Tanoconour the Orient a belief prevails that lunatics are under the special protection of Providence, and they are there fore treated with charity and consideration by the people and permitted to roam about at liberty. There is much to give strength to this Eastern superstition in he astonishing preservation from death of a New York man. Crazed by the loss of his job and the consequent destitution of his wife and children, he first gashed his wrists with a piece of broken glass and then jumped through the window into the street, fifty feet below, where he was subsequently found sitting quietly on the curbstone with no other injuries save the cuts on his wrists and sprained ankles.

It is often said by those who are spec ally desirous of encouraging a prompt revival of business, and who have more zeal than knowledge, that the new Tariff makes only little change from the McKinlev law. Yet what are the facts? Or many of the most important products the duties are reduced more than one-half, and on many others as much as a third and these are products, moreover, which were so largely imported in 1891 and 1892 under the McKinley duties as to prove that those duties were by no means pro libitory. It is essential to remember that a duty which is not high enough to pro tect is like a dam which is not strong wough to resist a flood. Only a little difference in the dam or the duty may bring tremendous disaster in place of peace and prosperity. The question is whether the duty is high enough to keep domestic es tablishments at work with fair wages Cutting off wages necessarily cuts off what the people can buy, and thus neces surlly reduces business. Now, the one fact which everybody can see is that wages are at present very much lower than they were two years ago, before the people voted or a change of turiff, and the definite setlement which the new tariff has brought loes not anywhere permit any recovery of wages as yet, but in many important branches it has compelled a decline.
