A GRAVE CHARGE.

No one will deny, says the Albany, N Y., Journal, that Mr. Cleveland has lost weating. He went into office carrying with blue the highest expectations of a majority of his countrymen. His ideals were in lofty ; his professions for reform apparently were so sincere; it was expected espectally as he had passed four years in the White House, that he would give the country on Administration that would be free from the defects which had marked the Administrations of other Presidents who had not possessed the ability to protect their devotion to reform which had marked Mr. Cleveland's utterances

That Mr. Cleveland has failed, is now generally acknowledged. Men and news pipers that supported him from his first appearance as a candidate for Governor of his state have fallen away, and are now among those who criticize him severely.

To what is his failure to be attributed. There has been much speculation, and many reasons have been advanced, but the Troy Press, a leading Democratic pa per of New York state, advances the most startling reason of all. It says : "Whether the decline of Cleveland is attributable to the weakness of his moral fibre or to unfortunate personal habits, is a matter conjecture and controversy : but the de cline itself is unmistakable. We hope that the old-time Cleveland, whom the people loved and venal politicians hated. will yet appear upon the horizon of affairs. It is not too late for him to redesm the Administration and to recover the confidence of his countrymen. But there is little to inspire such an optimistic expectation. He seems wedded to Bourboulsm, and his second Administration promises to be as impotent as his first was illustrious." This is the first time it has been dtrectly charged that the President of the United States has cultivated habits which interfere with the proper and energetic performance of his official duties. From time to time obscure hints have come from Washington to the effect that Mr. Cieveland and his personal friends were of a particularly social disposition, but, except in one or two instances when there was brutal innuendo to which the respectable people of the country gave no liced, reputable journals were disposed to assume that the failure of the Administration was traceable to the intractability of the divided Democratic unifority in Congress. But here is a Democratic newspaper, which is noted for its independence and straightforward course, coming out with a statement which has but one plain mountag. The country, however, is still disposed to believe that this President's inability to impress his individuality on the country, in the manner which was we pected by his sangulate countrymen when he went into office, is due to other causes shun that here indicated.

The HERALD doe not intend to longer assume responsibilit ties which do not belong to newspapers it says what it has to say in plain English gives its reasons for so doing. It now denies to correspondents privileges which i does not itself claim, and will not here after publish communications unsigned by writers' real names. It holds that if the motives of correspondents are what they should be, and what they write is worth printing from any point of view, correspondents will not object to having heir names attached to the published articles. The HERALD is aware that this innovation will be regarded as a radical one by many persons, but feels confident that its adoption will give greater satisfaction to both writers and readers than the custom which has hitherto prevailed in this town.

the Usual Formalities of Inauguration Postponed Until After Carnot's Funeral. The New President Bequests Carnot's Ministry to Remain in Office.

PARIS, June 28.-The electoral congress called to elect a president of the French republic to succeed the late President Car-not, began its session in the palace at Ver-tailles at 1:10 yesterday afternoon, M. challenet Labour, president of the senate, presiding. The great hall of the palace was crowded, and the galleries were thronged with spectators. Nearly all the members of the diplomatic corps were present among the latter. Great precau tions had been taken at Versailles to prevent anarchist outrages. M. Challamel-Lacour, after a sympa-thetic reference to the late President Carnot, read the articles of the constitution relative to i.e. election of a president, and then deciar if the national assembly open dist before the balloting opened a So-cialist deputy should: "I demand the ab-olition of the presidency." Another dep-uty cried: "Down with dictators!" There vere other cries from various parts of th mil, which were lost in the general hub bub of the election

The following is the result of the poll Casimir-Perier, 451; M. Brisson, 191 Dupuy, 90; General Fevrler, 53; M м.

He was immediately surrounded by senators and deputies, who repeatedly and enthusiastically cheered him. The Socialists, however, made vociferous pro-tests. Premier Dupuy read the figures of the election to the newly elected presi dent

M. Challemel-Lacour then delivered most elequent cration, during which the new president was deeply moved. In reply M. Casimier-Perier sold: "I can

I shall give the republic all the warmth of my convictions which have never varied. I shall give the democracy all my devotion, and all my heart, as did he whose loss we now de-plore. Finally, I shall endeavor to do all my duty.

Those who were close to M. Casimir Perier who he left Versailles in order to make his i and entry into Paris as presi-dent say that he was greatly moved by the honor conferred upon him. He re neived the congratulations of Dupuy and the cabinet ministers and a large number of senators and deputies in the room se apart for the use of the cabinet.

Later President Casimir-Perler received the congratulations of the correspondents of the various newspapers represented at Versailles. Replying to the newspaper men. M. Casimir Perier said: "I have only one word to say. You may discuss me-I belong to you-but never forget France and the republic.

France and the republic." Half an hour after the election the newly elected president drove towards Paris, escorted by a body of dragoons. As he drove he bowed pleasantly. He looked younger than his age. He has an erect carriage and precipitate diction, and there is little of the common in his air. His continuence dimension respective collicountenance and bearing are rather mili-tary, though he is a civilian. M. Casimir-Perier called upon Mme. Carnot on en-tering Paris, and begged her to stay at the palace of the Elysee as long as it was con venient to her. In the meanwhile he will make the foreign ministry his officia residence.

The president's cortege followed the high road to the city, and then passed along the Avenue des Champs Elysees. As the remains of M. Carnot are yet unburied the usual installation at the Palace of the Elysee was foregone. M. Casimir-

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

The HERALD has had under considera tion for some time an innovation in local journalism which has been adopted by other papers. The custom has obtained in the town, of printing communications in the papers, fictitionaly signed, the names of writers being required only as a guarantee of good faith. He was greeted with shouts of "Long Live Casimir-Perier!" "Long Live the Repub-Casimir-Perier!" "Long Live the Repub-lict" General Borius, chief of M. Car-not's military household, who was in full uniform, received the president at the en-trance, while the other officers of M. Car-not's military household awaited him at the top of the steps. The ministers, shortly after the presi-dent's arrival, formally tendered their resignations to him. M. Casimir-Perier requested them to remain in office. It is doubtful, however, whether M. Dupuy, the prime minister, will retain office. It is expected, in the event of his insisting upon his resignation being accepted, that the president will summon M. Burdeau to form a cabinet. This will enable M. Da-puy to hold his position of president of the chamber of deputies.
