and it is stated that his death is but a question of a few hours.

Andrew Gregg Curtin was the chief executive of the Keystone state during the civil war, and because his services to his ountry were so great then he is chiefly known as Pennsylvania's "war governor." But his public services, aside from those he rendered during the great contest, were

He was a native of Bellefonte, and was He was a native of Bellefonte, and was born April 22, 1815. His father, who was from County Chire, Ireland, established one of the first iron manufactories in Pennsylvania. He was educated at the common schools of Bellefonte and the academy at Milton, and when he had finished the course of the latter institution two professions were open to him—the law and the ministry. He chose the former and was admitted to the bar in 1839. He won his first case and quickly built up a good practice.

good practice. It was during the campaign of 1840 when he was but 23 years of age, that young Curin took the stump for Will-lam Henry Harrison. Four years later he was even more prominent in the canvass for Henry Clay. In 1848 and 1859 he was a Whig elector. In 1854 he was considered one of the leaders of his party, and his nomination for governor was strongly urged that year. He declined the honor because Governor Pollock, an old schoolmate, desired a re-election and worked for his renomination and election with unbounded zeal. Pollock was elected, and Curtin became his secretary of state The Republican party was at that time in its formative state, and Curtin was one of its chief spirits. He was desirons of securing the Republican nomination for governor in 1850, and backed by Thaddens Stevens, Galusha A. Grow, Alexander K. McClure, John W. Forney and Matthew Stanley Quay all of them then young men, but strong in the counsels of the new party, he won in the convention and was elected by a majority of 32,900 votes. His first acts after his nomination were

The state contest closed in Pennsylvania in October and was no less exciting than the national curvass. "As goes Pennsylvania, so goes the union," was the cry everywhere. Mr. Curtin took to the stamp as soon as he returned from Colleges and the labors were increasing to.

The president-elect was on his way to Washington, and at a private conference, at which Governor Curcin was present, the starting news was told that a plot against Lincoln's life had been discovered. Governor Curtin invited Liarrabin to spend the night at his house, and to allay suspicion left the remainder of the presidential party at the lottel. Shortly after his manguration President Sportly all as its imanguration President Lincoln called Governor Currin to Wash-ington and a seed him to recognize the existence of civil war in a message to the Pennsylvania legislature. This Curtin did in a document that, considering the basic with which it was prepared and all the attendant circumstances, must be regarded as one of the strongest of modern state papers. Within ferty eight hours the lex-islature had authorized the governor to raise and equip troops for the defense of the Union, and had appropriated half a million dollars to pay the bills. When Lincoin called for 75,000 men, the soldiers of Pennsylvania were the first state volunteers to reach the national capi-tal. Then Governor Curtin asked and ob-tained from the legislature power to raise a reserve of not less than fifteen nor more than thirty regiments to serve for three years or till the close of the war, the forces to be transferred to the general govern-ment if necessary. ### HEART DISEASE!

Fluttering, No Appetite, Could Not Sleep, Wind on Stomach.

For a long time I had a terrible pain at my heart, which fluttered almost incessantly. I had no appetite and could not sleep. I would be compelled to sit up in bed and belch gas from my stomach until I thought that every minute would be my last. There was a feelling of oppression about my heart, and I was afraid to draw a full breath. I could not sweep a room without resting. My husband induced me to try

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and am happy to say it has cured me. I now have a splendid appetite and sleep well. Its effect was truly margless." marvelous.
