PRETTY STATE OF AFFAIRS

Davis' Run Reservoir Considered by the Borough Council.

WOMELSDORF'S STATEMENT

He Shoves the Responsibility for the Material Used in the Work on the Borough Council.

The Borough Council held a special meeting last night to take action on the discovery of a leak in the breastwork of the reservoir at Davis' Run. The meeting was of short duration and it is not likely that any steps will be taken in the matter until after the new Council organizes. While this was not decided upon, the inclinations of the Council seemed to drift that way.

A communication from Mr. Womelsdorf, the engineer, was read and its purport is to practically shove the responsibility for the break in the breastwork upon the Borough Council. Of course, the Councilmen do not agree with Mr. Womelsdorf and his letter was subjected to considerable criticism.

The engineer states that the material used in the breastwork was faulty and not of the character that should be used for such work. One of the most striking passages of the letter is that in which the engineer tells the Borough Council that the proper material should be found and used if the borough wishes to use the reservoir. This is taken as a sweeping condemnation of that part of the plant and quite naturally it has occasioned inquiries from all directions as to why the proper material was not used in the first place. The engineer says he advised against the material that is now in the reservoir and, consequently, he is not to blame. But, on the other hand, it is pointed out as a matter of record that when a part of the works was being constructed the engineer not only objected, but practically stopped the work until the responsibility for any trouble that might follow was fixed. Why he did not act with the same work on the reservoir now complained of is a question to be decided later. The Councilmen claim he should not have allowed the work to proceed when it did not meet with his views, as he had full power in the matter.

Mr. Womelsdorf's communication concluded, "We can never rely upon the reservoir to hold water until the clay material is removed and the good masonry material, such as we used in the construction of the distributing reservoir, is substituted." This, some of the Councilmen say, means a practical reconstruction of the reservoir.

After some discussion Mr. Gaffigan moved that the water committee be directed to investigate the leak in the reservoir and make any repairs deemed advisable at once. The motion was carried.

A Troubled Drummer.

A traveling salesman who sells cigars called upon Constable Phillips yesterday and offered him $5 for the recovery of a sample case containing 8,000 cigars which the drummer lost the night before while intoxicated. Phillips visited a number of saloons without success and, as a last resort, visited the Lehigh Valley depot, where the case of samples was found. The constable got his five dollars and the drummer left the town happy.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Pithy Paragraphs From the Pens and Pencils.

WORTH SOME ATTENTION!

People Who Have an Income Tax to Pay Will be Interested—Points on the Newspaper Business.

It sounds strangely, indeed awfully, that whenever a young woman is missing from her home the almost first thought that strikes the parents and friends is that she has been murdered. There must be and there is a cause for such an apprehension. It is the fact that of late years many girls have been enticed from their homes and have been foully dealt with. It was not always thus, therefore the frequency of such crimes is well calculated to create a feeling of alarm and dread whenever there is such a disappearance. Just why there are so many tragedies of the kind referred to becomes a serious question of deep importance. It argues a condition of things that is alarming, and as the offenders in such crimes are almost invariably young men of well ascertained evil habits, should not parents be more careful as to the persons with whom their daughters associate? There is grave risk in permitting the attentions of young men whose habits are in any sense of the libertine order. This idea will of course be rejected by many parents whose daughters have visitors of that class, but their opinion on the subject does not in any sense impair the soundness of the suggestion made.

Under the provisions of the income tax act those persons subject to its pains and penalties must file their returns for the year 1894 by the first Monday of March, and must make payment of their taxes on or before July 1, 1895. While incomes of $1,000 are exempt, the law requires that every person whose income for 1894 amounted to $3,000 or over must make a return to the collector of the district in which he lives, giving in detail the sources of his income and the total of his gains, profits and income, and also the deductions to which he is entitled—all of which details will be found comprehensively covered in the blanks to be had of the collectors. As the amendment to extend the date for filing returns to April 15th also includes some other changes of regulation with respect to the mode of computing a person's income, it would be as well for those who are subject to the law to wait and see what shape it shall finally take before filing their returns. But they would better procure the blanks and enter on their liability—a task which, in some instances at least, will put a strain upon the intellectual if not the moral faculties.

There is no line of business in which phases of life are more strongly contrasted than in the newspaper business. This was impressed upon our minds with more than usual effect yesterday when we turned our attention to the festivities attending the marriage of two of our friends immediately after recording the obsequies of the deceased member of the staff of our contemporary, the Sunday News. This contrast furnishes food for reflection by the people who are not in the business, but imagine that they could run a newspaper to perfection. It is all very well for people to boast of how they would seize an opportunity to "spread out" on this or that particular subject, but let them get down to the undisciplined, practical work of getting out a daily newspaper and handling subjects humorous, sentimental and otherwise, as they come along, and see where many of them will land. The great trouble with most people is that they labor under the impression that newspaper staffs are always divided into corps and each has its special line to follow, such as the snake editor devotes his whole time to serpentine fancies, the society editor does nothing but feast his eyes on the belles of social circles and their elaborate wardrobes, when he is not satisfying his appetite with the delicacies of the season served at the posts to which he is assigned, etc., etc., but this fallacy soon dies when the real work presents itself and the pencil pusher finds that as soon as he finishes reducing his impressions of Mrs. Gardner's conservatory to writing he must hasten down the street to learn the particulars surrounding the splitting of John Hardluck's head with a brick and present them with all the gory details; and, when he gets through with that, sit down and write a half column article on the Lenten season and its observances.

Has Sued For Libel.

Jacob Steinberg, of Mahanoy City, was a visitor to town to-day. Mr. Steinberg has brought a libel suit against Thomas J. Joyce, publisher and editor of the Mahanoy City Daily American, for the publication of an article on Wednesday last of which the following is an extract:

"On Centre street, a few doors below Catawissa, lives a tough-visaged, beetle-browed representative of the race that drove the spikes through the outstretched hands of Christ that held him on the cross. This man's name is Jacob Steinberg. His mission on earth seems to be the extraction of money from ignorant foreigners by selling them watches and clocks that never keep time of any kind and jewelry that he represents to be made of the finest gold 'so help me main Moses,' but which will scarcely hold its color of bronze till Steinberg pockets the victim's money. Steinberg runs an adjustable 'jewelry' store at his residence, and if a sucker calls, Jacob has merchandise to display but when the constable calls to make a levy, Steinberg's stock disappears. He has figured in almost every police court in this town, he has been kicked and battered by the people whom he has victimized, but he comes to the surface every time in a new disguise."

Mr. Steinberg was engaged in business in Shenandoah for two years and in Gilberton for one year and he will call upon the people with whom he transacted business in these places to prove when the libel suit is tried that he never defrauded any one.
