THE POLICE CHARGES.

Investigated by the Lamp and Watch Committee.

THE TESTIMONY PRODUCED.

Joseph Temple Says he Saw the Police Drink Beer—The Accused and the Alleged Beertender Deny the Story.

The lamp and watch committee of the Borough Council met in the Council chamber Saturday night to investigate the charges made at the last meeting of Council by Councilman Gable against Chief of Police Tosh and Patrolman Walaitis. It is believed from the result of the investigation that the committee will make a report in favor of the accused officers.

The investigation was attended by Messrs. Gaffigan, Kerns and D. R. James, members of the committee, Councilman Gable, Joseph Temple, who was the informer, and the accused policemen.

Temple stated that on the night in question he drank beer out of the same keg in the Columbia brewery from which Tosh and Walaitis received beer, and that the officers drank three glasses each. He said he stood but ten feet from the officers, but they did not see him, and that the beer was handed out by a man named Clark, an employe of the brewery.

Clark was sent for and appeared. He denied every part of Temple's story and said he saw Tusch at the brewery several times, but not at the time stated by Temple. Once Tush called him from bed to attend a horse which was sick, and another time Tush called on legal business.

Councilman Gable asked the character of the legal business and Clark refused to state it.

Temple said his reason for reporting the officers was because Tush had reported that some of the firemen were drunk at the recent big fire.

Clark said the police never got a drink of beer at the brewery that he knew of.

Policemen Tush and Walaitis emphatically denied the charge. The former said he courted the fullest investigation that it was possible for the committee to make. He asked if there were objections to the police taking a drink, or two glasses of beer, and said he would swear that Temple never saw him take a glass of beer either in the brewery, or any other place in the county.

Chief Tush now has his war paint on and says the police would like to know if the P. & E. C. & I. Co. keeps men to watch the police, and if men employed by it drink free beer while in their working clothes and should be at work on the night shift, are not subject to investigation.

Too Much Pop.

A South Jardin street family was aroused from slumber Saturday night by the report of an explosion, followed by a shattering and falling of glass. The racket occurred in one of the lower apartments of the house and for some time none of the occupants would venture down stairs. A council was held and it was concluded to wait until the burglar would show himself at one of the bedrooms and then shoot him on the spot. After waiting for some time for the supposed intruder to appear the head of the family made an exploration and discovered that a bottle of home-made root beer left on the table had exploded and shattered a $12 hanging lamp.

No foreign flags are to be carried in the parades or displayed in any of the other public celebrations of Independence Day in San Francisco this year. Only the Stars and Stripes will be carried or flown. There was much general discussion over the point before it was settled in this way. Representatives of many organizations wanted to have foreign flags carried in company with the American flag, but public sentiment settled that Independence Day is an American Day, and only Stars and Stripes have a right to recognition in its public celebration.

Michigan has passed an anti-treating law. It prohibits a man from asking another to take something at a bar, and also provides a penalty for the bartender that sets a drink before a customer when the drink is paid for by another person. Saloon patrons who like to drink alone will be pleased with the new law, as under it they can walk boldly into a place and call nonchalantly for their refreshments, without fear of having to buy drinks for the whole house, whereas under the old condition they were obliged to sneak off stealthily down side streets for their quaffs, or to do a lot of peeping and reconnoitering before entering a saloon. It will be a hardship, though, on the thousands of Majors and Colonels that hang around drinking resorts waiting for the call to arms. These and the "Don't care if I do's" will have to find some slick way of evading the law, or their tonials will soon be hung with cobwebs, and a dark brown aridity will decorate the domes of their mouths.

Caught at Last.

John Talbuski was placed in the lockup yesterday by John Jones and Policeman Kerwin. Talbuski has been a fugitive for several weeks and was arrested while walking along West Oak street, upon being recognized by Jones. One night during the early part of May, while Chief of Police Tush was patrolling South Main street, he ordered a burley Pole to desist his noisy conduct and go home. The latter turned on the officer and dragged him into a saloon. A struggle for several minutes continued between the officer and his assailant. Talbuski was in the place and attempted to strike Tush with a poker, but hit Jones. The saloonkeeper and Tush's assailant were arrested, but Talbuski succeeded in keeping out of the way until yesterday.

Pay-Day Crop.

The pay-day crop of drunks was up to the usual number Saturday night. Fourteen reposed upon the wooden benches in the cells. One of them was a woman named Anella Longofski, who was put in on a charge made by her husband that she got drunk and wrecked the household goods. Anella is still serving time for the blow she rendered the coming woman foul.

A Dog on a Run.

A large, yellow, bob-tailed dog scoured the residents of West Coal street and Apple alley yesterday morning by running about with froth dripping from its mouth. A number of people chased the animal and it disappeared in the neighborhood of the Kehley Run colliery. It is said it bit a number of cats and a dog.

Important Matters Which the People Talk About.

COMPLAINT ON THE LOCKUP

A Little Breeze in Educational Circles. School Directors Make Some Discoveries That are Not Pleading—Election of Teachers.

Much indignation is expressed over the condition of the lockup. The complaint not only comes from people who have been compelled to serve time in the cells, but from people who have escaped that misfortune and have had occasion to visit the place. A gentleman of the legal profession says the borough runs a risk of suits for damages by maintaining such a place for imprisonment. He says that while the law does not expect that inmates of the place shall be provided with upholstered couches and that the floors of the cells shall be covered with velvet carpets, it expects that a place of imprisonment shall be such as is fit for a human being, and the present quarters are certainly not up to that standard. The complaint is certainly not without justification. The authorities must admit that the lockup is a disgrace to the community. It has been such from the time of its erection. In the first place, it is too small. There are times when prisoners are packed in the cells like swine and all grades are mingled. The police themselves are ashamed of the place and there have been times when their conscience compelled them to convert the Council chamber into a prison. As a model for sanitary regulation the lockup is a complete failure and as a place for securely confining prisoners it is no better. This has been shown by the number of escapes during the past year. A desperate criminal with a desire to escape can afford to laugh at the locks and bars, and several of them have done so. It would be well for the authorities to give a new prison some consideration.

The School Board will hold a regular meeting next Wednesday evening and an election of teachers and janitors for the next school term will take place. It promises to be interesting. There are twenty applicants for appointment as school teachers and twenty-three for janitorships, besides the applicants now filling the positions. There will be two vacancies in the corps of teachers. Mr. Scheuing and Miss Lebe will not be applicants for re-election. The former has gone to Philadelphia to study pharmacy and the latter retires from the profession in contemplation of matrimony. It is rumored that the rules of the board so far as they apply to the teachers will be rigidly enforced during the next term. This, it is said, is due to a discovery by some of the School Directors that advantage has been taken by some of the teachers. It is claimed that during the past term schools were frequently dismissed before the proper time and that some teachers have been sharing in the wages paid substitutes for teaching in their absence. The ground is taken that the share of wages a substitute surrenders to a teacher belongs to the board; that if a substitute is willing to take a teacher's place for $1.50 a day the board should not be required to pay $3.

The test of the public water works pipes has again been postponed. The contractor was unable to make arrangements in time for this morning, but says he will be ready at any time after nine o'clock tomorrow morning. Meanwhile reports have gained circulation that portions of the Kehley Run colliery workings are caving in and endangering the pipe line leading from the reservoir. The Borough Council will meet tonight and the situation will probably be better understood when the Superintendent reports.

A Gala Day.

Efforts are being made to have the demonstration of next Thursday eclipse any celebration of the Fourth of July ever held in Shenandoah. The features in preparation are many and unique. It is proposed to cause all other gala days to sink into insignificance. The ideas and suggestions offered to and accepted by the committee, and to be carried out, will present a series of attractions, which cannot fail to charm and please the citizens of Shenandoah, as well as the large delegations from surrounding towns who will come here to enjoy the show. The Columbia Hose Company will hold a picnic on the Fourth and Fifth and will have a grand fantastic parade of its own on the latter day.
