CONCERNING INSANITY.

Some of the More Popular Fallacies on the Subject Exposed.

At the meeting of the Science Club Dr. F. B. Wynn read an interesting paper on "Popular Fallacies Concerning Insanity." The paper was written in a popular vein, devoid of technicalities, and was enjoyed. Dr. Wynn spoke from an experience of about six years in the hospitals at Logansport, Ind., and Dayton, O. He treated humorously the exaggerated ideas of insanity entertained by most inexperienced persons and recited incidents of sheriffs bringing weak and emaciated persons to hospitals in heavy manacles. The general idea that the insane person is possessed of herculean strength, with wild, glaring eyes, was shown to be in most cases false. The appearance of the lunatic generally does not differ materially from that of those not considered insane. Under acute maniacal excitement the power of endurance does seem greater than normal. The degree of waste, however, is just as great. That the patients often die of physical exertion indicates that the power of endurance is more apparent than real. The proportion of violent and demonstrative patients found in asylums day after day will not exceed one to 100 hundred population. Insanity does not cause as much suffering on the part of the individual as is commonly supposed, as a mental attack is generally supervised by what might be termed an exaggerated phlegmatic state. —Indianapolis Journal.

An Appetizing Dainty.

A canape, as we all know, is designed to be a stimulant to an appetite that has already been well fed. It is designed as a paving stone, so to speak, to some unctuous wine that has been held back to crown the feast.

A rare old port, a lovely brown sherry, are the merry accompaniments of a canape as devised by the chafing dishes.

This is how to prepare for a party of eight.

Take 3 ounces of Roquefort cheese, a tablespoonful of chopped parsley, one teaspoonful of chopped onion, a pony of best cream, a pint of butter, a spoonful of paprika, a pepper spoonful of best cayenne. Mix thoroughly. Add cognac if necessary. Reduce to a thick paste. Serve on toasted cracker. —Philadelphia Press.

Rod Mill Men Demand an Advance.
CLEVELAND, July 26.—Yesterday was the day set by the union rod mill workers of America to make a demand for the restoration of the wages paid in 1910. In this city committees from the union called upon the officials of the various works and notified them that they would be given until Aug. 1 to grant the rod mill an increase of 15 1/2 per cent. The matter was taken under advisement by the various companies. It was stated that a similar demand had been made from all the other mills in America. It will affect many thousands of men, and should a strike be declared it will paralyze the rod mill business in this country.

Killed While Resisting Officers.

Last night he ended up a carousal by beating his wife, and when the officers went to arrest him he opened fire, which was returned. Suddenly Spelly sank to the floor bleeding from the neck, but he clutched the revolver until he died.

FEW KNOW ABOUT THE SHAKERS

AN INTERESTING, GOD-FEARING PEOPLE WHO HAVE GIVEN THE WORLD MANY IMPORTANT DISCOVERIES.

We may not accept their peculiar religious beliefs nor can we enter into the spirit of their sacrifices. It is not necessary to believe as they do, but we can and do respect their sincerity of purpose and the honor and uprightiness which marks all their business dealings. The Shakers have always been successful inventors and some of the greatest of the conveniences of the present day found origin in their settlements.

In one particular they excel all other orders or classes of men, and that is in the cultivation of medicinal herbs and plants and their preparation for use. They have made it a study for more than a hundred years. It is one of their peculiar industries. Their lives have been devoted to it. Their latest and greatest achievement is the Shaker's Digestive Cordial. It is not offered as a cure for all diseases. It does not pretend to be, but one disease it will cure, and that is indigestion.

It is so effective in curing those who use the remedy that they are loud in their praises of it and in consequence a large demand for the cordial has been created. Sufferers resort to this medicine, not long to wait to see the result. The effect is almost immediate. The first dose usually gives relief and if continued a permanent cure will follow.

It not only contains already digested food, but it digests food as well, thus making a general system. An interesting pamphlet is now being issued by the Shakers and can be had for the asking at almost any drug store.

SHOWED THE ARMY HOW TO DO IT.

A Young American Officer Instructs His Captors in Loading Guns.

The average wide awake, self-assertive American who meets in their own ball-wickets Central American officials does not, it must be confessed, feel for them a profound respect. A young American officer who was ashore down there once when a periodical revolution was in full bloom was riding along a street on a donkey. He wanted to catch a railroad train, and he peacefully steered the donkey up to the gate of the station.

A sign there announced that donkeys, wagons and other such hostiles were not allowed to enter the station. The young officer read the sign and then, drawing up his legs so that he could thump with his heels the donkey's sides, proceeded to guide his little charge through the gates.

One of the favorite resting places of a Central American army is a railway station. At this particular station was gathered the usual army.

It might have been a force of ten men or even a dozen, but it was an army, lieutenants, captains, colonels, general and all.

When the donkey and the American tried to storm the railway citadel a great howl went up from the army. Several regiments of one man each advanced upon the bold ranger and called upon him to halt. Then they informed him that he was a prisoner of war.

The American got off the donkey and explained that he wanted to board a train. The regiment announced that this was impossible, as he was a prisoner.

"All right," said the American, "good-by," and he started to walk away. This caused a tremendous excitement throughout the regiment, which immediately set to work to load its gun, while another regiment threatened to prod the American with a bayonet.

The regiment which was trying to load its gun seemed to afford a great deal of amusement to the American. The regiment was fumbling with the cartridge and vainly trying to throw open the breech of the rifle, while the American watched the proceeding for a time with a good natured smile. Then he stepped close up to the regiment.

"Here," he said, snatching the gun away and taking a cartridge from the belt which encircled the gallant regiment, "let me show you how to do it."

He threw open the breech quickly and deftly, slipped in a cartridge, snapped the breech back into place, and holding out the gun to the regiment made a low bow.

"There!" he said, "that's the way to do it. You see, it's very easy when you know how."

And then bowing again "Good day" he sauntered into the station with a careless smile on his face, while the army stood dumfounded and then retreated. —New York Tribune.

The Naming of the Dolphin.
An old story, but not a bad one, was told the other day by an officer of the navy, who heard the argument repeated in it. While General Arthur was president, and during one of the summers of his administration, he was on board of the Dispatch at Newport, and Secretary of the Navy Chandler was pestering him to consent to naming the new dispatch boat, afterward the Dolphin, the Concord, after the first battle of the Revolution. General Arthur was disposed to quiz Chandler about his proposed name. He preferred the name Dolphin as being more suggestive of speed at sea. When Chandler argued the importance of keeping in mind the heroic resistance of the colonial militia and the brilliant opposition offered to Pizarro's men, General Arthur asked him:

"What is it that you propose to call this ship?"

"The Concord," answered Chandler, giving the approved New Hampshire pronunciation.

"There," retorted Arthur, inviting the attention of Captain Keeler. "Do you hear that? Conquered. Do you think that a good name to give a ship-of-war? Then suppose you change the pronunciation and call it Concord, just as spelled. Does it not strike you, Chandler, that there is a degree of Concord in the presence of a vessel of war?"

The new ship was called the Dolphin, but the Concord appeared after General Arthur had ceased to have influence in naming the ships of the navy. —New York Times.

CURIOSITIES OF MARRIAGE.

A Great Many Widowers and Widows Remarry, Sometimes Twice.

It has been remarked that times of speculation are invariably accompanied by an increase of marriages. Dr. Farr, the eminent statistician, hazards thereon the suggestion that it is the spirit of speculation itself that leads many to embark on matrimony at such times. Another reason, which he is careful not to ignore, is the increased prosperity that induces and sometimes seems to accompany what he calls the periodical epidemics of speculation.

A great war, after it is over, is good for marriage. So is a good harvest, so is the establishment of new industries, or the extension of old ones. The reason is the same in all these instances—the increased prosperity of the general body of the people.

So intimately is matrimony associated with national well doing that it has come to be styled the barometer of prosperity. Its indications, however, are more for the future than for the present dealing rather with the expected and anticipated than with the actual. But this only goes to substantiate what was said of marriage as a speculation.

The nation is sometimes extraordinarily sanguine, and when this is the case marriages are plentiful. Great popular leaders inspire this feeling. A statesman of genius at the head of affairs perceptibly increases the marriage rate.

In a word, the great fluctuations in the marriages are the results of peace after war, abundance after dearth, high wages after want of employment, speculation after languid enterprise, confidence after distrust and national triumphs after national disasters.

Autumn is the favorite season everywhere. With few springs is preferred. Hall the weddings throughout the country are celebrated on Wednesday and Thursday. Saturday has more than its average number. Friday is not a favorite, as few marriages are celebrated on that day.

Widowers are more inclined to marry than bachelors. Widows are more inclined to marry than spinsters. Both facts are eloquent in favor of the comparative advantages of matrimony. For one bachelor that marries between the ages of 50 and 65, seven widowers remarry between those ages. These are marriages out of equal numbers of each class. The actual number of bachelors married will be greater only in proportion as they exceed by seven to one the actual number of widowers living at these ages. Under the same conditions, for every spinster married between 30 and 65 two widows are remarried. Inasmuch as the total number of spinsters far exceeds that of widows, and the figures given refer to marriages out of equal numbers, this disparity is not so noticeable.

Its existence, however, is beyond dispute. Similarly, out of an equal number of widowers and bachelors between 25 and 30 years of age, 30 widowers remarry for every 13 bachelors who enter the bonds of Hymen for the first time.

Finally, one in ten of the survivors of the young men now living and one in eight of the young women now living will die as bachelors and spinsters if they live to the age of 80 and upward, besides the great numbers who died at younger ages. —New York Dispatch.

The largest diamond ever found in California weighed nearly eight carats.

Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but kept getting worse. I sent her this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy. —Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by Grubler Bros., druggists.
