LOVE'S LABOR WAS LOST.

Experience of a Mt. Carmel Man in "The Bowery."

HIS WEDDING DELAYED!

Seventy Dollars of Earnings Vanish Within a Few Hours, But Christmas Promises Soothes the Victim.

Among the people who stood at the sehigh Valley depot this morning await ing the arrival of the east bound trains was a Pole carrying a large, black satchel with a hole punched in the top. Tax Collector Scanlan eyed the man closely and stopped him as he went to get on a train. "You can't leave here until you pay you taxes," said the collector with a do-you-hear glance from the corners of his eyes. "All right, I haven't got five cents, do as you like," retorted the Pole in excellent English. Collector Scanlan interrogated the man as to his residence and was told an interesting story. The Pole's name was Andrew Wasgo. He arrived in town from Mt. Carmel yesterday with about seventy dol-lars in his pocket and at once caught his betrothed, a young Polish girl employed as a domestic in a First ward saloon known as "The Bowery."

Wasgo was cordially greeted by the girl and so much delighted was he over the reception that he went out and pur chased dresses, jewelery and other effects for a wedding. After delivering the purchases to the girl he went into the barroom and invited the crowd to drink to the health of himself and his intended bride. After spending some time in joliification he again sought the girl and found she had flown, taking the presents with With satchel in hand and a good load of beer Wasgo commenced a search of the neighborhood for his betrothed and eventually found her. She said she was willing to marry if given until Christmas to make preparations. This being agreed to Wasgo, the girl and the satchel returned to "The Bowery," and again the glasses clicked to the health of the couple. Sometime during the night Wasgo fell asleep. This morning he awoke and opened the satchel to get the price of an eye opener. To his dismay he found that somebody had punched a hole in the satchel and extracted $47, the balance of the capital with which he started out from Mt. Carmel to get married. Of course, no one knew anything of the rob-The betrothed wept in sympathy and renewed her Christmas promises Wasgo was contented. He had a ticket in his pocket to take him to Pittston where a job in the mines awaits him and starting for the depot he ran the arms of the tax collector. Scanlan at first looked upon the recital as a fairy tale, but Justice Toomey, who had become a listener, vouched for the facts. Wasgo exhibited his citizenship papers and said that, being a citizen, he wouldn't tell a lie. Scanlan told the man he could go and he boarded the train for Pittston. As the train pulled out of the depot he yelled from the car window to the collector, "Good bye, I'll set 'em up on Christmas. She's a bully girl."

CUT HIS THROAT.

A Hungarian Attempts to Take His Life in Despondency.

As the HERALD went to press a Hungarian named John Sitka was taken to the lockup with his throat cut almost from ear to ear.

The wound was made with a table knife and almost completely severed the windpipe. The man was alive, but apparently in a very weak condition. Dr W. W. Stein, the physician in attendance renounced the wound a dangerous one out not necessarily fatal.

Sitko was found by Constable Matt. Giblin, of the First ward, and John J. Rellly near the electric railway station at Yatesville. Their attention was called to the case by a motor man.

Sitko told conflicting stories. At on time he said be cut his throat because he was without home, friends or work. At another time be said he was murderously attacked by unknown men. The story of the attack is non-credited. Sitko has a wife and two children in the old country. He is apparently about 87 years of age, very poorly dressed, sickly looking and wears a false leg. He says he hadn't tasted food for several days.

What it Takes to Fill a Mine.

An idea of the immense quantity of water required to extinguish the fire now raging at Luke Fidler colliery, Shamokin can be obtained by considering that from 10,000,000 to 25,000,000 gallons have been run into the mine each day for a perio of thirty four days and the water is still 200 feet below the water level. The verti-cal height already filled with water aggregates about 650 feet, and 300 feet remain to be filled up before the mining experts will feel satisfied that the flames have been entirely extinguished.

Fresh oysters opened every day at the White House. Oysters in all styles prepared at short notice.

WORK OF THE BUILDERS.

Many Properties Undergoing Alterations and Repairs.

CHURCHES AMONG THEM.

The New Cherry Street Public School Building Will not be Ready Until Next Spring -Some Suggestions.

Workmen have commenced the removal I the buildings on the site selected for he new public school building, at the northwest corner of Jardin and Cherry streets. Judging from the progress thus far made no schools will be opened in the proposed new building before Spring. The school Board has bad its plans arranged for some time and is ready to put the builders at work on a moment's notice, but has been balked by the difficulty in getting the tenants to vacate, and now it must wait until the party who purchased the buildings on the land can have them re moved. By the time this work is accomplished the severe weather will be at band. The buildings to be removed are to be located on the south side of Cherry street, between Jardin street and Pear illey, directly opposite the St. George' Lithuanian church. It is an excellent location and the buildings being more han ordinarily attractive will add greatly to the appearance of the street.

Despite the hard times several congre gations have succeeded in eliciting suf ficient encouragement to warrant them is giving their churches a good fall over hauling. The Trinity Reformed church known as "the little church around the corner," has just passed through the hands of painters to good advantage. The exterior of the building and the frame work of the interior have been painted. The Primitive Methodist church and English Baptist churches are undergoing ex tensive alterations and repairs and will soon have quite an air of prosperity about them

The West Cherry street property recently purchased by Charles E. Titman the lumber king, now ranks with the best in town. The residences which for years had a weather beaten appearance have been transformed into most attractive structures and compare favorably with the best on that thoroughfare of home life. The buildings in course of erection on the adjoining lots are almost com pleted, and they, too, will rank in the dass of modern dwellings which are so much sought. Mr. Titman is becoming one of the most extensive property owners in the town and it is gratifying to se that he does not eater to the rookery style of architecture. H has a progressive spirit and can fathom the wants of the seople with great accuracy. This makes him the most substantial property owne in our midst, and in the end he will have something to dispose of, while the rook eries will be falling apart from the decay to which their poor construction will be an easy victim. One of the best streets in the town for idences is West street, north of Centre street, but many property owners in that section fail to realize it, or at least seem to. There are a number of excellent sites along that street now occupied by stables that could be made good investments through the erection of modern residences. It is remarkable that when houses are so scarce that such good opportunities should be allowed to slip South West street people have outstripped those of the north in progress and foresight.

The Ferguson House and Ferguson's Theatre buildings have been a subject of considerable comment of late. They are certainly in need of some dressing up, es pecially the theatre building, which is rapidly degenerating in appearance. The painter's brush would work a great improvement on the exteriors of both build ings. They need it badly. The interior o the theatre is mostly commented upon The condition is such that it seems ridica ous to refer to the place as an opera house If the property is an expensive one and does not bring in the revenue that it should, bare bricks and walls will never turn money in themselves. Take the theatre, for instance. Let it be theroughly renovated, renainted and decorated and let the bookings be of the "Eight Bells" and "Princess Bonnie" order and the people will soon raise the revenue. Comfort and first-class amusement will build up any theatre, even at high prices.

There is another public place that ex cites sympathy. It is Robbins' hall. The ideas upon which this place was erected were excellent, but the bases of the man agement is away behind the age, and as a consequence the hall is not near as popu lar as it should. There is a cold, deserted appearance about the place that chills one upon entering it. It is only when the pastimes have been worked up to a high pitch that the actual gloomy character of the surroundings is forgotten. Still as dilapidated as the hall is the owner delikely that is all be cares about. As in the case of Ferguson's theatre, however, more comfort to the patrons and more exertions to please their eyes would result in a largely increased revenue

Lloyd not bead. David Lloyd moved his family from this town to the Miners' hospital, at Fountain Springs, suffering from injuries sustained in the mines at Minersville. It is said the family was so poor that only the cost of moving the household goods could be paid for and the wife, husband and children walked from Frackville to Mineraville. To-day a report was received that Lloyd had died, but in answer to an inquiry from the HERALD the hospital officials stated the man was still alive and would probably recover. He is suffering from the fracture of an ankle and two ribs and a severe wound in the side. Lloyd was well known here on account of his active membership in choirs and male troupes, being a valuable voice in the or-
