Ex-Minister Smith on "National Development."

SECRETARY CARLISLE ON FINANCE

Notable Addresses at the Annual Banquet of the New York Chamber of Commerce How We Are Outstripping the Nations of the Old World.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The 12th annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce of the state of New York was held at Delmonico's last evening. The yearly dinner of this organization are among the most important events of the metropolis and that of last night was no exception. Utterances that have moved the policy of the government have been made on these occasions, and it was at one of the chamber's dinners that Secretary of the Treasury Windom was stricken with sudden death a few years ago.

It was somewhat after 9 o'clock when President Orr rapped for order, and in a brief speech, in which he referred to the Armenian atrocities, introduced Secretary Carlisle, who spoke on "Our Currency System." In the course of his lengthy address Mr. Carlisle said:

"In attempting to provide a circulating medium consisting of its own notes redeemable in coin on presentation and resellable after redemption, the government of the United States is engaged in a business for which it is wholly unfitted and which was never for a moment contemplated by its founders. It has a right to borrow money and issue evidences of the debt, and it has a right to coin money and regulate its value—that is, to declare what the relative values of the metals shall be in the coinage—but it was never contemplated that it should convert itself into a bank of issue and furnish a legal tender paper currency for the use of the people. It has no department or agency properly organized or equipped for the transaction of such business, even if this were a legitimate governmental function. The treasury department ought to be, and was intended to be, simply a public agency for the management of the fiscal affairs of the government—as a government, not as a bank.

No change that can be made in our currency system will afford the relief to which the government and the people are entitled unless it provides for the retirement and cancellation of the legal tender United States notes. Anything less than this will be simply a palliative, and not a cure, for the financial ills to which the country is now subject. The circulation of legal tender United States notes has a tendency to drive out of use and out of the country the very coin in which the government is compelled to redeem them, and it has expelled millions of dollars from our borders. Although the government and our own people are compelled to receive them, they will not discharge international obligations, and gold must go out to settle all final balances against us.

"The United States note was a forced loan from the people to the government which the government promised to pay in dollars, but the free coinage of legal tender silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, or at any other ratio not corresponding with the commercial value of the two metals, would be a forced loan from the people to the owners of silver mines and silver bullion, without a promise of repayment by anybody. One loan was forced for the benefit of the government in a time of war, but the proposition of the advocates of free coinage is to force another loan for the benefit of private individuals and corporations in a time of profound peace.

"But the United States legal tender notes will remain to complicate the currency system and embarrass the government until the people, through their representatives in congress, agree upon some plan by which they can be retired and some other form of currency substituted in their place, at least so far as the necessities of the country may require such substitution. In my opinion legislation in this direction at the earliest possible day is imperatively demanded by every substantial interest in the country."

Secretary Carlisle's speech was frequently applauded, especially that part where he committed himself to sound money.

was followed by United States Senator J. G. Burrows, of Michigan, who spoke on "Our Domestic Commerce."

Charles Emory Smith, of Philadelphia, ex-minister to Russia, was the third speaker, his toast being "National Development and Opportunity." Mr. Smith spoke in substance as follows:

"Ours is a land of fullness and not of famine. Providence has dowered us with matchless opportunity and the world's evolution unfolds before us the crowning destiny of mankind. The merchant prince, even of middle age, before me have within their own business lives seen our young republic pass and outstrip all the old nations, hoary with the moss of a thousand years. In the three decades from 1870 to 1890 the three mighty powers of Great Britain, France and Germany, all combined, with their 135,000,000 people, gained in wealth $30,000,000,000, while the United States alone, with its 60,000,000 people, gained $338,000,000,000.

"The examination of national earnings tells the astounding story of triumphant advance. Great Britain is estimated to earn about $6,400,000,000 a year, France $5,000,000,000 and Germany about the same, while the United States earns over $12,000,000,000, or two-thirds as much as all the other three put together. If we were not such magnificent spenders how we should astonish ourselves in stupendous savings. But spending makes consumption, and consumption makes production, and as we are the greatest consumers so we are the greatest producers in the world. Today we earn two-thirds as much as the three great powers of Europe combined. Soon we shall leap beyond them. From 1870 to 1890 Great Britain increased her earnings $1,000,000,000 a year, and France the same, but our republic expanded her's by $5,000,000,000 a year.

"England has certainly in the past been the industrial beehive of the world. In 1860 the product of our manufactures was but little more than half of hers. In 1890 it more than doubled her output. Her increase was $1,300,000,000, while ours was about $7,000,000,000. Our expansion in industry was more than twice that of England, France and Germany put together. Through this amazing development we manufacture over one-third of all that is manufactured in the world, and we use and consume the bulk of this colossal proportion among our own people, who are the best paid, best housed, best fed, best dressed, best schooled people on the face of the globe.

"In the great race of nations the powers of the Old World are heavily handicapped, while the lithe, supple, sinewy young giant of the New World strides forward free and unhampered. Their debts are piling up; ours are melting away. Their taxes are rising; ours are falling. Their expenditures are frightfully swelling; ours are relatively decaying. Their productive forces are stripped for arms and armaments; ours are at the plough, the forge, the loom and the exchange—the foci of wealth and not of waste.

"England's taxes are 10 per cent. of her earnings, France's 12 per cent., and Germany's 10 1/2 per cent., while ours are only 5 per cent. England spends one-sixth of her local taxes and one-twelfth of all her revenues for poor relief, and one-seventeenth for schools. The United States spends one-sixth of all her national and local income for schools, and the demand for poor relief is only a beggarly item. The contrast is the key of the future.

"And we are only at the threshold of our development. Most of the growth I have briefly portrayed has come within twenty years. Who shall grasp the advancement of the next twenty or thirty years, or picture the dazzling destiny of the next century? Perhaps half the men within the sound of my voice will live to see our republic an overtopping nation of a hundred millions of the most enlightened, the most energetic, and the most progressive people God ever created. Our spirit, if not our flag, will rule the hemisphere. The Nicaragua canal, constructed by American capital and owing allegiance to American control, will open through the continent the highway of the sea, and New York, wresting the financial scepter from London, will stand like another Venice of the earlier and narrower days, as the focus and emporium of the world's wide commerce between the Orient and the Occident."

Letters of regret were then read from President Cleveland and Governor Morton.

"Ethics in Politics" was the toast responded to by the Rev. Woolly Striker, LL. D., president of Hamilton college.

In the course of a toast to "The City of New York," Mayor Strong said: "I am going to say just a word about politics. I have been told by some people that I am not a good politician. I realize that the statement is a true one, but I shall go on to the end of my term acting as I think best for the people of this magnificent municipality."

Eloped With an Actor.

Quite a stir was created in Tamaqua by the elopement on Sunday night of one of her fair daughters and a well-known comedian. The eloping couple are Sid K. Russell, who produced a drama for a local lodge with much success, and Miss Gertie Houser, who comes from a very respectable family of Tamaqua. Mr. Russell is about 30 years of age, while Miss Houser has not seen more than 17 summers. Russell left Tamaqua and played at Pottsville, from which place the couple eloped. The mother of the wayward young girl has put a detective upon their tracks.

INSPECTOR MONAGHAN DEAD

Expired Yesterday Afternoon After a Trying Illness.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE THE CAUSE!

A Sketch of His Career—He Started as a Breaker Boy and Rapidly Gained Prominence Through His Activity in Political Circles.

John J. Monaghan died at a quarter past three o'clock yesterday afternoon, at his home on South Bowers street. He had suffered for some time from Bright's disease and his life was in the balance for several days.

About three months ago the deceased came home from Philadelphia, where he held a position as Inspector of Immigration. He was a very sick man, but his jovial disposition still held away and reassured his family. About a week after his arrival he became bedfast and from that time he gradually succumbed, although at times there were fluctuations that gave the family some hope.

He was conscious up to the last moment and during the night and preceding his death, despite intense suffering, he exchanged many pleasantries with those who surrounded his bedside. His last moments were peaceful. At the time of his death the bereaved wife, Col. P. H. Monaghan, of Girardville, and Martin Monaghan, brother of the deceased, ex-Senator B. J. Monaghan, a cousin, and John J. Heilly were in attendance.

The deceased was 30 years of age and is survived by a wife and three children, who are believed to be comfortably provided for.

The announcement of the death carried sorrow to many circles. Squire Monaghan was known throughout Shenandoah and vicinity, and his interest in the Democratic party had made him extensively known in the county. For several years he was the most prominent man in the First ward and a political campaign without the hand of "Squire Jack" in it would have been looked upon as a very tame affair. It was as a politician and Justice of the Peace that he gained his prominence and, while at times his methods may have been such as did not meet the approval of some, there are few surviving him who hesitate to say that "Jack was a very good fellow and would frequently go out of his way to do a good turn."

Mr. Monaghan was born in Minersville in 1856, and in 1873 he came to town with his parents. Like thousands of other boys born in the coal fields he commenced at the bottom round of the ladder, as a slatepicker in the breaker of the Shenandoah City colliery, but after a short service took up the cigar making trade. After a service of two years in this line he abandoned it and secured a position as chute boss in the Shenandoah City colliery. Soon after he became chute boss in the Indian Ridge breaker and held it until he was appointed Justice of the Peace in the First ward to succeed Edward Monaghan, deceased. This step formed the foundation for Mr. Monaghan's great success. When the term under his appointment expired he was elected to the position without opposition and re-elected twice after similar conditions. He was very prosperous and founded business in addition to the routine in the line of his position as a justice that made him quite well-to-do. For a time he was a passenger agent for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and also had quite an extensive field as a broker in steamship tickets. While always open-handed and never faltering to respond to a cry of distress, he saved sufficient to purchase a comfortable home for his family and invest in several properties that will be a source of revenue to them now that he has been called away.

Two years ago last August Mr. Monaghan was appointed one of the Inspectors of Immigration at Philadelphia. Upon receiving the appointment he resigned his commission as Justice in favor of Jeremiah Toomey, who had been his Constable and one of his warmest friends for several years. Although his post of duty was at some distance from this place Mr. Monaghan retained his home here and spent a few days with his family at frequent intervals. He also maintained an interest in the welfare of the scenes where the foundation of his success rested and on election days he was always around "to give some friend a lift."

"Squire Jack" was a character of the town that will be missed, notwithstanding he has not been among the people as much during the past two years as formerly. He was of the jovial kind of man that wins and holds friendship and long after his death his friends will enjoy the recollections of some of his pastimes. In business he was shrewd and diligent, but he always found time to "have fun with the boys" and contributed liberally to the expense, although a total abstainer. He also took delight in sports.
