THE Republicans are on the high road to victory. Let them not make the woe ful blunder of thinking that the victory is already won.

THE smokeless chimneys of every Inctory and forge forced into idleness by the Bill of Sals will serve as exclamation points to punctuate the people's angry November declaration of distrust and contempt against Democratic treachery and dishouor:

THOSE of the enckoos who began to chirp for Hill without waiting for the Cleveland clock to strike are now repenting of their rashness. The owner of the time piece evidently intends that the cuckoos shall be seen but not heard in the present campalgn.

CHAINMAN WILSON, who only three weeks ago assured his London friends foolish they may be, will not dare in the face of public condemnation to renew tariff agitation for Free Trade ends, and little bill of two lines repealing the tariff act of August, 1894, and restoring the law then in force, would not cost one day's delay, if the men who were opposed to it There is a limit to Your Endurance. when it passed should get pluck enough to vote according to their convictions. It could never have passed the House if Democrats opposed to it had dared to call their Beware of the Last Straw ! It Will couls their own. The House passed it without correcting a single one of its blan dars, because it was certain that, if returned to the Senate at all, it would not then pass that body. The repeal of it would offer to industries and business such incalculable blossings that the mere proposal would encourage trade everywhere, except in foreign countries. It is safe for our Democratic friends to reckon that Mr. Reed will not be found in the future, any more than he has been in the past, legislating for the benefit of Germany and Great Britain against the United States.

It is a rather remarkable fact that all the papers of both parties agree in attributing an improved feeling in business to the general expectation of Republican victory. Dollars indulge no prejudice. When men are making calculations on which they are to realize profits or losses, they all reckon Republican victories a good thing for business. But no vote this fall cau immediately get rid of the pres ent tariff, though it may stop more legis lation of that sort. No vote this fail can give the workingmen at once their old wages, though it may prevent further decline. Nor can any vote give the country a better corn crop or higher prices for the immense surplus of wheat and cotton. The improvement which a vote can bring must therefore be prospective rather than immediate. The startling fact of the situation is that half a million gold was prepared for shipment last week, and may begin to go abroad any day, although the country has practically unlimited sup plies of cotton and wheat to sell at the lowest prices ever known. Enrops sends us more goods under the new tariff, but takes from us less of our products.

A Most Cordial Reception to the Boy King of Servia.

Ring of Servia, POTSDAM, OCL. 18.— Alexander, the 18-year old king of Servia, arrived here last veening from Buda Pesth on a visit to Emperor William, Great preparations had been made for his reception, and it was generally understood that this meant that his visit had political significance. The railway station was beautifully decorated. and a guard of honor was drawn up on the platform. The party waiting to receive King Alexander was a brilliant one, con-sisting of Emperor William and his sons, Baron Marschal Von Schellondorf, minis-

or of war, and the members of the general The emperor greated the king most cor dially, and after an inspection of the guard of honor their majestles drove to the alace, escorted by the guards. A grand rala dinner was given last night at the new palace. The emperor proposed the bealth of King Alexander. The latter, speaking in German, thanked Emperor William for the cordiality of his reception and said he heped the friendly relations between Servia and Germany would be between Servia and Germany would be further strengthened. He then called for three cheers for the emperor and imperial family. A reception followed in the Grotto saloon, which is thilaid with shells, with friezes of minerals and precious stones.

PRETTY soon we shall hear from Demo crats that ex-Speaker Reed is in favor of keeping the present tariff unchanged. The same Democrate, on no better ground, reckoned him in favor of free colunge of stiver. It would be well for them to go slow. A man who has brains does not utter all he thinks or knows in one speech. it is Mr. Reed's idea that the present tariff cannot be repealed by Republicans until the country gets rid of the President who refused to sign it. That may be a mistake. Oue certain thing is that Mr. Reed himself and itepublicans in Congress will try it whenever they get a chance. If they get a straight vote only two months hance on the question whether the absurdities and robberies, the blunders and infamiles of the present tariff shall be continued any longer, and whether the woolen duties and the income tax shall take effect next January, they will have Democrats for the motion who did not dare to vote against the tariff last August. There are states to be heard from on the subject which will speak quite distinctly. Lonisians will probably be heard, and likewise New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts. The Domocrats may rest assured that Mr. Reed will not be at all slow to plich the Democratic tariff into the waste-basket if he gets a chauce, and the voters will show whether they mean he shall have a chance. He reasons that the Democrats, however
