FINE GROCERIES.

201 West Centre Street. Dealer in groceries, flour, provisons, teas coffees etc. Good delivered free PUNISHING CHILDREN.

How It Should and How It Should Not Be Performed.

The abuse of punishment is more dan-gerous than the greatest indulgence. At the present day we have outgrown the harsh methods of the past. Corporal punishment is almost entirely excluded from our schools. The burt occasioned by cor-poral punishment is not to the body, but to the mind. It is, after all, the mind that

But this is not all. In appealing to the mind we treat the child as a rational creature. This is a claim of the child that we cannot ignore. Corporal punishment is one sided. Besides corporal punishment, as herees Street has a light or street had a light or street has a light or street had a light or street as Herbert Spencer has shown, is associate ed with man in the childhood of the world. It is the savage, who has not pa-tience to reason or explain, who strikes. Corporal punishment can seldom be administered without passion. When we show excitement, we give signs of weak-ness. Then the boy or girl becomes conscious of a power over us. This is a temptation to youth.

The danger of corporal punishment, therefore, is that we can soldom adminis-ter it without losing our head. On the other hand, we cannot appeal to the rea-son without becoming more reasonable.

Besides corporal punishment there are other punishments that are not justifiable. To shut up a child in a dark room is to spur its imagination into wild fancies. Darkness is a bad companion. It will contract and terrify the child. Denying chil-dren the necessary amount of sleep or food, exposing them to the inclemency of the weather, withholding from them for too long a time the tokens of affection, treating them as strangers, or as enemies, or ignoring them altogether—these are measures that do more harm than good.

Punishment should be of such a nature that, if necessary, the parents may share it with the children. The child must know that it cannot suffer alone physically, much less morally. Its suffering brings suffering to others. This is the lesson that will develop the social element in the

In the second place, we must correct the faults of the child by its virtues—that is to say, the strong qualities of the mind must spur the weak faculties into play. If a child be physically strong, but morally weak, let the parent hold up to view the two sides of its nature until the physically strong child shall be ashamed of its meral cowardice. - Journal of Ethics.

SHE WAS A NEWCOMER.

And She Didn't Know That It Wouldn't Do to Say "Women."

She was a newcomer to that little middie class elique. Her husband was of their set, but he had married her in a dis-tant city, and there were rumors that she had been an actress or something else dis-graceful. The other ladies in the progressive enchre club couldn't understand her ways, and even their husbands were suspicious that she had not always moved in society so exalted. Finally she was caught red handed, so to speak, and thereafter was ostracized by these smug Philistines. I tell the story of her downfall as it was told to me by Captain Adoniram Perkins, whose house is filled with red plush furni-ture and 86 etchings, and who is therefore generally respected on —— street:
"I always thought she was a low bred thing, but we had no proof until the last meeting of the club. Then she forgot her-self and spoke of the other ladies present as 'women.' My wife wanted to take it up as an insult, but I pitled the poor thing, and so we concluded not to invite her or her husband to any more of our doings It's rough on her husband, of course, but maybe it serves him right for marrying a woman without any refinement. What's that? 'Lady' has been worked to death, and 'woman' is better form nowadays!

Oh, go on! You're kiddin, Nobody but a female who goes out washing by the day is a woman. Why, our hired girl would quit if we didn't speak of her as a lady." -Buffalo Express.

Curiosities of Literary Worship.

The most extravagant instance of literary relic worship on record is said to be that of a well known Englishman, who constantly wears, in a small locket attached to a chain around the neck, a portion of the charred skull of Shelley. Of late years a great many persons have visited the former residence of the late Victor Hugo to see a tooth of that celebrity which is kept in a small glass case with this inscription: Tooth drawn from the jaw of Victor Hugo by the dentist on Wednesday, Aug. 11, 1871, at Vianden, in the gardens attached to the house of Mine.

Koch, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon."

In the year 1816 a touth of the famous Sir Isaac Newton was sold at auction by a relic monger of London and was purchased by an English nobleman for a sum equal to $3,650 in United States currency. The buyer had a costly diamond removed from a favorite ring and the tooth set in The wig that Sterne wore while writing

"Tristram Shandy" was sold at public auction soon after the great writer's death for the sum of £2,000, and the favorite chair of Alexander Pope brought £1,000 at a sale in 1822 .- St. Louis Republic,

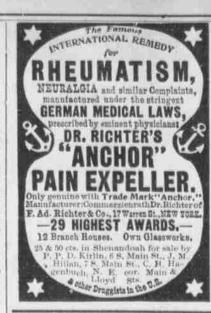

Damage by Lightning Increased.

Damage by lightning is unmistakably increasing, according to the director of the statistical office of Berlin. Various causes are assigned, such as the employment of electricity in various industries, the con-tinual change of form of the earth's surface by deforestation, drainage, etc., and the impurities introduced into the atmosphere by the growing consumption of coal. Professor von Bezold some time ago showed that for Bavaria the fires due to lightning increased from a yearly average of 82 in 1833 to 1843 to 182 in 1880 to 1832, while the number of persons struck by lightning and of those killed rose from 134 and 73, respectively, in 1855 to 185 and 161 in 1885. An interesting fact noted is that persons struck generally perceive neither lightning nor thunder, but receive the impression of being enveloped by fire. -Boston Transcript.

Tongs.

Tongs were said to have been invented in China B. C. 1122, but representations of them have been found on the Egyptian monuments B. C. 2200. In India they are claimed as in use since B. C. 900, and their principal employment in that country, where fires during the most of the year are superfluous, was to facilitate the handling of dead bodies in the funeral pyres. Seventy pairs of tongs, some bronze, some iron, have been taken from the rules of Pompeli.

"See here, Midgely, when do you pro-pose to pay that bill?"
"Confound it, I proposed last night in order to pay all my bills, but she wouldn's have me."—New York Recorder.

Killed in a Wreck.

John Williams, of Lost Creek, last night returned from Buffalo, N. Y., where he attended the funeral of his son, Evor Williams, who was killed in a ratiroad wreck at Buffalo last Saturday. George Williams and John Williams, of Lost Creek, brothers of the deceased, also returned last night from attendance at the funeral. The deceased was 25 years of age and left a wife and two children. The widow was formerly Miss Wilson, of this town. Williams went to Buffalo a few years ago and secured a position as brake man on the Lehigh, Valley Railroad. He subsequently became a fireman and was engaged as such at the time the wreck occured. His body was found under his engine, badly scalded and roasted.

The "Old Boy" Tells Stories of the Days When He Was Young.

A veteran of Harvard college, dwelling yesterday on old student times, recalled that the late Josiah Cooke, although so liked by his students in general, was very unpopular with them in his earlier days on one point, owing to his having intro duced the requirements of written reports duced the requirements of written reports in his lectures. One day the students put up on the bulletin in the university (this was 40 years ago and more) a forged no-tice that there would be no recitation in the mistry that day. They got 'Old Hill,' the janitor, on their side. The hour comes, professor takes his seat, not a man there. Out he rushes, me is the janiter. "Why, what does this mean, Hill?" said he. "Where are the b s?" Mr. Janiter walks over to the bulleti ... "Didn't you put up a notice that then would be no recitation today?" "I? No, of course not. Go right around to the rooms of the students and call them together." But not a student was "in." They had been watching the conversation, "and the subsequent pro-ceedings interested them no more."

The same "old boy" told a new story of Professor Sophocles. He had announced to his classes that they need never wall for him if he was five minutes late. This was intended to be a hint and a lesson : them in punctuality. One day they waited five minutes. No professor. Out they filed and met him at the door. He took out his watch, looked at it, looked over at the clock on the First Parish church, looked again at his watch, then with a gesture of disgust lifted his arm and smashed the offending timeplece on the pavement. Among his pupils was one gifted with his pencil, who took his like-ness so admirably—long hair and wild monastery look and all—that the students went to Boston and had it lithographed and deputed one of their number to take him a copy. If they expected a scene, they were disappointed. He was delight-ed. "It civilized him," said the old grad-

As for old Benjamin Pierce, he of the leonine mane, at that time he was carrying on a great controversy on the nebular hypothesis with a foreign savant. "There were only three or four of our class," said the Harvard gentleman, "who took the higher mathematics, and when we had other engagements and did not feel equal to preparing for a recitation we would get together and say, Well, let's have a little of the nebular today. The outcome was as calculable as an eclipse. All that was necessary was for one of them to tap the topic of the nebular hypothesis. The learned gentleman would immediately overflow on the subject, of which his mind was full. At the end of the hour he would look at his watch and say, Well, I clare, gentlemen, the hour's up. We tried this time and again. It always turned out just so."—Boston Transcript.
