SATURDAY was a field day for Senator Quay, and with each succeeding twenty-four hours the political horizon becomes brighter for the Junior Senator. Before the 28th of August, the day upon which the convention will be held, the fight will be practically over, and there will be a cordial assent to Governor Hastings' election as the presiding officer of the convention, and an equal unanmity in the selection of Senator Quay as chairman of the state committee. The Republicans of the state will never submit to the leadership of such men as constitute the combine, and L'itle Gilkeson's ambirion will thus be nipped in the bud. Quay has thousands of Republi-

When the miners of this city heard of the outrage they assembled on the public square and decided to march in a body to General Manager Dazell's house and demand of him the discharge of every colored man in Location. A brass band was secured and the mob repaired to the general manager's house. He refused to grant what the white miners wanted. Then they marched toward No. 3. By the the time the mob arrived at Location most the negroes had fled to the woods. About a dozen were caught and treated to most violent acts. Stones were hurled at them and shots fired. Two were shot, but

A Business Man's Suicide.

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 5 - M. W. Lambert, formerly a business man of Eastern Virginia, was found dead in bed at the Hotel Albion, having taken a dose of laudanum. Lambert, who was 37 years old, came here from New York several weeks ago and secured the position of night clerk at a beach front hotel. It is said that he was obliged to give up the position because of his drinking habits. He was formerly manager of the Balti-more and Ohio Railroad company's hotels at Deer Park and Oakland, and for the Berkely Springs hotel, in West Virginia.

Double Murder at a Church Door.

BATON ROUGE, La., Aug. 5 .- A fearful tragedy occurred at Gideon Church, where a protracted meeting is being held. bert O'Nell and Hill Picon several days ago quarreled about a young lady, and it as agreed that they should meet at Antloch church and settle the matter. Henry and Alber O'Neil, aged 18 and 12, came out of the church while the preaching was going on and were fired upon by the Picou party, who were armed with double bar reled shotguns, and both instantly killed. The Porte's Reply to the Powers. CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 5 .- The reply of he porte to the demand of the powers for oforms in Armenia is concillatory, and on many points agrees with the powers' demands. It proposes to appoint Christian assessors to assist the Turkish provincial government, and to admit a proportion of Christians among the minor officials, police and gendarmes, and also promises to estrain the Kurds from violence. As it also declares that some of the powers' de-mands are unacceptable, or impossible of execution, it is probable that the powers will not be satisfied with the reply.

Wants Damages for Persecution. SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 5 .- Harry A. Knox, the Sacramento strike leader, has filed a complaint, charging the Southern Pacific Company and others with false and malicious imprisonment, and asking for exemplary damages of $500,000. Similar suits will be brought within a few days by James Mullin and Thomas Compton. These suits are an outgrowth of the great railroad strike of a year ago, and the direct result of a train wreck near Sacramento, in which Engineer Samuel Clarke was killed.

A SCOTCH MINE FLOODED.

Fourteen Men Have Undoubtedly Perished-Sixty Make Their Escape. GLASGOW, Aug. 3.—The Auchen Harvie coiliery at Saltcoats, a town on the Bay of Ayr, twenty-four miles sou, hwest of here, has been flooded. Sixty men have been rescued and fourteen are entombed in the mine, and they have undoubtedly per-Ished. Searching parties have been formed but are unable to penetrate to the point where the unfortunate victims are. There were many narrow escapes on the part those who succeeded in getting out of the drowned while venturing into the pit to warn his comrades of their danger. There is a scene of intense excitement at the pit's mouth, where the wives, mothers and families of the entombed miners are gathered, wringing their hands and giving all sorts of manifestations of grief and despair. Many refuse to give up hope that the imprisoned miners will be saved, and their agonizing suspense is no less depressing to see than the loud clamor of those who thus show their despair,

Those who were rescued arrived at the sucrace in a most exhausted condition, and many were resuscitated only with the greatest labor. One of them says that the water rushed like a mill race through the workings, and it was with the utmost difficulty that those who were caught could withstand it.

One man who was carrying his brother was hurled back by the flood so that he was atterly unable to make any headway with his burden. He was finally forced to but his brother down and proceed alone.

A BLACK SQUAWMAN.

HENRY FEARN, COLORED, LATELY OF THE NINTH CAVALRY.

The Five Notches on His Rifle Stock-A Close Game In Which His Pair Won. The Fight With Indians at Devil's Bowl. Now a Member of the Elewa Tribe.

Henry Fenru, a colored man hylner neer here on the tarch of White Welf, the Kiowa chief, is hown wherever there in an Imitin band in the far west and is welcomed wherever there is a company of the Ninth or Seventh regiment of cavalry. He is 56 years old and 6 feet tall, win huge hands and feet, and a stoop in his broad shoulders that betokens enormous resurve strength. On the stock of his rific are five notches. Each one records the death of a human being other than an Indian. No one, not even Fearn himself. knows how many Inchins he has killed. Fourteen years ago Fearn enlisted in the Ninth cavalry, a regiment made up wholly of colored men. He was assigned to the troop commanded by Captain Moore. The Ninth cavalry was then in the southwest. Times were hot, and the Indians gave the regiment plenty to do. Fearn speedily got a reputation as a reckless, fearless soldier. He was the best shot among the men. One day, at the close of a lively campaign, word reached the Ninth cavalry that the paymaster was on his way to join them and was waiting 80 miles away for an escort. A noncommissioned officer and three privates were de tailed to go to the paymaster and guard him on his ride to the regiment. Fearn was one of the four men selected. A sergeant who had long disliked Fearn was placed in charge of the detachment. The other privates were close friends of the ant. As the four men rode out of the post Fearn dropped to the rear.

"Ride up," commanded the sergeant.

"This will be a hard ride for us all and a last one for you perhaps," he muttered in an undertone

'Last how?" asked Fearn "Wait and see," was the reply. So the men rode along. Fearn hung back or rode out on the side, where he could watch the three men. His carbine lay across his saddle bow. The butts of his big cavalry pistols rubbed his hands as be held the reins. Fearn understood that a relaxation of vigilance meant death. When the watering creek was reached, the men dismounted in silence.

Ride on, Fearn. We will catch you, said one of the men.

Fearn said nothing, and finally the men rode on together. As they neared the station where the paymaster awaited them one of the men turned suddenly on Fearn and raised his pistel. He was too slow. Fearn's two hands went up, each grasping a pistol, and when he ceased firing three riderless horses followed him into the station, where he met the paymaster alone.
"It was a close game," Fearn says as he tells of it now, "but my pair beat three odd hands."

When the Pine Ridge trouble broke out four years ago, four troops of the Seventh cavalry went up into the territory to bring the Indians into submission. The Ninth cavalry also went out. Fearn's troop, with another under Colonel Guy V. Henry, then major, met the Indians near a big basin known as Devil's Bowl.

"It was the hottest fight I was ever in," aid Fearn. "We were sitting about on said Fearn. the rocks drinking our coffee, when sud-denly from behind rocks and trees and bushes burst a storm of bullets. jumped to the charge, but there was nothing to charge on except rocks. smoke would float out from behind a rock or tree, and that was all we could see. They fought us back foot by foot down the hill until they got us on an open much like a log chute. No sooner had we rallied along this than there was a terrifle explosion upon the hill, and a shower of stones and sticks and tent pins pounded down on us. The Indians had captured an old cannon and had loaded it with any thing they could lay their hands on. jumped for cover. Suddenly everything grew quiet. We waited, but all was still. In about ten minutes the old gun boomed again. A tent pin struck me on the shouland glancing off killed the man be hind me.

Major Henry divided us into two squads. One squad held the ground, fight ing like mad. I was in the other squad. We crept single file up the hill about 100 yards. Then we turned sharp to the left and opened out in skirmish line. we faced about and marched toward our own men. But the Indians were between We had them front and rear.
"I was right beside Major Henry. He was cool as a cucumber. We crept along or about 100 feet without seeing a red man. Suddenly Major Henry stopped and nodded his head forward. We halted and looked ahead. There was a hig bowlder, and lying flat behind it in a hollow in the earth were over 40 Sloux. They knew nothing of our presence. Quickly we brought up our pistois, every man with one in each hand. Major Henry nodded again, and a line of fire lit the woods. The Sioux yelled and sprang forward, but they ran right into our other squad. Then it was that they fought.

"Have you ever met an Indian face to face when he was war crazy? No? Then.

you cannot realize what a fight we had. It was man to man. There was no chance for the Sioux to jump behind trees. We closed right in. Our other squad, too, pushed toward us. Negro and Indian grappled and struggled, each for his life Don't tell me that the colored man won't Just you get him started, and he will go right through with you to the end. I saw negroes lying backed and torn shoot a last shot and fall back dead. We held our ground and drove the red men off. Fearn bears five scars to remind him of the battle of the Wounded Knee.

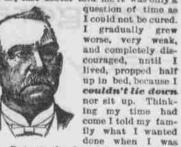

At the expiration of his enlistment be returned to Fort Sill, where he had once lived. His fame had preceded him, especially among the Indians. He declined to live in the post and went instead to the ranch of White Wolf, a powerful Klowa chief. Soon after his arrival he married one of White Wolf's daughters and becam a full fledged squawman, appropriating all the rights of his Indian wife to raise an unlimited number of cattle on the Indian lands free of charge. His herd has grown rapidly, and today he counts his cattle by the hundred. He is present at all high councils of both the Klowa and Comanche tribes. The Cache Creek medicine dances always know him as a promi-nent figure. The beef issue twice a month would be incomplete without him. He is the only known negro squawamn. -Fort Sill (O. T.)
