Bridge Builders Getting the Bowers Street Trestle Together.

RAPID WORK BEING DONE!

The Structure is the Only One of the Kind in the World—Looks Like a Toboggan.

The appearance of South Bowers street, between Centre and Oak, is being greatly changed as the work of erecting the elevated electric railway progresses. The men engaged on the work only started on Wednesday last, but they have all the columns and girders in position as far as the point where the curve begins.

The part of the railroad, including the bridge which is to span the Lehigh Valley tracks at Oak street, will cost the Lakeside Railway Company in the neighborhood of $3,000. The iron work, alone, cost $4,500 and the stone piers on either side of the Lehigh tracks will cost considerable. The material for the trestle was made at the Reading Rolling Mills. The contract for the trestle is in the hands of a Philadelphia firm and the work is being done by a gang of experienced bridge builders, some of whom come from Harrisburg. The gang put up an elevated railroad in Brooklyn, N. Y., and seem to understand their business. They handle the ponderous pieces of iron as easily as some men swing a pick. They expect to complete the work in about two weeks.

The present appearance of the work is similar to that of the Gilbert system of elevated railroad, but the heavy grade makes it look like a toboggan slide and no doubt when it is completed the railway company will reap money by drawing people from all parts of the county with an advertisement: "Don't fail to visit and ride over the great electric railway toboggan slide."

Although the trestle has a heavy pitch it is not as steep as many people suppose. From the point where the incline begins to a point near the curve the grade is eight per cent, the drop being eight in a hundred. From the Bowers street end of the curve to the west end of the bridge on Oak street the grade will be but three per cent. The heaviest grade of the trestle is about seven-eighths of one per cent, more than the grade which runs alongside the Indian Ridge dirt bank.

The girders for the bridge at Oak street will be immense affairs. They will be seventy-one feet long, the end of each girder resting upon a solid pier of masonry erected on either side of the tracks. The bridge will span the tracks at a height of twenty-one feet above the top of the rails.

The Lakeside company expects to have cars running over the trestle and bridge and have through connection from Mahanoy City to the corner of Main and Centre streets by October 1st. This branch of the line will be very popular. The "toboggan" and affording a novel trip. Hundreds of people assemble at the place of operations and spend hours watching the nimble bridge builders put the structure together. This is the second elevated electric railway in the world, but it is the only one of the toboggan style, and therefore starts out with some distinction.
