

OVER AN EMBANKMENT

A TROLLEY CAR LEAVES THE RAILS AT MILL CREEK.

POTTSVILLE, June 3, 1895.

Trolley car No. 2, in charge of Conductor Harry Eckenrode and Motorman Edward Keating, ran over an embankment at Mill Creek Saturday afternoon, and landed on its side in Norwegian creek. The car carried seven passengers when the accident occurred, but only one, Dr. T. J. Birch, was painfully injured.

W. G. Skinner is one of the best known men in Wakefield, Mass. He is a war veteran and everybody's friend. He says: "I had rheumatism and was in poor health a long time. Indications pointed towards the accumulation of impurities in the blood and germs of disease. I was constipated and had no appetite. I evidently needed a good blood purifier and decided to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. It made a change all through my system, gave me an appetite and worked effectively on my blood. I am now perfectly well, my blood has been put in good order, thanks to Hood's." W. G. SKINNER.

A STRIKE AT MOREA.

Deputy Sheriffs Sent to the Scene to Place Leaders Under Arrest.

Hungarians and Italians employed by Contractor McAdam to change the line of the Pennsylvania railroad at Morea, struck on Saturday. This morning the men evinced a disposition to commit violence. Sheriff Scott was called upon for assistance and a half dozen special deputies were sent to the scene armed with warrants for the arrest of the ringleaders. The men are being paid $1.10 per day, and demanded $1.25.

Contractor McAdam says the strike is not really for higher wages, but is a subterfuge resorted to by the men to get wages before pay day so that they can go to the Clearfield region, where some new work is being opened. The wages are not due until June 15th, but the men think that by striking they will make the company pay them off to get rid of them. This, Contractor McAdam says, will not be done.

A Paper's Acknowledgment. From today's Miner's Journal.

To two gentlemen of our county who made it possible for this newspaper to retain its reputation of publishing the latest news at the earliest possible moment the Journal desires to express its sincere acknowledgment and gratitude. The one is Guy C. Irish, Esq., of Mahanoy City, the efficient and able manager of the P. & E. & P. Telegraph Company and one of the publishers of the Weekly Tribune, who was the first to notify the JOURNAL editors that a fire was raging; and he connected us with that other prominent citizen and very able station agent of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, P. J. Ferguson, Esq., who detailed to us the facts of the serious calamity which had befallen his home town. By the prompt action of these two gentlemen the JOURNAL was able to give to the public a very interesting account of a very important event, which might not have been received until too late for our regular morning edition.

No Assistance Tendered.

The HERALD on Saturday made acknowledgments to the newspapers that so generously tendered it the use of their plants after the fire. We observe that an exchange says the Sunday News made a similar tender. The News was not included in our acknowledgment for the reason that no such tender was made. On the contrary, one of the proprietors made a demand upon us for payment of an account, and he was promptly paid.

May be a Fatal Jump.

Peter Stenuis, a Pole 30 years of age, was dangerously injured last evening by jumping from a rapidly running electric car at Wm. Penn. He was anxious to get off and jumped before the motor man could stop the car. He struck a telegraph pole with such force that two of his ribs were broken and his head was badly out and bruised. The man was rendered unconscious and remains in that state at the Miner's Hospital.

Special Council Meeting.

A special meeting of the Borough Council has been called for this evening to take action towards connecting the private properties with the public water works.

A Runaway.

An axle of one of the Shenandoah Feed & Lumber Company's wagons broke on Saturday and the horses ran away, smashing the vehicle. Allen McCutcheon, the driver, jumped from the wagon and escaped injury.

Will Open a Store.

Mrs. Isabella Holland, widow of George W. Holland, will open a grocery business at her residence 227 North Bowers street, this week and hopes to receive a share of patronage from her many friends.

The Lockup Filled.

The paid police and constables were kept busy Saturday night and yesterday arresting drunks and disorderlies and landing fifteen behind the doors. One of them was a woman. She was released after a short confinement on account of the baby she carried in her arms having the croup.

SHOPPING IN EUROPE.

Women the Managers of Most of the Notion and Specialty Stores.

Outside of the large European shops of national fame a stranger hardly knows where to ask for his or her wants. The small shops include everything, but what things in what shops is the puzzle. In a small German town, when mosquito netting was asked for at a general dry goods store, the inquirer was directed to a small notion, or what the English term is "thread and needle," shop for it. When found, it was wrapped in a newspaper, and a large pin served in the place of twine. This sounds primitive, but no one would think of complaining of the parcel's appearance, except "those particular Americans," one of whom did protest most energetically against it.

The glove shops are very small, but also well fitted up with one or two counters, comfortable seats, a decorated window and mirrors. Why is it that so many shops show mirrors directly opposite a customer, when she does not require the aid of one in her purchase, unless the idea is to keep her in a good humor? In London one of the best glove sellers hangs down stairs and gloves and fans above. They also show glove boxes, stretchers and powder shakers in the same cases with gloves. Men sell the gloves here and only try them on when requested to. Only warranted gloves are exchanged if they rip or tear when first putting them on, and only the best qualities are warranted.

In Paris much of the same custom prevails, though the chief shops are larger, one on the Boulevard des Italiens having two windows. No better gloves can be found than are sold at the Bon Marche and Louvre, where the glove trade is immense, but the small shops have also an excellent trade. Many of the costume houses sell gloves to match each dress, which takes trade that may be called high class and higher priced. While the salespeople do not offer to try on gloves, they will do it when requested to, and all first class gloves are exchangeable under the conditions prevailing here.

Berlin abounds in glove shops, also Vienna, Hamburg, Dresden, and Munich are at least two best ones, selling a prominent make manufactured in the outskirts of that city. Women are the clerks here and are very prominent in the mercantile circles of Europe, especially in France, where they seem born with a business tact and faculty unknown to other nations. In Berlin the display of dark red plique gloves in a pretty window was marked "New York style." Europe did not take kindly at first to large buttons, but now they are pronounced very chic. The fashion of keeping gloves of all sizes loose in a large package that was noticed in several German shops does not favorably impress an American accustomed to the neatly wrapped and boxed gloves shown in this country.

What we call notions—needles, thread, dress stays, pins, bindings, etc.—are considered small wares and haberdashery in Europe, the latter term being common in London. Threadneedle street in London probably received its name from the small wares of "thread and needle" shops that were there in bygone days. Such shops are universally carried on by women, and often the owner does dressmaking or plain sewing.—Dry Goods Economist.

Soldering Aluminium.

One of the drawbacks to the general use of aluminium has been the difficulty of soldering it. Many persons have entirely failed in their attempts to unite aluminium and other metals or to join two pieces of aluminium. A film of oxide formed upon the surface of the metal seems to be the cause of the nonadherence, and this all ordinary methods have heretofore failed to remove. Recent experiments have brought out new methods, and a compound of 50 parts of tin, 25 of aluminium and 25 of silver makes a solder that has thus far worked admirably. It is necessary to keep a clean metal surface, and this can be done by heating the aluminium to be united until the solder can be kept in a soft state for an instant after contact with the plates or sections. This causes a coating of the solder to adhere to the surface of the metal, and no further trouble is experienced. It has been suggested that the outside of aluminium articles that are to be put together should have a coating of this solder applied to their edges. If this were done, the difficulty would be removed, as the coating, already firmly fixed, would need no further preparation.—New York Ledger.

Coins of Enormous Size.

When the area and square inches of surface are taken into consideration, the largest coins ever issued by any government on the globe were those put into circulation by Sweden during the sixteenth century. These mammoth pieces are neither round, square, oval nor octagonal in shape, but are great irregular slabs of copper described as "resembling pieces of a boiler after an explosion." The smallest piece issued under the law which authorized this gigantic coinage was an irregular rectangular slab of about 12 square inches of surface and about half an inch thick. It was worth 30 cents. The largest of these copper slabs is stamped in several places on the face, the various inscriptions giving the date, denomination, etc. The $4 piece mentioned last above is nearly an inch in thickness and weighs four pounds, lacking a fraction.—St. Louis Republic.

Are Sailors Safer Than Landsmen?

Judging from the number of people who are annually killed in the streets of London, the Atlantic ocean is far safer than the bustling Strand or Chesapeake. There are over 100 people killed every year from accidents in the streets of London, to say nothing of the number who are killed in the streets of other large towns. Over 5,000 persons are annually injured in London in connection with the traffic of the streets. The late Mr. Thomas Gray of the board of trade marine department stated some time ago that a man is safer at sea in a fairly good ship than anywhere else. "There are more lives lost," he said, "among miners from accident than among sailors and many more among railway employees."—London Tit-Bits.

A Scheme For Comfort.

Friend—Why are you so enthusiastic on the subject of women's suffrage? Mr. N. Joy—The elections always come in the spring and fall, don't they? "Certainly." "Well, get 'em interested in the campaigns, and they'll forget about housecleaning."—New York Weekly.

Much of the pretended olive oil imported into this country is made up in large parts of peanut oil pressed from African and Indian peanuts. Peanut oil is not only very good to eat as a salad oil, but is an excellent base for fine soaps and valuable for illuminating purposes.

HOWARD GOULD TO WHOM?

An English Rumor That He is Engaged to an Actress.

LONDON, June 2.—Miss Gould is that other member of the Gould family to take a wife from over the footlights. She says that Howard Gould is engaged to Katherine Clemmons, who captured England by her skill in horsemanship and her experience with the pistol as a member of Buffalo Bill's Wild West show. She has been in Europe for some time studying for the stage. Of late she has been living in grand style and has been much seen in young Gould's company at public and private functions.

It is also said that Miss Clemmons has a new play which she will produce before long, and that the funds necessary to stage it have been guaranteed by Howard Gould. New York, June 2.—Miss Katherine Clemmons comes from California. She is still in the twenties and is a handsome blond. She has courage, nerve and probably dramatic ability. She loomed up in England some years ago as the protegee of Buffalo Bill and as a remarkable rider and driver. She also expert with the pistol. Miss Clemmons tried to act while in England, and, becoming infatuated with the stage, displayed wonderful nerve by making her professional debut in this country a year ago as a star at the Fifth Avenue theater, in a play which she wrote. The venture was a disastrous failure.

Miss Clemmons was not daunted and endeavored to turn defeat into victory by producing "Mrs. Dascot," by General Lord Brice and Stanislas Stanga. This was an awful fiasco. Colonel Cody, who was backing her, was said to have lost $20,000 or $30,000. He refused to put up more money, and Miss Clemmons remained here for a long time a prominent figure at "first nights." She was persuaded, however, that she could become a star and finally went to Europe to study.
