POLITICS IN TOWN.

Both Parties Preparing to Make the Fight Lively.

BRUNN AND J. B. ROBINSON

They Will Address a Mass Meeting in Robbins' Opera House To-night. New Republican Club.

The local political field is now in a pretty lively state, and from now until election day vigorous work will be carried on in all quarters. The committee that is making arrangements for the reception of Hon. Charles N. Brunn and Hon. John B. Robinson to-night held another meeting last night and the sub-committees reported they had met with excellent financial encouragement.

It is well that the arrangements for the parade to-night were not based on an elaborate scale, as the disagreeable weather would have caused much waste of time and money. The preparations are of such a character that the visitors will be received by a becoming escort. The main feature will be the meeting in Robbins' opera house, which will no doubt attract a large gathering, as Mr. Robinson is exceedingly popular with the people and an address by Mr. Brunn has been most ardently wished for by the working people of this section.

A new Republican organization is in the field and promises to be very influential in future campaigns. It has been in a course of quiet formation for several weeks and to-morrow night it will come forth fully organized. One hundred and three names have already been placed upon the roll and the members have been selected from the most prominent, influential and respectable men of the town. This club will be entirely different to any which has existed in the town, and when the membership is made known it will be seen at a glance that the material selected is of the kind which will have influence.

It will be a permanent organization, independent in the pursuit of its way, but devoted to the interests of the Republican party in national, state, county and local affairs. Promiscuous admissions to membership will not be allowed and any member who may attempt to use the organization to further personal aims will have the riot act read to him. The officers of the club, according to the assurances given, will be men who have joined the organization for the interests of Republican principles, and not as seekers of notoriety or a foundation for aspirations. Among the gentlemen who have been active in the formation of the club are Messrs. Daniel Ogden, J. J. Price, Moses Owens and William T. Trezise. A meeting will be held in Eddall's hall to-morrow evening and it is quite likely that the hall will become the permanent headquarters of the club.

There is reason to believe that there is not near as much harmony in the local Democratic ranks as some people suppose. Indeed, it is stated upon excellent authority that one of the best organized and most influential organizations of young Democrats in the town is just boiling over with anxiety to show that they do not propose to be caressed and petted at critical moments and cast aside at other times when they should be recognized. It is said that in one of the recent campaigns this organization worked like beavers for the Democratic ticket and it was through its work that a victory was gained, but when the club stepped forward at a time when it had a right to expect recognition it met with disappointment, or rather a brazen repudiation of promises. At the recent Democratic meeting held to organize a committee to make preparations for the reception of Governor Pattison, Candidate Singlerly and party some of the young men referred to were selected as members of the escort of honor. Several of these young men have openly declared that the use of their names was made without authority; that they did not attend the meeting, were not consulted in connection with it, and they do not propose to be pushed forward and pulled back whenever certain leaders see fit to manipulate the wires. There may be some fun yet.

A DUBSITE ARGUMENT.

The Evangelical Church Question Set Forth With Intelligence.

EDITOR HERALD—I have read with interest the opinion of the Supreme Court on the Evangelical Association church controversy. I have also read the pastoral address of the Bishop published in the Reading Eagle of October 5th, and Philadelphia Press of October 7th. It seems queer, after reading the opinion of the court carefully, that Bishop Bowman and his followers should believe that the civil court had vindicated them. It is true that the civil courts have entered judgment in their favor, but the moral victory is surely not with them. The Supreme Court says: "The action of Bishop Bowman and a few friends in organizing a rival conference was wholly unauthorized by the discipline; and the body so organized, not having a quorum of those entitled to sit as members of the East Pennsylvania Conference was an irregular body, without authority or ecclesiastical character under the discipline. The annual conference may sit without a bishop, and its acts be valid in all respects. A Bishop cannot sit with less than a quorum and make by his presence a legal conference out of that which would not have been such in his absence. If present he presides, but he is not a necessary part of the body; and his presence therefore with those who without him would be without authority, can add nothing to them. If there had been no division in the conference the presence of the bishop could not have given to a few of its members the character and power of a quorum. His conduct and that of his friends in suspending and expelling presiding elders and others was a clear usurpation of power and the sentences so pronounced had no force or effect. The bishop and a handful of adherents were in another place assuming the powers of a quorum and fulminating their orders and judgments with the utmost self complacency and in plain disregard of the discipline. The appointments made by this body gave no legal right to the appointees and imposed no legal duty on the congregations concerned."

Here, then, we have every question touching the regularity of the East Pennsylvania Conference decided in favor of Bishop Dubs' adherents and a most positive ruling of the Supreme Court as to the usurpation of Bishop Bowman and of the unlawfulness of the East Pennsylvania Conference presided over by him. How, then, does it come that the Supreme Court ultimately decides in favor of Bishop Bowman? In this way: The Supreme Court holds that the discipline confers absolute power on the General Conference, and that the civil power, the law of the land, cannot, even for the protection of property, compel the General Conference to abide by the plain language of the discipline. The General Conference is absolute. Whatever it decides must be accepted. Therefore, when the General Conference at Indianapolis decided contrary to the judgment of the Supreme Court, that the East Pennsylvania Conference, presided over by Bishop Bowman, was the regular conference, this ended the controversy. The whole thing seems very odd. A denomination has a written constitution in which the rights of parties are defined in the ordinary language used among men. The civil court interprets this language to mean one thing; but a majority of the preachers in the church, who are clothed with general powers, under the title of the General Conference, say that this language means something else, and their decision is to be final. It is not the first time that a conflict arose between decisions made by the civil tribunals and the ecclesiastical courts. In fact, the history of Christianity starts with a startling conflict of this kind. Pilate, the civil magistrate, when Jesus was brought before him, said: "I have examined him before you, and have found no fault in this man touching those things whereof you accuse him." But the ecclesiastical court, (the chief priests and scribes) cried: "Crucify him! Crucify him!" and then, as now, the civil court confirmed the judgment of the priests. The contrast between the two decisions is most remarkable. The ecclesiastical court decides the Bowman conference to be the legal one. The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania says it is illegal. The whole controversy then is reduced to this: Bishop Bowman, instead of being vindicated, is condemned by the highest tribunal in the state of Pennsylvania. His vindication comes from his own ecclesiastical court, presided over by himself. It was composed of preachers, and constituted, numerically, a bare majority of the Evangelical Association. The decision they rendered in his favor is contrary to the language and the spirit of the discipline. So the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania decides, but because their power is absolute, the Supreme Court says it must be respected by the civil court. Here is their language: "Whether the General Conference decided all these questions in the wisest manner is not now for consideration. Its decision settled the law for the Evangelical Association and we must recognize and apply it in this case." In other words, the Supreme Court finds that Bishop Bowman violated the discipline "in organizing a rival conference;" that his "conference was an irregular body, without authority or ecclesiastical character;" that he was wrong in contending that an annual conference could not sit without a bishop; that he

When the couple were parted the appearance of the woman caused great excitement, but what appeared to be gore streaming over her face, arms and clothing proved upon closer inspection to be vinegar and pieces of red beet which Mrs. Tinkalawicz had carried in a bucket and which became badly mixed with her person during the struggle. The woman was not seriously injured and had evidently held her own.

Petchulis was preparing to get away when Dobschis, his recent companion, rushed up and caused his arrest on a charge of larceny. Dobschis claimed that during the wrestling match he lost his silver watch, and the one pledged to the saloonkeeper was identified. Justice Toomey put Joe under $500 bail on the charge of larceny and $200 bail to answer at court for his little interlude with Mrs. Tinkalawicz.

Hebrews Celebrate.
Last evening being the close of the Jewish holiday known as Simchas Thora, or the anniversary of the receipt of the laws of God by Moses, the event was celebrated by an entertainment in Refowich's hall, and was patronized by all members of the local synagogue, as well as a number of Jewish people who are visiting friends here. Prof. Cussack, of New York City, gave recitations and impersonations which were heartily applauded; Miss Jennie Goldin gave very fine vocal selections, Louis Segel and M. Lightstone recited and Miss Lena and Mary Ginsky sang duets. After the concert a banquet was served. This is the first time for the Hebrews of this town to celebrate the day according to the customs of the native country. Mention must also be made of the violin solos by Master Harry Goldin and the vocal solo of Mr. L. Allshitz. The committee in charge of the arrangements was composed of Max Rabinowitz, David Levine, Levi Refowich and Dr. Hochlerner.

A Coming Attraction.
Many of our theatre-goers will hail with delight the appearance of "Tiso's Living Pictures" which Manager Ferguson has engaged for one night, Tuesday, Oct. 30th. A car load of pictures is necessary for the proper production of the pictures and the audience can feel assured that the same effects and properties will be used in our town that characterized their success in Europe and New York city the past season. Eight strong specialty acts will intersperse the pictures given by specially engaged European artists, making one of the strongest attractions booked this season.

GLEANINGS OF THE DAY.

FIRST WARD STREET SCENE

Joe Petchulis Gets the Best of a Man, But Met a Tartar in a Woman. Held For Larceny.

Joe Petchulis is the name of a First ward Lithuanian who seems to have been trying to run things with a pretty high hand recently. He is now under bail to answer at court to a charge of larceny and aggravated assault.

It seems that Joe and Charles Dobschis met in an East Centre street saloon and to make time pass as lightly as possible they indulged in a wrestling bout. Joe was the victor and after bowing acknowledgements to the applauding spectators who occupied seats on the surrounding beer kegs, he called for the drinks, quaffed the victor's cup and withdrew amidst bravos from all except the saloonkeeper, who with heavy heart sought the slate and chalked up.

The victorious Joe sought a saloon on East Lloyd street and after relating the details of the wrestling match to the proprietor produced a silver watch upon which he asked a loan of $5, which was granted. Joe stood at the bar when Mrs. Victoria Tinkalawicz entered the place and called for a pint of beer. Petchulis and Tinkalawicz required no introduction. They knew each other well and when the former invited the woman to have a drink she accepted.

After the glasses were emptied the bartender asked for his pay. Joe said the woman was treating and the latter said the man was responsible. In the argument that followed Mrs. Tinkalawicz dumped a bucket of beer over the man's head and the two then clinched. They fought ferociously and the bartender was glad when they rolled out the door to the street.

When the couple were parted the appearance of the woman caused great excitement, but what appeared to be gore streaming over her face, arms and clothing proved upon closer inspection to be vinegar and pieces of red beet which Mrs. Tinkalawicz had carried in a bucket and which became badly mixed with her person during the struggle. The woman was not seriously injured and had evidently held her own.

Petchulis was preparing to get away when Dobschis, his recent companion, rushed up and caused his arrest on a charge of larceny.
