VICTORIES FOR YALE.

Harvard Left Far Behind in the University Race.

HANDICAPPED BY BAD STEERING.

Had Harvard town Equal to Vale at the Our Conswain Day's Erratic Steering Would Have Beaten Them-Yale Freshmen Defeat Columbia and Harvard.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 29.-It was 6 o'clock last evening when the tug Man-banset, with every space on board crowded with newspaper men, started up the river to view the beginning of the great univer-sity race between Yale and Harvard. With her went the United States revenue cutter Dexter and the tug America. Half an hour later both the Yale and Harvard crews were quickly in place side by side, ready for the word. It came, and both sets of cars struck the water together.

As had been expected, Harvard started in with a fast stroke, 40 to the minute, hoping to break Yale's heart in the first mile. Yale responded gamely with 28 strokes, and kept right abreast of Harvard. For a furlong, perhaps, the boats rowed nip and tuck. Then Yale gradually drew away from the Harvardites. At the half mile she was already five seconds ahead, a full boat's length, and her lend stendily grew.

At the mile Harvard's stroke had dropped to 36, while Yale still kept on at the 38 rate with which she started. There seemed to be no doubt that it was Yale's race. Her stroke was stendy. She passed the mile twelve minutes ahead of Har-vard. Here both crews began to reduce their stroke, Yale's dropping to 36 and Harvard's to 34. But while Yale's strokes were deep and strong, and each joined on to the preceding one, so as to send the boat smoothly and steadily through the water, Harvard's work was ragged. At each stroke the Harvard boat would jump forward with a perceptible jerk, which would be repeated when the next stroke came. After the first half mile Harvard's men were never in perfect stroke. Purden and Bullard, pulling bow and No. 2, were always just a little behind the rest, while Henessey, No. 7, pulled as if he did not care whether he kept time or not.

Harvard men all feathered well, although rather too high for the best re-sults, but their work in the best was very bad. If they had been perfect carsmen, however, they would still have lost the race by their steering. Whether Cox-swain Day became rattled by seeing his boat fall so far behind, or whather some more resterious cause was at work, it is more mysterious cause was at work, it is impossible to say, but from the mile flag on the Harvard boat sigzagged across the stream to the most extraordinary man-ner. As the two boats approached the two-and-a-half mile flag, Vale in the lead, it became apparent that something was about to occur. The Harvard boat went nearer and nearer the staff, and from the judges' boat went up a sort of horror stricken nurmur, "He's going to hit." Hit it he did, the starboard ours catch-ing the flagstaff three feet from their ends and knocking it back and forth in the water. The sudden shock nearly threw the Harvard men from their seats, and for a moment it looked as if their part of the race was to end right there. Nothing shows how game they all were better than the quick recovery from this undeserved disaster and the way in which they closed up what the momentary stop had lost them. For a moment they almost seemed to gain upon Yale. They were 48 seconds behind at the three mile flag, and at the fourth they were only 46 behind.

It was a game and splendid effort, but it could not last. Their stroke which had risen to 36, dropped rapidly to 32, while the heavy way in which they handled their cars showed that they were very tired. So, too, were the Yale boys, but they showed it less, being happy in the victory so near at hand. They crossed the line thirty lengths ahead of Harvard.

The Yale men sat up straight and strong after the finish, none of them show-ing signs of weakness, but three of Harvard's men dropped forward over their oars, utterly exhausted by the long and hopeless struggle.

The defeated Harvard crew returned up the river in their steam launch, their boat being towed behind them. On arrival at the Harvard float Townsend and Steven-son were in the forward part of the launch, Stevenson half sitting and half lying over the deck. The men alighted from the launch, and trainers and handlers were obliged to assist Stevenson and Townsend from the boat, the former, when left by himself in the center of the float, stumbling and falling in a heap.

day, for Yale '97 won the freshman triangular boat race at noon in as pretty a two mile match as was ever rowed over the course on the Thames. Harvard was out-classed, and was never in the struggle after the oars struck the water. Columbia, on the other hand, made a game uphill fight, and yielded to fate only on the last few lengths. The official time as given out by Referee Cowles was: Yale, 11:15; Columbia, 11:24; Harvard, 11:56.

A Remarkable Scene in the British House of Commons,

DENIES ALLEGIANCE TO ROYALTY.

A Labor Leader in Parliament Opposes an Address of Congratulation on the Birth of Another Royalts -- Barsh Crit telum of the Prince of Wales.

LONDON, June 20. - There was an sinex ampled scene in the house of commons hat evening when Sir William Verson Harcourt, supported by Mr. Balfour, moved an address of congratulation to the queen upon the birth of an heir to the Duke of York. The motion was about to be put when, smid exciamations of sur prise from all parts of the house, James Keyer Hardie, a Democrat, and Socialist and probably the most prominent of the labor members of parliament, rose and said: "I owe allegiance to no herelltary

"I owe allegative to no hereditary ruler. The motion proposes to raise the importance of an event of every day or currence. I am delighted t learn that the child is fairly healthy. I shall be pleased to join in the ordinary congratuations if I meet the child's parents. Be when the house of commons, representing the nation, is asked to join in congratula-tions, then, in the interest of the nation, I

There is one aspect of the question which concerns the house of commons. A cabinet minister was required to be present upon this interesting occasion. I submit that such a proceeding is not calculated to enhance the dignity of this house in the eyes of the nation.

(Vehement interruptions and cries of "Order)" "Rot!")

'You may say 'rot,' " continued Hardie, "but if you mixed with those you repre-sent you would find that the people view this matter in a different manner. It seems to me some protest should be made in this connection. It is a matter of small concern to me whether the future roler of this country is a genuine article or a spurious one. The motion was made because the child was born in the royal family and the house has a right toack what particular blessing the regal family has conferred upon the nation. We are told that the queen has ruled for half a cen-tury. I beg to correct this by saying that her majesty has reigned, and not roled.

"There is the Prince of Wales. What special blessing has be conferred upon the nation that we should reloice with him? leader, here interposed and made a scene of great excitement in the house, and moved that the honorable member from Westhampshire (Hardle) be no longer heard, (Leud theers.)

Sir William Harcourt said that he hoped Colonel Saunderson would not press his motion, and Hardie was allowed to con-

time. He added:
"I know nothing in the career of his royal highness which commends itself especially to me. We are told that a flerce light beats upon the throne, but sometimes we catch glimpses of his royal highness on the race course. We know one thing, and that is that as the Duke of Cornwall he draws £60,000 yearly from property in London."

The speaker here arose and said that the honorable member must confine him-self to discussing the resolution.

Hardie thereupon resumed, saying: "The ouse is asked to rejoice because a child is born, but up to the present there is no means of knowing his qualifications to reign over this great empire. It is strange that people who have so much to say about the hereditary element in another place should be so willing now to enderse it in this particular instance. The principle is the same in both cases. This child will he surrounded by sycophants and flatterers, and will be taught to believe himself superior to creation. In due course of time he will tour the world, with rumors of morganatic marriages in his train.

(Vociferous cries of dissent.)

"As the house has not found time to vote condelence with the widows, orphans and others who are suffering from the ter-rible colliery calamity in Wales, I protest against the present mummery.

The motion was then pur, Hardle alone protesting, and it was adopted by loud and protonged cheering. The budget dis-cussion was then resumed.
