Financial Debate,

BOTH RETAIN THEIR OPINIONS!

Though Holding Opposing Views, Each Contestant Has Proved to His Own Satisfaction That the System He Advocates is the True Solution

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—Following is a syn-opsis of the summing up of the Horr-Harvey debate by Roswell G. Horr:

The object of this debate was to determine if it would be wise for our nation to throw open its mints to the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 when the civilized nations of the world refuse to join in such action. My opponent provisable. I denied the advisability of such only is the measure of value he has not even attempted to sustain. He based his whole argument on the proposition that always. We would not like to the silver dollar was in 1782 made the only lose money all the time. unit or measure of value. I have shown conclusively that our forefathers attempted to establish bimetallism and provided for two units of value, one of gold and one of silver, always naming gold first, and that up to 1834 the silver stand-ard alone was used. That after the gold standard same into use the silver dollar has never been used as the measure of value in the United States.

Mr. Harvey next based his case upon the assumption that the law of 1873 was a crime, and stated that it had its origin in value. Not much wrong with fraud and its birth through bribery and corruption. He introduced no evidence them, except wrinkled. in support of any one of these positions Thus he stands convicted by his own statements of an effort to deceive the

His assertion that option of the debtor does not restore its relative commercial value. On the contrary, it drives the dearer metal out of use. History proves that the use of a single standard is the only means by which both metals can be kept in circulation.

The gold unit is not responsible for the fall in prices. Mr. Harvoy utterly failed to show a fall in the price of a single article which is not fully accounted for by the cheaper cost of production, improved transportation or increased supply.

During the discussion Mr. Harvey cites Roman history, with its many evils. But he inadvertently makes an admission as to the great value of banking facilities, which refutes all his other assertions against such systems. He says: "It is a significant coincidence that the first glimmer of light only came with the invention of bills of exchange and paper substitutes, through which the scanty stock of the precious metals were increased in efficiency. Strange that it did not occur to him that to commence about the 25th of August this is "an entire give away" of his whole rant and fustian against banks.

The condition of the mass of the people of the United States has improved more Sala, of East Centre street, charged Daniel rapidly since 1878 than during a similar Bradley and Charles Sadusky with burglarborn. Mr. Harvey endeavors to prove de-degree of the United States since o 1873. He introduces only one statement in support of his position; that was the evidence of a single man for one trade in the city of Omaha. On the other hand to prove that they are advancing I introduced the investigation of United States Commissioner of Labor Mulhall, who showed that the average annual wages in manufacturing industries have risen from $288 in 1870 to $569 for each person in 1890. Mr. Harvey virtually admits that the action which he proposes will put this nation on a silver basis and drive gold ont Stephen Gotunuce filled himself with that this would work injury to seventuen million people who work for wages. Harvey has shown that benefits will come to no person except silver mine owners and insolvent debtors.

Following is a synopsis of W. H. Har-

The debate settles in my judgment the following propositions: That rold and silver is the money of the constitution. That the silver dollar was the unit of both silver and gold were the measures of value of all other property until 1873, and the debtor has a right to pay in either metal. That the act of 1873 was surreptitiously passed. That for all time of which we have a knowledge, gold and silver were treated equally as money, and until 1873 the commercial value of the two metals was substantially at a parity with the legal ratio. That prices of all property are substantially at the present time one-half of what they would be under the bime-tallic system. That all the silver coined could not be worth either more or less than itself. I refer him to recent market quotations in New York, when gold bullion was selling at a small premium, which was accounted for at the time as purchases made by a gold syndicate to prevent gold from seeking the mints.

It was once supposed that labor saving improvements and inventions would lessen the necessary toll of man, and there was tle labor all would be provided for, and humanity as a whole would be benefited. Has it had that result? All will answer that it has not. And yet if there were no defect in our civilization inventions would have the effect first intended for them. We are sufficiently advanced in this respect now to provide all the people of the world with the comforts of life by one hour's work each day by each individual, while the remaining hours not devoted to sleep would be used in the promotion of human happiness and the advancement of the
