THE STORY OF A BUTTON

HOW A GAY MARRIED MAN WAS RUN INTO A HOLE BY HIS SHREW D WIFE.

She Smilingly Beguiled Him Into Acknowledging a Convincing Piece of Evidence of the Charges Made Against Him.

A well laid and carried out scheme on the part of a deceived wife has caused an eruption in the domestic relations of one of the well known families of town, although up to the present time there have been no divorce proceedings, or other like public developments in the case. The wife was so much elated by the success of the scheme that she could not keep the story within the precincts of the household, and it was so clever it will bear publication.

The wife had her suspicions against the moral deportment of her spouse aroused by the tales of neighbors. For a time she treated the stories as grist from the mill of idle gossip, but by close observation and diligent inquiry she at last satisfied herself that there were grounds for the reports. Finally she openly charged her husband with infidelity, but he met the attack with a broad front of injured innocence and the wife faltered.

For a time there was peace, but the continued gossip caused the wife to renew her vigilance. It was to no purpose, however. She could secure no more proof than before. She knew her spouse went to a certain house of ill repute only from reported gossip. Suddenly a bright idea struck her and she lost no time in putting it into execution. She secured the co-operation of a male relative who induced a female inmate of the house of ill repute to cut a button from the erring husband's coat. The button was placed in the wife's hands and a few days ago the husband remarked that he had lost a button from his coat. "Is this the button, dear?" asked the wife with a sweetness that hadn't the slightest touch of suspicion in it. The spouse readily recognized the button and was then told how and when it left the coat. The husband has also been telling the story with the comment that it was one of the cutest tricks he has ever seen played.

"Dicky" Morgan Told a Fib.

Mr. William L. Torbert wishes it understood that the statement made by our Shenandoah correspondent that the first price he asked for the land for the site for the water dam from the borough of Shenandoah was $5,000, is untrue. His first claim was $20,000. The award is less than half the price he demanded. Mr. Torbert, as our correspondent stated, is not criticized in this matter. He did what any other man would have done to determine the matter, appealed to court, and there is no intention to reflect upon him in any way. It would be highly unjust to do so. It is very natural, however, that Shenandoah people should kick against an award which they believe to be excessive, just as Mr. Torbert would probably do if he was in their place.—From an editorial in the Mahanoy City Record.

Williams is the outside foreman of the colliery and John Shirey the assistant outside foreman. The engineers are William Linkhost and Daniel D. Evans.
