Worth Trying.
"It's remarkable how people go to extremes," said a man the other day. "Some are good, I suppose, but I prefer the medium course myself, that is outside of one thing. For months I had indigestion and if you'd seen me last August you'd have thought death had me marked. I got so I couldn't eat. I tried this meat business, and hot water, and I don't know what else. I fell off from 160 to 110 pounds and was a wreck. A friend told me how he'd cured himself without a cent for a doctor: Eat nothing but crackers and milk or cream, and drink chicory or carbonic water. After the first meal you eat, you'll be hungry in another hour. Repeat, but mind, nothing else. The crackers are flaky, and the gastric juice in the stomach easily digests them, the aerated water helps and milk tones it all. I tried it. It was tough at first, but in three weeks I had a new stomach. In six weeks I was well and gained twenty pounds."

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, a medicine that every family should be provided with. For sale by Graham Bros., Drugists.

Does This Mean You?
"The Saunterer" in the Altoona Tribune gets off some good things and here is one of them: The man who spends not less than $20 a year for tobacco complained yesterday that he could not afford to take a daily or weekly newspaper or a monthly magazine. "They cost too much," he exclaimed. "I wouldn't mind paying 50 cents a year for a real good paper, but I draw the line at that. If I can't get one for that sum I'll do without." And then he walked into a handy pool room, which had a bar attachment, and dropped two or three dollars. In the meantime his children are growing up with vacant minds, and since they find few attractions at home are rapidly learning the lessons of the streets.

"I have used Burdock Blood Bitters in my family for two years. It is the best medicine I ever used. It cured me of erysipelas in very short time; also cured my son of scrofula after the doctors had failed." Louise S. Woodward, Laurel Hill, Fayette county, Pa.

Our "Harry."
Henry Wise, of South Oak street, is probably the oldest musician in this or any surrounding counties. He was the teacher of the Grant band at Shenandoah for 15 years. He also played on the streets on 41 consecutive St. Patrick's Days. While he was in the army he marched up and down the camp grounds on St. Patrick's day and tooted "taters and fishes" when they had nothing in the camp but hardtack.—Mt. Carmel News.

Of Ben Haskey.
J. Harry James has the following kind words to say, in his paper, the Ashland Daily Local, of our late townman, Ben Haskey: Mr. Ben Haskey, a well known citizen of Shenandoah, will be buried tomorrow. He was a great favorite with his numerous acquaintances. He was a socialist of some merit and was one of the best lullabed singers in this section. The writer of this had the pleasure of spending several weeks with him in London, during the Queen's Jubilee in 1887, and we shall always recall our association with him, with the most pleasant remembrances. Ben Haskey was of a kind disposition, well read both in history, and literature generally, a modest companionable gentleman. Peace to his ashes.

"Shore Acres."
Denman Thompson, the author of "The Old Homestead," said to a well known New York manager the other day: "I went to see James A. Hearne's play 'Shore Acres' three times in one week. The first time I had seats, the second time I had a box, and the third time I stood up all through it." This is the fourth year for this great play and many predict it will continue to be popular even in the twentieth century. There are a great many people here who remember "Hearts of Oak" which Mr. Hearne wrote many years ago and often played here. "Shore Acres" is even a better play and none should fail to see it at Ferguson's theatre on Wednesday evening, May 22d. This will be the last play of the season.

Evidence in the Emma Hall Case.
LONDON, May 17.—The chief of police of Detroit has applied to the police of Blackheath, England, for the letters in the case of Emma Hall, whose death at a lying in hospital at Detroit was a result of trouble growing out of her relations with Rev. Jonathan Bell. The letters, three in number, were one from Emma Hall to her cousin, Joseph Hall, in which she confesses her trouble, but does not name the author of it, and one from Emma Hall addressed to Rev. Mr. Bell in Boston, in which she informs him that "you will never be betrayed by me." The other letter was written by Mrs. Lane, keeper of the Detroit hospital where Miss Hall died. They were in the possession of the Associated Press, and will be sent to Detroit.
