A British Steamer Reports Having Seen the Vesset in a Disabled Condition, and the Captain Believes She Could Not Survive the Storm.

Maprin, March 10.-In the charaker of deputies Prime Minister Sagnsta said that while no information of the cruiser Reve Regente had been received the government has not abandoned hope of he ultimate safety. In an interview Admiral Beranger states that in 1882 he or dered the overweight of the deck guns of the cruiser to be rectified. Reports have Geen received of forty bodies having been washed ashore on the Spanish coast during the recent storm. None of them were men belonging to the Reine Regente. The Spanish cruisers Isla de Luzon and Alfonso XII have carefully searched the waters of the Spanish and African coasts and the straits, but have found no trace of the missing warship. There is a rumor that a British vessel had found her in a disabled condition on the African coast and had taken her in tow. This rumor, however, is not credited, as it cannot be

The warship had lost her funnels and bridge, and was laboring heavily in the high sea and flerce gale which were prevailing. She was apparently unmanageable, but as she did not ask for assistance the Mayfair did not offer any. The captain of the Mayfair is of the opinion that the Reina Regente could not long have survived the storm in the andition in which she appeared to be at

The government is accused of keeping back news of the ship and of hav-ing ordered the detention by the censors of all telegrams giving information of her. It is more likely, however, that the government is as badly off for definite news of the missing ship as the public. The optimistic portion of the public are of the opinion that the cruiser has been driven into the Atlantic by the storm, and is either disabled or short of coal.
