A MYSTERIOUS CASE!

Was Daniel Sweeney Killed by the Freight Train?

A BUCK MOUNTAIN PROBLEM

The Story of the Affair as Told by Two Companions Who Were With the Unfortunate Man.

Daniel Sweeney, a well known resident of Buck Mountain and having a large circle of friends in Mahanoy City and this town, was killed on the Philadelphia & Reading railroad early yesterday morning near the eastern outskirts of Mahanoy City. The circumstances of the man's death are shrouded by mystery, although it appears quite certain that he was struck by an early morning freight train. Yesterday was spent in investigating the case, but nothing more than conjecture has resulted.

The body was found beside the track at a place known as Gorman's siding by the engineer of a shifting engine. The back of the head was crushed in. Sweeney was a fine looking and powerful man. He was 37 years of age, six feet tall and weighed 190 pounds. He had been employed at the Buck Mountain colliery for about six years. On his person were found a silver watch and chain, while in his trouser pocket was found an English two-shilling piece and a nickel. His inside coat pocket on being examined revealed a membership card of Division No. 3, A. O. H., of Mahanoy City, and the name Daniel Sweeney. A photograph of a little child, taken in Philadelphia, and two checks on Buck Mountain colliery were also found in the pocket. Sweeney was single and has a brother residing in Germantown and a sister residing at Mauch Chunk. They have claimed the body.

The mystery surrounding the accident is increased by statements that Sweeney was not accustomed to drink and was always a careful man in walking along the railroad. He frequently warned his companions to be careful in walking along the tracks.

The men who seem to have been the last to see Sweeney alive are John Love and Dennis Tolan, two residents of Buck Mountain, and the later Sweeney's room mate.

These two men have told their story to the authorities. They say that they were walking from Mahanoy City to Buck Mountain, along the P. & R. railroad, at 8.30 Sunday night, when they met Sweeney and upon his invitation they turned and accompanied him to Mahanoy City, where they remained until ten o'clock. At about 10.30 they arrived at the Gorman turnout and Sweeney left his companions and went into the bush. Love and Tolan walked leisurely on until they reached the water tank, near Buck Mountain, where they sat down to wait for Sweeney. They waited until 12.30 when Tolan said, "I guess Dan has gone to sleep in the brush." Both started for home, being sleepy and tired themselves. On leaving the tank they were passed by a freight, but had heard no sound of a person in distress. They went on their way home, having no more thought of their comrade until they received the news yesterday morning.

Mr. Reese Complains

EDITOR HERALD:—I wonder if the School Board has learned a lesson from Council? Proposals were advertised for 150 or more desks. Three bids were put in. Max Reese, who represents the Oxford Perfect Automatic school desk, Mr. Evans of the Western Desk Company, and Mr. P. J. O'Neill, of the Bloomsburg Desk Company. The bid of Max Reese was $2.33 for each desk, Mr. Evans $2.50, and Mr. O'Neill, $3. The highest bidder, of course, got the contract, although Mr. Reese promised to send them a desk equal to any they had, and if not satisfactory, they would not need to take it, and the company guaranteed each desk for ten years. Now, my dear taxpayers, what is the use of advertising for proposals when one of the committee gets up and states "we know what we have; let well enough alone?" What a smart argument. The committee on school furniture were Conry, Hooks, Edwards and Lee. Lee was chairman.

MAX REESE.

THE NEWS GLEANINGS.

An Exciting Afternoon Scene on Main Street.

HORSES MAKE A WILD DASH

One of Them Has a Timely Fall. Station Agent Martin Stops a Young Thief in a Flight With Money.

A sensation was caused at the corner of Main and Centre streets yesterday by a team of horses plunging madly towards the drug store at the northeast corner and threatening to drag a load of lumber into the place.

The team was in charge of P. J. Flaherty and got beyond control. As the horses dashed along west Centre street the lumber on the wagon they dragged after them thundered like artillery and store keepers ran out from their places to learn what all the racket was about.

Flaherty, the driver, was exerting all his energies to halt the speeding horses and his mouth was moving in a manner that showed he was shouting to the team, but what he said was drowned by the noise of the bounding lumber and the spectators lost the benefit of his articulations.

Flaherty had difficulty in retaining his seat, as the lumber kept his body moving up an down like that of an acrobat on a spring-board. The horses dashed on to Main street and made a bee line for the drug store. Some women in the neighborhood shrieked with fright and covered their faces with their hands to avoid seeing a disastrous mixture of horse flesh, lumber, drug clerks, soda water and toilet soaps and a mutilation of the "After taking" man's smiling photographic countenance, but just as it reached the curbstone one of the horses fell and before it could regain its feet both horses were captured by men who were near the scene.

He Was Striking Out.

A small boy in tattered clothes and with dirty face and hands presented himself at the ticket window of the Pennsylvania depot with a ten dollar bill and asked for a ticket for Philadelphia. Agent J. H. Martin eyed the boy suspiciously and asked him where he got the money. The answer was not satisfactory and Mr. Martin concluded to investigate. The boy accompanied him up town and after some questioning admitted that the money belonged to his father. The boy's home was located on North Bowers street, where the mother was found. She said the money had been stolen. Judging from the seance indulged in between the mother and son after they got together to consider the matter the boy will not be able to sit on a railway car seat, or anything else, for several days.

THOUGHTS OF THE MOMENT.

As Paragraphed by the Pen and Pencil Men.

A good tin roof is better than all the lightning rods. Shenandoah has plenty of tin roofs, and for that reason lightning seldom strikes in the borough, because the electricity is distributed over the surface of the metal.

One who is careful of his umbrella always opens it when it is wet and sets it somewhere, handle down, to dry; or, if this is not possible, he stands it closed, handle down, instead of with the tip down as is usually done—a practice which results in the accumulation of moisture in the thick gathers at the top and the subsequent rotting of the fabric.

Not all the bicycle ordinances now being passed so plentifully all over the country are designed to regulate the cyclist and their doings. One recently passed in Chicopee, Mass., imposes a fine of from $2 to $20 on any person throwing in any street, lane or alley, ashes, glass, crockery, scrap iron, tacks, nails, or any other articles liable to cause injury to the tires of bicycles.

Under a new ordinance in Griffin, Ga., a barroom in that town may not connect with another room, and must have but one doorway, for entrance or exit. Even if the proprietor of the bar lives in the building in which it is situated, he must have a separate entrance to his house, and from his bar must go out into the street in order to get into his home. The object of the ordinance is obvious.

With the thousands of new recruits in cycling, the touring season will doubtless be unusually active. It is generally the case that the new recruit is seized with a burning desire to take a long trip abroad, and sooner or later finds himself with a party bound for some point of attraction, say a hundred miles away. Such journeys invigorate the mind and the body as well, if taken in a leisurely manner. The cost is small, well within the means of the average man, and, if he fails to reap a harvest of health and recreation, it is his own fault. A vacation spent abroad riding through the country is truly a good investment.
