WHEREAS, The all-wise God has taken from us, our late brother, the lamented Jeremiah Connors who had been a member of our Society since its organization on Nov. 1, 1870, and who, during those twenty-four years and more, has been a noble example in his resolute and unbroken adherence to the good cause of temperance and total abstinence and in his untiring efforts in the promotion of our Society's interests; therefore

Resolved, That in the death of Jeremiah Connors the Annunciation Catholic Total Abstinence and Beneficial Society, of Shenandoah, Pa., parts with one of its oldest, most influential and esteemed members and the community a worthy citizen; that in his life of usefulness may be found the lesson that perseverance to the end assures success.

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered on the minutes of the Society, that they be published in the EVENING HERALD and Sunday News, that an engraved copy of them be presented to the family of the deceased with the assurance of our sympathy at their irreparable loss, and that the charter and hall of the Society be draped for a period of thirty days as a token of respect for the deceased.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Callinette, Druggist, Beaversville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it. Get a free trial bottle at A. Wasley's drug store."

DETECTIVE AMOUR ARRESTED.

An Arrest by Him Will Result in a Test at Court.

Yesterday afternoon County Detective Amour arrested David Semansky and Charles Baumgardin, charging them with peddling without a license. Baumgardin was discharged by Justice Williams and the case against Semansky was settled upon payment of $8.75 costs.

Last evening Amour was arrested on charges of assault and battery and false arrest preferred by Baumgardin. Amour waived a hearing before Justice Cardin and entered $300 bail on each charge for trial at court.

Mr. Amour stated last night that Semansky and Baumgardin went about the town yesterday selling linens. They had the goods loaded on a carriage, which was in charge of a driver. He arrested them and Semansky said he would settle the case by paying the costs. As the witnesses in the Baumgardin case could not be secured in time the justice dismissed the case.

Mr. Semansky claims to come from Dresden, Germany, but assigns Hazleton as his present place of residence. He says Baumgardin is his assistant. Mr. Semansky also says that he is protected in his calling by the Inter-state Commerce law. He will consult legal advice to see what relief he has in the form of a suit for damages. Mr. Amour says that Semansky and Baumgardin were peddling and that District Attorney Ryan has stated that the Inter-state Commerce law has no bearing upon the law regarding peddlers. The law Mr. Semansky relies upon was recently considered in Connecticut in the original case against John Lynch, agent for the American Wringer Company of New York, for peddling without a license. The case was reported as follows:

The defendant demurs to the information because the statute under which he is prosecuted is null and void as being contrary to the provisions of the constitution of the state of Connecticut and to the constitution of the United States.

In support of the demurrer, Attorney Lawlor made a strong argument. The statute, he said, was enacted in 1893 and there had been but one test case before the Supreme Court, the city of Rockville, against Conlon Bros., who, when doing a transient business in that city, were arrested. They demurred, and the demurrer was overruled. Then the case was taken to the Supreme Court where the demurrer was sustained and a decision rendered that makes the whole section null and void. Attorney Lawlor then submitted the decision in the Conlon case to Judge Root, who took some time in examining its contents.

Prosecuting Attorney Russell said nothing to sustain the state.

Judge Root said that he would sustain the demurrer, and Mr. Lynch was discharged.

This means that license laws designed to prohibit and stifle outside competition for the benefit of local store keepers, although ostensibly enacted for the protection of the public, will not be sustained by the courts, and that the constitutional rights of any man to make a living in any occupation not harmful to the health or morals of the community, must not be interfered with under any pretext for the benefit of local dealers with whom he may compete.

A decision of the U. S. Supreme Court, written by Justice Brewer, has recently laid down broad rules in relation to state restrictions, as applied to interstate commerce in particular, which rules state legislatures would do well to follow in shaping license legislation.

1. A manufacturer of goods, who carries on his business of manufacturing in one state can send an agent into another state to solicit orders for the products of his manufactory without paying to the latter state a tax for the privilege of thus trying to sell his goods.

2. A regulation as to the manner of sale of subjects of commerce whether by sample or not, whether by exhibiting samples at a store or at a dwelling house, is a regulation of commerce.

3. Whatever may be the reason given to justify, or the power invoked to sustain the act of the state, if that act is one which trenches directly upon that which is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the national government it cannot be sustained.

4. The police power cannot be set up to control the inhibitions of the Federal constitution or the powers of the United States government created thereby.

5. Nothing which is a direct burden upon interstate commerce can be imposed by the state without the assent of Congress.

6. A license tax required for the sale of goods is in effect a tax upon the goods themselves.

7. A license tax imposed by a state upon an agent of a citizen of another state for the privilege of selling his goods in the former state, is a direct burden on interstate commerce, and therefore beyond the power of the state.

8. No state can levy a tax on interstate commerce in any form, whether by way of duties laid on the transportation of the subjects of that commerce, or on the receipts derived from that transportation, or on the occupation or business of carrying it on.

A State Senator is quoted as saying that another law is now pending before the Legislature. It should be drawn on constitutional lines, or not at all, and if it comes before the Governor he should veto the bill if the legislative power of the state is again prostituted to tax one class for the benefit of another, and stifle competition for the benefit of local interests.

Local authorities should also remember that the lines are now clearly drawn on these matters, and that an unconstitutional law does not protect them from false imprisonment or damage suits.

Style!

Is a different thing from fashion. The two ought to go together, but sometimes they don't. There's mighty little style about some fashions. Real style improves any one's appearance, but some fashions would make an angel look silly. All our goods are right in this season's latest fashions, and, better still, they are in true "style." Every pattern in our stock has been selected for that genuine artistic quality which causes friends to exclaim, "So becoming to you!" Mourning goods a specialty. Prices lower than any other millinery in town.
