Special to EVENING HERALD.

HARRISBURG, August 28. The attention of the country from Maine to California has been drawn to Harrisburg to-day and Republicans throughout this broad land of ours have been interested in the campaign of assassination, which ended in the glorious withdrawal of Mr. B. F. Gilkeson from the contest for the State Chairmanship, as the report in our detailed account shows.

The convention was a notable one in many respects, beside the interest aroused over the chairmanship. It was the largest numerically and attracted a larger number of outsiders than any preceding one, and attracted more newspaper men, every leading newspaper in the country being represented. The newspaper men were under the care of Col. George Nox McCain, and he took care of the 300 and over very efficiently. It was notable also in the number of prominent men present.

Senator Quay, in the lightest of summer costumes, sat directly behind Governor Hastings, who in turn was directly behind Boise Penrose, the magnetic young Senator from the Eighth ward of Philadelphia, while Chris Magee, the favorite son of Pittsburgh, looking paler than usual, sat just across the aisle. District Attorney George S. Graham, of Philadelphia, one of the brainiest men in the party, was there in close communion with David Martin, who was chewing gum, and Charles A. Porter, who got mad because he was called a member of the Hog Combine. Thomas V. Cooper still talked peace when seconding the nomination of popular Jack Robinson, the fighting member of the party, for temporary chairman.

The convention was Quay from the beginning, and when Robinson was elected the Senator took the reins in his own hands and cut out the work rapidly, so that the whole affair did not last three hours. As each prominent man entered the hall he was greeted with rounds of applause from the adherents of his faction. This was particularly noticeable in the cases of Quay and Hastings, the lesser lights all coming in for a fair share. The restriction of admission to the open house to delegates, state committeemen and newspaper men, as the result of an agreement between the managers of both sides to avoid conflicts, and not more than 600 or 800 people were allowed inside. The crush outside at the stage entrance was simply awful, Third street being packed tight.

Governor Hastings was an object of pity from the more thoughtful Quay adherents, in that he had permitted himself to be drawn into a conflict by the combination when he should, with propriety, have remained neutral. But ambition, that sin by which fell the angels, was too strong and the Presidential bee buzzed too loudly in his bonnet to be resisted, and he fell a victim to the wiles of the Combine leaders. He is henceforth no power in Pennsylvania politics and is relegated to the background. This is the only regrettable feature of the contest, as no Governor in late years entered office with such a bright outlook.

The convention leaves no surmise apparent upon the surface, as Senator Quay used the power given him in a magnanimous spirit and refrained from striking a fallen foe. In this contest he has shown the capacity of a great leader and organizer of men which will increase his power and his prestige in the national as well as state councils of his party. That he will continue to so use it there is no room to question, and what threatened to disrupt the Republican party has happily passed away.

NOTES.
J. F. Finney, of the Miners' Journal, was here and worked hard to get the Schuylkill boys into the convention, but the law was too tight. He did succeed in getting David H. Llewellyn appointed an assistant sergeant-at-arms.

Delegates Deugler and Ball could not be mistaken when they called out their choice for temporary chairman. Philadelphia sent several delegations on both sides that had better been left at home. The District Attorney of Philadelphia received a telegram in convention addressed to "Farmer George S. Graham, Hog Combine, Convention."

T. Speer Dickson, Jack Robinson's able editorial assistant, was on the stage shouting for his chief, as was also Taylor, of the Chester Times.

Tom Cooper was substituted for Quigley, of Delaware county, and the little county gained greatly by the change.

Judge Harry White, of Indiana county, and Judge Miller, of Clarion, were conspicuous in the crowd. The latter and the Governor got a little heated in conversation on Monday.

Senator Quay was substituted for D. R. Corbus, of Beaver, and Jack Robinson for Hippie, in Delaware.

The hotels of Harrisburg did an enormous business and could not nearly provide for the crowd, and dozens had to sleep in chairs and on the steps of the court house and post office.

HOME, SWEET HOME.
Townsmen Return From Harrisburg Footsore and Weary, But Jubilant.

The excitement attending the Republican State Convention has somewhat diminished, and the dazzling effect of Senator Quay's great victory is giving way to a calm, deliberate contemplation of the battle, the result and the contingencies. Among those who are giving the matter most thought are the people who made the trip to Harrisburg to witness the thrilling scenes attendant upon such occasions and, incidentally, to let the leaders of the party know that they were Hastings endorsers of Senator Quay. The first part of their mission was a complete success; the second fell rather flat, for by the time they reached the capital the leaders had matters so arranged that it made no difference to them whether the Hastings clubs endorsed Quay, or the Quay clubs endorsed Gilkeson, and special delegations became ordinary visitors with no show for distinction or special favors. This accounts for two very prominent Shenandoah politicians sleeping on the steps of the Commonwealth Hotel on Tuesday night and another prominent gentleman being obliged to fold himself up in a hotel chair for the night as an alternative to walking the streets of the city until the dawn of day betokened the approaching hours of the great struggle for political supremacy. The stories told of experiences on the eve of the battle are varied in size and general character and would be too severe on the every day record of some of our townsmen if told here. One man went to Harrisburg with the expectation that when he arrived at Harrisburg he would find Senator Quay standing on the platform of the railway station surrounded by leading and lesser lights of the G. O. P.; that when the pilgrim from the coal fields would step from the train "Mat" would advance, grasp him by the hand with a "I'm-so-glad-you-have-come grip and exclaim, "Welcome, loyal son of Schuylkill, allow me to express my gratitude for the gallant fight you made in my behalf at the primaries and extend the best Harrisburg regards as a slight token of appreciation." Of course, all this was but a day dream, and there is nothing to indicate that "Mat" knows to the present time whether the loyal son of Schuylkill was in Harrisburg. But such is life in the field of politics and nothing is to be gained by any who may be disappointed showing their teeth and threatening to down any of the leaders who may have slighted them, as when the next opportunity arrives the blaze of the camp fires will sweep from memory the over-sights that now give offense and, besides, the kicking the offended one may indulge in will be like a pinhole in a water melon. However, there are no indications of a serious outbreak in the ranks of those who have returned from Harrisburg. All say they never witnessed a more thrilling and enthusiastic time than was presented in Harrisburg yesterday as a result of the harmonious merging of the great Republican forces, and they say they will never forget the scenes. Among those who returned last night were State Delegate Horace E. Deugler, Chief of Police Tosh, Hon. Joseph Wyatt, D. H. Llewellyn, John A. Reilly, Jr., A. B. Lamb, Councilman Gable, E. J. Gallagher, Councilman McElhenny, Alex. Strouse, B. J. Yost, Ed. Mader, M. H. Kehler, R. D. Hagenbach, Justice T. T. Williams, E. W. Wilde, William Neiswender, Evan J. Davies, R. H. Morgan.

THE CONVENTION IN DETAIL.
Gilkeson Names Senator Quay For State Chairman.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 29.—The Republican state convention met here yesterday and unanimously agreed upon the following ticket: State treasurer, Benjamin J. Haywood of Mercer; for superior court judges, James A. Beaver of Centre county, E. N. Willard of Lackawanna, Charles E. Rice of Luzerne, George B. Orady of Huntington, John J. Wickham of Berwyn and Howard Reeder of Northampton. Senator Quay was unanimously chosen for chairman of the Republican state committee.

The result of the convention was a complete, overwhelming victory for Senator Quay, who has, during the past two months, fought a battle for the mastery in Pennsylvania politics which has attracted the attention of the whole country. He had his political enemies completely at his mercy, but refrained from pushing his advantage at this time, although one of the senator's lieutenants remarked, after the convention, that "he has a lot of people to punish who will occupy his attention during the next two years."

In the opinion of politicians Senator Quay's grasp on Pennsylvania politics is now stronger than it ever was before, and even though his opponents continue the war they have waged against him, it will require years to get their organization in such shape as to accomplish his political downfall.

Senator Quay is the hero, as well as the idol of Pennsylvania politicians of all degrees of prominence. His rooms at the Lochiel hotel have been constantly besieged since the convention ended by men anxious to pay homage to his matchless leadership. The senator takes all of the praise and congratulations that are being showered upon him with his usual stolidism, and so far as outward appearances go his demeanor is just the same as when the fight seemed to be going against him.

The convention, which started out with

THE SALOONKEEPERS ALERT

About Forty Violators of the Law Said to be Slated.

A CIRCUS TEAM MAKES A DASH!

One of the Cowboys Makes Practical Use of His Lasso—Miners Burned by an Explosion of Gas, but Not Dangerously.

Many of the saloonkeepers of town are on the anxious bench again since it has become known that several of their number have been reported to the state league of the Retail Liquor Dealers Association.

It was authentically stated that nearly forty dealers have thus far been reported for disobeying the notice sent broadcast by the association requesting all dealers to uphold the Brooks high license law and not sell liquor on Sunday.

It seems that some dealers have attached little importance to the matter and say that it is only a sort of scheme to scare them into joining the association and help swell its ranks for other purposes.

However this may be, the local branch seems determined to carry out its threat to prosecute all violators, and the gentleman who furnishes the information says that within the past few weeks, or since the notice was issued, violations have been detected in 15 places in the First ward, 3 in the Second, 7 in the Third, 1 in the Fourth and 12 in the Fifth. It is also stated that about two-thirds of the saloons in Girardville have been spotted.

The informant also states that no decisive action will be taken by the state league until the next license court, when remonstrances will be filed against the applications of those who have been violating the law.

A prominent saloonkeeper and member of the league said to-day, "Some people do not seem to realize that the saloon men are earnest in trying to enforce the Brooks law, but it is just this way: Our business is becoming overcrowded and the only way by which we can make our places pay is to help weed out a lot of the small places that live almost wholly on Sunday and other illegal traffic."

EXPLOSION OF GAS.
Two Men Injured in a Blast of the Wm. Penn Colliery.

Joe Morowsky and Charles Thomas, two Polish residents of town, were burned by an explosion of gas in a breast of the Wm. Penn colliery last night. Fortunately the body of gas ignited was not a large one and neither man was dangerously injured, although one of them was taken to the Miners' Hospital. This one was Thomas. He was burned about the head, face and neck. Morowsky was slightly burned on the face and hands.

The men were working on the night shift and went into the breast about an hour after the day shift had quit work. They did not think gas would accumulate in the place so rapidly and walked into it with a naked light.

Just the Thing.
Columbia Beer the miner will cheer. As he rests at the close of the day; After digging the coals In the dirty old holes, It will wash all the cobwebs away.

A Circus Team Runs.
As the string of cage, band and other wagons of the circus wended their way down the steep road from the Trotting park this morning just before the street parade, one of the teams took fright and the driver, a man named Mitchell, of town, lost control of them. There was a scattering of elephants, canals and other attractions of the show to give the runaway horses a clear road, but they did not run far as one of the cowboys stopped the team with the aid of his lasso. Nobody was hurt.

Watson House Free Lunch.

Idle for Want of Water.
Many of the collieries of the Philadelphia and Reading are idle for want of water. Those in the Shamokin district and south of the Broad Mountain shut down this evening, while those in this and the Mahanoy districts will work the entire week.

The Hospital Patients.

A report from the Miners' Hospital at Fountain Springs to the HERALD to-day stated that John Rogers, Jr., the Polish young man who attempted to commit suicide yesterday afternoon by throwing himself in front of a coal train at the Bowers street crossing of the Lehigh Valley railroad, is doing as well as can be expected under the circumstances. He suffered an amputation of the left foot after arrival at the hospital. His chances for recovery are better than they appeared when he was taken to the hospital. John Rogers, the miner who suffered injuries by a fall of coal at one of the Eacker collieries, is in a precarious condition.

Surprise Party.
A surprise and farewell party was given last evening at the home of Miss Emma Elsenhower, on South White street, prior to her departure for Woburn, Mass., where she has accepted a position as school teacher. The evening was very pleasantly spent in music, vocal and instrumental music, and at midnight all the guests were invited to the dining room to partake of an elegant supper. Miss Elsenhower was also the recipient of a handsome present as a token of friendship and remembrance. Among those who were present were the following: Misses Hannah B. Morrison, Agnes Stein, Mary Leekin, Annie Steiner, Lizzie Keltman, Maggie Jacoby, Ella and Anita Chisler, Jennie Robertson, Annie Williams, Lottie Loggert, of Wm. Penn, and Emma Major, of Allentown; and Messrs. T. T. Hyde, T. T. Bedford, Edward Jacoby, E. R. Brunn, Enoch Lockett, Joseph Reddall, James Leekin, William Seiman and Max Mayer, of Philadelphia.

The barnacles and cobwebs which held the Shenandoah HERALD in the field of mediocrity have all been brushed away, and their places taken by energy and brains. The rejuvenated HERALD is grandly forging to the front, under its new management, with ideas bright and brilliant. Its local and editorial columns show that healthily blood is guiding the navy hands at the helm. The people of Shenandoah should congratulate themselves on being the possessors of such a spicy newspaper as the EVENING HERALD.

Kendrick House Free Lunch.
Sour krait and Wiener sausage for lunch to-morrow morning. Largest oysters and little neck clams. Meals served at all hours.

Attempted Suicide Discarded.
The wife of John Rogers, Jr., denies that her husband intended a commit suicide which he threw himself before the Lehigh Valley coal train yesterday, and the report that her husband had not partaken food for three days, she says, is also incorrect. Statements to the effect causing the denial were made by Charles Nork, who was in Rogers' company shortly before the man was injured. Mrs. Rogers says Nork and her husband were not friends. Nork, however, adheres to the story as published yesterday.

Schely House.
Oyster soup with combine sausage for lunch to-night. Chicken soup. Hard and soft shelled crabs. Oysters. Clams. Deviled crabs. Fish cakes.

They Have Resigned.
Lewis Morgan, at present holding the position of engineer at the power house of the Schuylkill Traction Company, has resigned to accept a similar position under the Pottsville Electric Railway Company. It is rumored that the electrician of the former company, Mark Cummins, will also go to the Pottsville company.

FISHERMAN'S LUCK.

In fishing around the market we found a couple barrels of extra fine Norway mackerel cheap. Very fat and white. Not large. Weight about 3-4 of a pound. 14 cents a pound. We have the big ones, too; weigh 1 1/4 to 1 1/2 pounds, for little more money. These are the finest fish caught, and we can not always buy the small ones.
