was reported that Seber Pranzey, one of the victims, was reported as having $900 on his person. The victim's brother was so much worked up over the matter that had not the officials interfered the man would have rushed into the deadly gasses to make a search for the wealth. When the bodies were recovered they were in such a state of putrefaction that most of the miners were unable to go within a hundred feet of them. The men who had sufficient stamina to take them out quickly rolled the bodies in canvas and gave no thought to a search for money and as they were carried out the bodies were sent to Undertaker John Roberts, of town.

Mr. Roberts said last night that the bodies were the worst he had handled for many a day. When he pulled off the boots parts of the flesh adhered to the leather and it was concluded to allow the clothing to remain and wrap the whole in a sheet. This course was adopted and the bodies were placed in caskets.

At about five o'clock last evening Pranzey's brother called at the undertaking establishment and insisted that a search be made for the money. Notwithstanding the decomposed state of the bodies the man identified one of them as that of his brother. Undertaker Roberts then acceded to the request and commenced a search for the money. He did not dare remove the clothing, but cut all the pockets with a sharp knife and after turning them inside out convinced the brother that there was no money on the remains. The man then became much excited and stated that he knew his brother had saved a considerable sum and would resort to legal process to solve the mystery surrounding his disappearance. He said that immediately after his brother was reported missing he called at the boarding house and asked to be allowed to search the brother's trunk, but the boarding mistress refused to allow him to even enter the bedroom. Since that time the trunk has been searched, but no money has been found. The man intimated that he would cause an arrest.

A Girardville physician called at the undertaking establishment last evening and made an examination of the bodies in behalf of Deputy Coroner Donoghue. He said he was satisfied that neither of the men lived two hours after the fire started. One of the men was over six feet high and weighed over two hundred pounds. The other was about five feet high and weighed about one hundred and fifty pounds.

Health Officer Miles called upon the undertaker last night and told him that the remains should be kept sealed and the caskets should not be opened again. The instructions were obeyed.

The funerals took place at 9 o'clock this morning from the undertaking establishment and the remains were interred in the Polish cemetery. Lost Creek last night and learned that Col. D. P. Brown, the superintendent for the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, was suffering from the reaction following the anxiety attending the search for the bodies. Workmen who were at the mine when the bodies were recovered say the superintendent was very much affected when the miners told him the search was at an end. When he learned of the traces left to show the methods to which the men had resorted to save their lives the superintendent almost broke down.

The recovery of the bodies is very gratifying to the public as well as to the relatives and the officials of the company, because it effectually disposes of the suspicion of foul play. It has been an open secret that the mine operators suspected that they were victims of a conspiracy. They got this idea because three mine fires followed each other in rapid succession. When the fire in the Colorado mine started and the two men reported missing there were several who hinted that the men had made their escape and that events would probably show that the fire was a part of a plan to cripple the mine. Even as late as a week ago a prominent mine official stated that "if the bodies are there they will soon be recovered," showing that there was a doubt as to whether they were in the mine. The recovery of the bodies vindicates the victims.

Deputy Coroner Donoghue will hold an inquest on the cases at Girardville to-night and attempt to ascertain as near as possible as to what caused the fire.

A DRIVER'S ESCAPE.

Tumbles From a Wagon and His Face is Almost Run Over by the Wheel.

Special to the HERALD.

MAHANOY CITY, June 15.—An Alexander Anderson, porter at the Mansion House, drove his team up Main street at 9 o'clock this morning, the horse suddenly halted at the Reading bridge and refused to go further. The driver chattered something pleasant in his ear supposed to move any black animal, swore a little, cracked his whip and while so doing overbalanced himself and tumbled to the ground right in front of the wheels. The horse then started, the wheels almost covering the driver's face, and he only saved himself by a quick dextrous move. As it is he carries several scratches upon his countenance as a memento of the adventure.

Slippery Boarders.

Two slick young men partook of the hospitalities of Mrs. Hill's boarding house, on West Coal street, during the past three weeks, and then departed without paying, and taking with them their baggage and the waterfulness of the bill.

One of the boarders was John Leary, recently of Mahanoy City, but claiming Scranton as his residence. John gave Mrs. Hill a power of attorney to collect his wages at Gilbert colliery and although the landlady went early on pay day, John was on hand a few minutes earlier and drew his pay, hurried home and removed his clothing. The other slippery fellow had introduced himself as Mr. Updegraff, a picture agent, from numerous places. He was polite and pleasing, and besides the cloth he wore carried an extra suit and two vests. On the garments Mrs. Hill kept an eagle eye as they were the only guarantee she held of the agent's honesty. Yesterday Mr. Updegraff walked down the steps and out, although the landlady went early on pay day, John was on hand a few minutes earlier and drew his pay, hurried home and removed his clothing. The other slippery fellow had introduced himself as Mr. Updegraff, a picture agent, from numerous places. He was polite and pleasing, and besides the cloth he wore carried an extra suit and two vests. On the garments Mrs. Hill kept an eagle eye as they were the only guarantee she held of the agent's honesty. Yesterday Mr. Updegraff walked down the steps and out, although the landlady went early on pay day, John was on hand a few minutes earlier and drew his pay, hurried home and removed his clothing.
