A CRIMINAL SENSATION!

"Bat" Shea Saved From Death by Legal Electrocution.

ANOTHER CONFESSES THE CRIME.

Convict McGough Declares That he, and Not Shea, Fired the Shots Which Ended the Life of Robert Ross During an Election Riot.

ALBANY, Jan. 6.—The climax of one of the most dramatic and sensational criminal incidents of the state's history was made public yesterday when, just forty-eight hours prior to the time set for the execution of the death sentence of Bartholomew Shea, another man confessed to the murder, and Shea steps from beneath the shadow of death. The invitations for the electric killing of Shea had been issued the state electrician was already upon the ground at Dannemora prison, the governor had decided not to interfere in the carrying out of the sentence, and Shea had resigned himself to his fate, when another prisoner in the institution, a comrade of Shea's and participant in the election outrages when the tragedy occurred, confessed to the crime.

The man who voluntarily confesses to the crime is John McGough, of Troy, now serving a sentence of nineteen years and six months for shooting and attempting to kill William Ross, a brother of Robert Ross, who was supposed to be Shea's victim. In some ways known only to convicts McGough had contrived to keep informed as to the success or the failure of the applications for commutation made in behalf of Shea. When Shea was sentenced to die on Dec. 21 it is believed that McGough was ready to confess, but when he learned that a respite had been granted he withheld his confession. After the holidays he learned that the efforts to obtain a commutation for Shea had not ceased and so he made no sign.

On Saturday when Warden Thayer was made aware that the governor would not interfere, and arrangements were being made for the execution, McGough sent for the warden of the prison, Mr. Walter N. Thayer, and when the warden had come told him that he wished to make a statement concerning the murder of Robert Ross. The warden had McGough taken to the office, and the prisoner wrote a communication of about two pages and, signing it with his full name, handed it to the warden. To the surprise of the warden and his deputies the paper contained a decided statement that he (McGough), and not Shea, had shot and killed Robert Ross. The statement contained no details of the shooting, other than the bold confession of the fact.

Warden Thayer went at once to the telephone, and called up the executive chamber. He asked the governor to please receive a message which he said would arrive, and then at once dispatched the prison stenographer, Mr. Edward M. Coughlin, to Albany. Mr. Coughlin arrived in this city yesterday morning and caught Governor Morton at the mansion just as he was leaving for church. The governor, upon learning the nature of the communication, decided to grant a respite for four weeks, during which time counsel could take the proper means to bring the matter before the courts for a new trial. The confession of McGough will bring to mind the tragic series of events that led up to the present dramatic results. The conviction of Shea and the great public sentiment against his release were due not entirely to the fact that he shot Ross, but to the aroused public sentiment against the disgraceful act which had made the city of Troy a byword.

The crimes occurred on March 6, 1894. Shea and McGough headed a crowd of repeaters, who had worked almost every polling place in Troy. They had been told not to try their games in the ward in which the Ross brothers, William and Robert, were the head of the Republican party, but announced that they would. In anticipation of their visit the Rosses, John Boland and several other citizens had armed themselves with clubs, and some with pistols loaded with blank cartridges. It was shortly after that the melee occurred, and while twenty or more shots were fired only the two Ross boys fell. It was while Robert lay prostrate that somebody ran up and shot him in the head. Shea was tried for the crime and sentenced to death, while McGough was sent to prison for nineteen years for his assault upon William Ross. Shea's case was taken to the court of appeals, which confirmed the conviction. The governor respited him until after the holidays, but on Saturday refused to commute his sentence.

Some idea of the sentiment in Troy over the matter can be obtained when it is known that the citizens are erecting a monument in honor of Ross, who lost his life. At the same time Shea had many friends, as was attested by the large number of petitions in his favor, signed by almost 5,000 women and men and sent to the governor. One of the singular phases of the confession is the fact that some time ago, during the great agitation over the matter, a Troy newspaper charged that the Democratic leaders in Troy had in their endeavor to get Shea cleared of the murder tried to obtain a confession from McGough, who was not suspected of crime. Later this same newspaper charged that the officials of the prison at Dannemora were working to get McGough to confess.

THE WEEK IN CONGRESS.

The Tariff and Bond Bills Will be Brought in the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The senate is not in session today, but it is expected to resume the work of the session in earnest tomorrow. The finance committee has promised to report both the bond bill and the revenue tariff bill tomorrow, and it may be reasonably expected that if this promise is kept the debate during the remainder of the week and for some time afterwards will be based upon these bills.

The bond bill probably will be the first of the two measures to receive attention, and it is considered probable that a fortnight may be devoted to its consideration. The Republicans also are hopeful of being able to dispose of the tariff bill in the same length of time. They have received assurances from individual Democratic leaders that they will not resort to dilatory tactics to prevent the early disposal of either of the bills.

Senator Elkins' bond resolution holds its place on the calendar as the unfinished business, and is in position to furnish a basis of discussion until the finance committee bills shall be reported. If it should not be acted upon before these reports are made, it is yet uncertain whether the resolution would be pressed, but the chances are that it would be.

The finance committee will meet again this afternoon, by which time it is presumed the silver majority of the committee will have proposed its substitute for the bond bill, which will provide for free coinage. The fate of the tariff bill is not so certain. On this bill the Republicans consider themselves masters of the situation in committee, and they are in doubt whether to report it as it came from the house or to amend it in accordance with the wishes of individual Republican senators.

The house this week will settle down to the routine work of the session. Until Wednesday, however, the work will not be well defined, as none of the committees have reported bills and the first three days will, therefore, be devoted to unanimous consent legislation and such matters as may be brought before the house. On Wednesday, or at latest on Thursday, the pension appropriation bill will be reported and its consideration will be entered upon.

Pathetic Scene in a Hospital.

HAZLETON, Pa., Jan. 6.—A shocking accident occurred on the railroad near the Lehigh Valley depot. William Reilly, aged 12 years, while stepping from a train fell beneath the wheels and had his leg cut off. When taken to the hospital he was placed in the same ward as a miner who was taken to the institution the day previous. The miner did not recognize the boy until he was about to be taken to the operating room, when he discovered that it was his son. The scene was a most affecting one. The boy died shortly after being admitted.

The fire department was called out this morning by an alarm from the First ward, but its services were not required. Not Sold Yet.

The report that J. K. P. Schellie has sold his Main street property to Harry J. Muldoon is at least premature. Negotiations are pending and it may take two weeks to adjust the contingencies. Mr. Schellie would only say to-day, "There is a sale, and there isn't." It is understood that the parties have agreed upon $15,000 as the price for the property, but have failed to agree upon figures for the good will, fixtures, etc., of the hotel business.

The judges will be two members from each camp in the district. The debate promises to be interesting.

A "billy" in the shaft was caught by ice and fell upon the cage on which the men were descending, killing four of them instantly and dangerously injuring a fifth.

Charged With Robbing.

Charles Smith and John Welsh, of West Lloyd street, are charged with robbery by Martin Monaghan, of the same street. Two of Monaghan's children say that during the absence of their father, yesterday morning Smith and Welsh entered the house and stole $75 from a small bank. Justice Williams committed Smith in default of $500 bail last night and he was taken to the Pottsville jail this morning. Welsh surrendered himself to-day. The accused deny the charge. They say they took Monaghan, who was drunk, to his home yesterday morning and did not enter the house through a window, nor did they steal anything.
