AFTER ONLY A WEEKS ILLNESS.

How He Became a Leader in the Exclusive Set at New York, Newport and Saratoga, His Ancestors Were Society Leaders In the Time of Washington.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.-Ward McAllister, New York, Feb. I.—Ward McAllister, the society leader, died at his home, 18 West Thirty-sixth street, this city, last night at 9:30 o'clock. At the time of his death he was attended by his wife, his daughter, his son, and his brother, Rev. Francis Marion McAllister, Mr. McAllister was attacked a week ago with the control of the street o in the afternoon, when he recovered consciousness, which continued until his death. The funeral probably will take place from Grace church, this city, of which Mr. McAllister is a member

Samuel Ward McAllister was born 64 years ago in Savannah, Ga. He prided himself upon his southern birth, the length of his ancestry and his social suc-cess. His ancestors were great leaders in the time of Washington. For eighteen years he lived in Savannah. With his seventeenth century ideas of social exclusiveness he acquired the knowledge and belief which eventually controlled the doors of metropolitan society.

Leaving Savannah he settled at Newport, R. I., and made the fashionable popularity of that place. He was a leader of modish folk by nature and training. It was at Newport that he originated plenies which made him famous. Though rarely boastful, he used to say that the food served on those occasions could not be matched in the world.

To him wines were as plain as the let-ters in a book. He knew their history, the philosophy of them and their worth to the fraction of a dollar. He knew the rare vintages, and could tell on the ends of his fingers the few private houses everywhere they could be found.

Professionally Mr. McAllister was a lawyer, a graduate of Yale. He went to San Francisco in 1853, but returned east soon after and married Miss Sarah Gibbons, a lady of wealth and good position. Then it was that he settled in Newport.

The Astors, Chanlers, Samuel Ward, Marion Crawford, Amelie Reves, Julia Ward Howe, the Boston Appletons and Princes, the Paterson Bonapartes and the Massachusetts Parkers were all his rein

Death of Judge E. Rockwood Hoar. CONCORD, Mass., Feb. 1.— Judge E. Rockwood Heardied at his residence here last evening, aged 79. He was a brother of United States Senator George F. Hear, and a member of a family which had for years been prominently identified with public affairs. For nearly a quarter of a century he was a member of the board of trustees of Harvard college, being presi-dent of the board nearly half of that period. In March, 1869, Mr. Hoar was pointed attorney general of the United States by President Grant, and filled that office until June, 1870. He was appointed a member of the joint commission which negotiated the treaty between the United States and Great Britain in 1871. Mr. Hoar was a presidential elector at large in 1872 and was elected to the Forty-third congress as a representative.

Cherokee Bill Pleads Guilty. FORT SMITH, Ark., Feb. I.-Cherokee Bill was arraigned yesterday, and plead guilty. He was charged with the Red Fork robbery. He looks haggard, but had nerve enough to abuse his betrayers violently when he saw them in the court THEY WERE JUST TOO MEAN.

This Was the Trouble About Jim and Myra and the Gloomy Girl In Red. 'The world is bollow," remarked the girl in red. "It is," gloomlly assented the girl whose new gown does not fit, "but I don't see how you ever found it out."

"By accident, dear. It happened the day after the cards were sent out. I had a note from Dan saying that he must see me once more before I was Jim's wife. Of course I didn't really care for Dan, but it is soothing to one's vanity to know that the best man is dying of envy of the bridegroom, who has no idea of it."
"So you said you would see him?"

"I did. I felt that it would do Jim no barm if Dan did tell me once more that life was a blank without me, and it was really my last chance too. Still I didn't dare to let him come to the house."

"But where else could you see him?"
"At Myra's. She is to be maid of honor, you know, and Jim used to be quite devoted to her, so I knew she'd never dare to tell on tell on me lest people would think her

When I want advice, I shall know where to come for it,'

"Very well, do. Well, I didn't send her word that I was coming, for I didn't want anything down on paper. As luck would have it, just as I was starting Jim sent up a box of roses and a melanchely note saying that a business engagement be couldn't shirk would prevent him from coming up

"You were in luck."
"So I thought. Well, I just threw my self on Myra's morey. She wasn't a bit pleased, as I could see, but she saturated with the best grace she could. She said she would keep everybody out of the il brary so we could have a long, quiet even ing, and not to werry about her, as al-would probably have company."

That was nice of her. "That was also of her.

"Oh, very also. Dan came early, and we had a perfectly levely time. He benged me to clope the day before the wedding recited two poems about his despair and hinted at suicide. Oh, it was splendid! eried myself almost to a jeily. At about half past 10 I really couldn't stand it may longer, so I told Dan that we must go in and speak to Myra, for the front parlor was so quiet that her caller had evidently failed to come. So, after another eternal farewell, we went in."

Wall? "It wasn't well-it was ill! Myra's caller was there. He was Jim. He was holding her hand and bidding her goodby forever! Oh, was ever a poor girl so crucily decayed as I?"—Chicago Tribune

Old Families.

The most ancient family in France, in so far as the tracing back of the ancestry in an unbroken line is concerned, is the royal house of Bourbon, which goes back to Robert le Fort, in the year 861. Next an point of untiquity comes the Roban family, which for the last century, how-ever, has been settled in Austria, the se called Rohans in France being not really Rohans, but merely Chabots, their only connection with the house of Rohan bet. by marriage.

Then comes the house of Narbonne-Pelet, the head of which is the Duc de Narbonne, who can trace his lineage back without interruption to the year 910. Of course, in making this assertion, I do not take into consideration the somewhat mythical claim of the Duke of Levis-Mirepoly to be descended in a direct and un broken line from Jacob's son, Levi. has among his family pictures one old painting in which the Holy Virgin is represented as requesting the former Duke of Levis-Mirepoix to put on his hat, which he had defied in salutation, she being de-picted as uttering the words, 'Couvrez yous, mon cousin.' Another picture rep-resents an ancester of the dukes of Levis-Mirepoix navigating a small boat on the waters of the deluge, he being too exclusive and high toned to share the ark with the Noah family and its belongings.—Chicago Record.

The Mysterious Visit of Assistant Secretary Curtis to New York Bankers, Ostensibly to Gain Information, Said to Have Resuited in a Positive Agreement.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.-Assistant Secretary of the Treasury William Curtis, who arrived from Washington Wednesday night, rived from Washington Wednesday night, reached the sub-treasury shortly after 11 o'clock yesterday and held a conference with representatives of the leading foreign banking houses in this city, including August Belmont, who represents the Rothschilds; George F. Crane, of Baring, Magoun & Co., Ernest Thalman, of Laderberg Magoun & Co. denberg, Thalman & Co.; James Speyer, of Speyer & Co.; Isaac N. Seligman, of Seligman & Co.; Maurice Wormser, of Wormser & Co., and Mr. Meyer, of Lazard Freeres. Mr Belmont, on leaving the sub treasury, went directly to the office of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., and had a private talk with the head of the firm, re-turning with him and going into conference with the assistant secretary.

The three had an extended discussion behind closed doors. At 2:20 o'clock Mr. Curtis left the sub-treasury by a rear door. thus avoiding the reporters, who had not been able to obtain access to him at any time during the day.

After the assistant treasurer had gone Sub-Treasurer Jordan accorded the representative of the Associated Press an interview. He said: "Mr. Curtis came on from Washington as the representative of the secretary of the treasury, to obtain in-formation needed by the department, and he has left for the Capitol with his mission accomplished, but nothing has been sold and nothing has been bought. It is a fact that he came to discuss the question of placing a government loan. As to the story of a sterling loan, there is nothing in it." Mr. Jordan would say nothing further on the subject. It is confidently expected in financial circles here that a new bond issue will be announced within a few days, and the amount of the loan is generally estimated at $100,000,000. It is known that the foreign banking interests have expressed thomselves in favor of a 4 per cent. bond, hence it is believed that long term i's will be issued at a price that will yield the purchaser 314 per cent.

There is excellent authority for saying that Mr. Curvis was vested with authority to do more than ascertain the views of the New York bankers. All-those with whom he conferred were representatives of the leading financial interests of Europe, and the men who took the most prominent part in the conferences is Rothschild's edited with having formed a syndicate of foreign houses to take the entire $100,-000,000 loan, with the understanding that $75,000,000 shall be placed abroad and $25, 000,000 at home. The gold to pay for the bonds will come, it is said in great part, if not as a whole, from home sources, but without recourse to the United States treasury. It is known that Mr. Curtis communicated by telegraph in cipher with Secretary Carlisle during the day and re-ceived a reply, but the nature of the mes-

A member of a foreign house which was represented at yesterday's conference stated to a representative of the Asso-ciated Press that the negotiations for a government loan had been practically completed on the terms given above, and that the official announcement may be looked for at any moment. He also said that August Belmont was taking the part in regard to the proposed loan which President Stewart, of the United States Trust company, took in floating the re-cent 5 per cent. loan. This gentleman hinted that after the conference at the sub-treasury had closed Mr. Curtis held a secret session with Mr. Belmont, at which pretty definite terms were made.
