CUBANS BURNING TOWNS!

Residents of Havana Again in a State of Terror.

SAN FRANCISCO DE PAULA AFLAME.

The Town Only Five Miles Distant From Havana, and Fears Are Again Entertained For the City's Water Supply.

HAVANA, Jan. 14.—There was another alarm here yesterday afternoon. Clouds of smoke were seen arising in the direction of the village of Vegas, near San Francisco de Paula, a small town only about five miles distant. This was followed by a real glare, showing that a great fire was in progress in that direction. The alarm spread once more throughout the city, and the report was again circulated that the insurgents were approaching.

But this was nothing to the feeling of terror which came over the more timid portion of the population when a still larger fire was seen to have broken out. This time it was made out that the town of San Francisco de Paula had been set fire to by the insurgents, and the alarm increased, although the authorities professed to sneer at the matter, claiming that the fires were only the work of a few bad boys and that the insurgents who had been driven to desperation.

In spite of these assurances, and the statement that the Spanish generals have for three days past been aware of the whereabouts of General Maximo Gomez, and completely ignore his presence near Havana, it is claimed that the troops must be very busily engaged elsewhere for the insurgents to be able to burn a town and a village within sight of Havana, and yet remain untraced by the government forces.

The insurgents also burned the village of Salud and have partially burned the village of Guineal, and then marched towards Bejucal, and burned on the way a freight train and destroyed the engine. They then attacked the town of Bejucal, but were repulsed.

The greatest apprehension is felt here for the safety of the water works which supply Havana. They are situated at Vento, about five miles from this city, and less than that distance from San Francisco de Paula, reported to have been burned by the insurgents.

The friends of the insurgents have repeatedly asserted that they expect a popular demonstration in their favor to be made in this city as soon as they arrive in sight of Havana. But they are now practically in sight of the city, and yet there are no signs of an uprising, and the authorities claim that there is absolutely no danger of such an outbreak.

Every measure which is possible to take for the defense of the city and in order to protect property has been taken. In addition to the military, volunteers and civil guards, all the different branches of business have organized special corps of men, who will take part in the defense of Havana against an enemy from without or within. Of course, the insurgents in small bands may succeed in approaching still nearer to Havana, the Spanish authorities admit, but the military men insist that they have completed their plans to drive the insurgents out of this province.

Regarding the rumor that the insurgents have planned to explode bombs and set fires in several parts of this city upon a given signal, so soon as the insurgents are near enough to Havana for them to be in the position of making a dash for the capital, the authorities say that steps to defeat any such movement have been taken for weeks past, and that it would be utterly impossible to cause any diversion of importance here in favor of the insurgents.

Although the Spanish authorities are making the best of the situation, it is known that the captain general is very much disheartened at the turn events have taken during the last six weeks, and rumor succeeds rumor, day by day, of his probable retirement from the command of the Spanish forces here. If not his return to Spain. He attributes a great deal of the success of the enemy to their great superiority in moving quickly from point to point, and is still confident that if he is supplied with a sufficient number of cavalry regiments he will be able to eventually put down the insurrection. This, however, is a hopeful view of the situation which is not taken by all thoughtful people here, and the adherents of the Spanish government are anxiously longing to hear of a decisive victory for the Spaniards and of the arrival of further reinforcements from Spain.

The insurgents, according to report, now have as many men as they want, but they are still sadly in need of arms and ammunition with which to equip them. That is now said to be the main difficulty under which the insurgents are now laboring and the feature of their campaign which is the most difficult to overcome. It is known, however, that they are receiving support in many quarters hitherto opposed to them, and they are expecting the arrival of supplies on the northern coast of the province of Pinar del Rio, where Garcia recently landed at the head of an expedition.

TURKEY SHUTS THE RED CROSS SOCIETY.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—The Turkish legation gave out last evening the following official communication: "The sultan will not permit any distribution among his subjects, in his own territory, by any foreign society or individuals, however respectable the same may be (as for instance the Red Cross society), of money collected abroad. Such interference no independent government has ever allowed, especially when the collections are made on the strength of speeches delivered in public meetings by irreligious enemies of the Turkish race and religion, and on the basis of false accusations that Turkey repudiates. The sultan's ports will admit the vessels of all Turkish subjects, irrespective of creed or race."

ENGLAND WILL PROTECT AMERICANS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—In response to Secretary Olney's telegram Ambassador Bayard last evening stated that the British secretary of state for the colonies had given him assurance that he had instructed her majesty's high commissioner in South Africa to extend the same protection in behalf of John Hays Hammond and any other American citizens involved in the charge of the rebellion in the Transvaal as would be shown in the interest of British subjects in like circumstances. These cablegrams are believed to be significant, as indicating a better understanding between the two governments than was generally supposed to exist.

IN SENATE AND HOUSE.

A Resolution Looking to Cuban Recognition in the Upper Body.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Senator Morgan's speech on the silver bond bill was the event in the senate yesterday, although a sharp personal colloquy between Mr. Hill, Mr. Pritchard and Mr. Butler enlivened the early hours. Mr. Morgan frequently addressed himself personally to Mr. Sherman, who sat across the aisle, and for two hours arraigned the Ohio senator for the series of financial acts with which he is identified. At times Mr. Morgan was bitterly personal. He referred to Mr. Sherman as that Napoleon of finance who was near his Waterloo, and who would be consigned to St. Helena. In the main, however, the speech was a scholarly presentation of the silver question. Mr. Hill's colloquy with the two North Carolina senators brought out considerable discussion of the New York senator's political consistency and was amusing to the crowded galleries. Senator Kyle introduced a resolution asking the president to recognize the representatives of the Cuban insurgents whenever they appear to have a seat of government on the island and the following of a majority of the natives of that place. He is directed in that case to grant them belligerent rights.

The house after devoting an hour to the discussion of business, reported from the District of Columbia took up the pension appropriation bill. General debate on the bill consumed the day. Mr. W. A. Stone, of Pennsylvania, in charge of the bill, explained its provisions. Mr. Great, of Illinois, offered the amendment, abandoned by the committee, inhibiting the suspension of pensions for fraud until the fraud had been proved in a United States court, and Mr. Bartlett, of New York, opposed the proposed extension of the act of 1893 by the removal of the inhibition of widows until they had proved their dependence upon their daily labor for support. He estimated that the proposed extension would add 500,000 names to the pension rolls.

TWO ARRESTS FOR MURDER

The Men Accused of the Trenton Crime in Custody.

CONSTABLE GIBLON'S GOOD WORK

He Profits by a Drunken Man's Loose Tongue—One Arrest Made in Town and the Other at Park Place. Yesterday's Arrest Failed.

One of the men accused of the murder of Peter Magalunis, at Trenton, on Saturday, is in custody and the other will probably be arrested to-night. The arrest was made in town last night at about half past ten o'clock by Constable Matt Giblon, of the First ward, who accomplished the result in a very clever manner.

The man arraigned at Mahanoy City early last evening was discharged. He was John Danowski, the one who was to have been married here on Friday night, but disappointed the prospective bride and her friends after all arrangements had been made and left the town.

Danowski was arrested at East Mahanoy Church late yesterday afternoon and when arraigned before Justice May at Mahanoy City gave a satisfactory account of himself. He stated that he had been employed as a driver by the Columbia Brewing Company in this town. He had some trouble with a young woman and was taken to court, but subsequently released under bail. John Bowers becoming his bondsman. Danowski admitted that the matter had been adjusted by a promise of marriage, which was to have taken place last Friday night, but he left the town to avoid the ceremony. He stated that he went to Waverly and then to East Mahanoy Church, where the authorities arrested him on suspicion for the Trenton murder. Danowski had in his possession a railway ticket to take him to Reading, but he said his destination was Pittsburg. Friends of the murdered man were summoned, but they at once declared that Danowski had nothing to do with the murder and was a stranger to all of them, whereupon the man was discharged and at 8:30 last evening he left Mahanoy City, presumably for Pittsburg. Justice May could not hold him on the charge of the Shenandoah woman because he did not know a warrant had been issued.

The arrest made by Constable Giblon is of a more positive character. In fact, Andrew Rosdofsky, the prisoner, made a statement when arrested admitting that he was one of the murderers.

At about 10 o'clock last night Constable Giblon heard a Lithuanian named Frank Rakles, or Roskwin, talk about the murder. Rakles was pretty drunk and when spoken to by the officer said he knew the man wanted for the case at Trenton, but would not tell who they were. Giblon persisted in his inquiries and finally Rakles boasted that one of the men wanted was in Shenandoah and he could place his hand on him within a few minutes. Giblon, thus encouraged, plied the man with more questions and finally induced him to locate one of the men wanted. Rakles led Giblon to the Lithuanian boarding house, on South Main street, between Cherry and Poplar streets, kept by one William Chemisky. The place is located over the liquor store kept by Anthony Mochalka. It was arranged that Rakles enter the place and touch the man wanted on the shoulder. The main room of the boarding house was crowded with men drinking beer. Rakles entered the place amid cordial greetings. Giblon, as previously arranged, remained outside the room for a moment or two and then entered. As he did so he observed a heavy built, light-haired and rather good looking young man standing on the floor with a glass of beer in his hand and evidently in a jolly mood. Rakles' hand rested on this man's shoulder. Giblon walked up to the man indicated and said, "Is your name Andrew Rosdofsky?" The answer was prompt, but without excitement or fear. "Yes, what do you want?" "You are wanted on a charge of murder and must go to Mahanoy City," said Giblon, as he pulled out a warrant and proceeded to read it. Rosdofsky made no demonstration, but quietly accompanied the officer and on the way to Justice Touney's office spoke quite freely concerning the case. He said that Peter Magalunis, the murdered man, was an intruder at the wedding at Trenton and was put out of the house. Rosdofsky also admitted that he was the man who pushed the victim off the stoop of the house. It is claimed that this push caused the injuries that resulted in Magalunis' death.

Rosdofsky was held by Constable Giblon until C. & I. Policemen Geiger and Smith were notified and arrived from Mahanoy City. They left town with the prisoner via the Lakeside Electric Railway at about eleven o'clock last night and landed him in the lockup at Mahanoy City without trouble. Rakles says that Rosdofsky intended to get away to-day. He also stated that the other man wanted in the case was Martin Reckwin and that he was at Park Place and worked to the mines there yesterday. When told that Constable Neil Brennan had made a thorough but fruitless search Rakles said he saw and talked with Reckwin at Park Place yesterday. The informer also says that Reckwin is his real name and the man at Park Place is his brother.

At noon to-day police from Mahanoy City located Martin Reckwin at Park Place and placed him under arrest. Rosdofsky and Reckwin were then committed to the Mahanoy City lockup until Justice May can arrange to give them a hearing.
