A CONSTITUTIONAL QUESTION.

The Republic Cannot Yield Any Part of Her Territory Without Violating the Principles Upon Which the Republic Was Founded.

Washington, Jan. 16.—New and impor-tant information on the Venezuelan question, having direct bearing upon the pos-sibilities of a settlement of the boundary dispute by the two interested governments without the assistance of other powers, and seemingly discounting the probability of such an ending to the controversy, is pointed out by Mr. Heatwole, of Minne-sota, a member of the house committee on

The British government, according to the most recent, and apparently inspired, utterances of its semi-official organs has turned to the policy of bringing about a resumption of diplomatic relations with the South American republic, and then proceeding to direct negotiations with the republic to determine the boundary, as the most feasible path by which it can emerge from its present position without a prac-tical retraction of Lord Salisbury's refusal

In the light of precedents established by her most distinguished authorities it is difficult to see how the government or Venezuela can consent to enter upon any Venezuela can consent to enter upon any agreement to compromise her territorial claims with Great Britain, or, as it has been suggested by recent London dispatches, to part with any portion of her claims for a financial consideration, for no less an authority than Guzman Bianco is on record as declaring such a course to be distinctly unconstitutional.

Mr. Heatwole, who has given some at-tention to the Venezuelan question, has procured a copy of an important document published in 1857 for the government of Venezuela, embracing all the correspond-ence between its representatives and those of Great Britain upon diplomatic matters between the two governments from the years 1883 to 1887, when the most active efforts to reach a determination of the boundary line were under way.

In this correspondence Venezuela re-peatedly affirms, by her minister of for-eign affairs, Rafael Seljas, and afterward by Guzman Bianco, acting in the capacity of special envoy, that it is impossible for her to compromise the boundary claims by any treaty or convention because of the laws of her national constitution. It was her adherence to this position that largely frustrated the attempts to arrange a general treaty between the two governments and seems to have led to the severance of diplomatic relations in 1887.

This proposition was most clearly enun-ciated by Guzman Blanco in 1883, when in "The states of the confederation of Venezuela bind themselves to allemate to no foreign power any part of their territory. Therefore it is impossible for them to make or accept any treaty in which are not recognized the same the same treaty in which are not recognized the same the same treaty in which are not recognized to the same treaty in which are not recognized to the same treaty in which are not recognized to the same treaty in which are not recognized to the same treaty in which are not recognized to the same treaty in which are not recognized to the same treaty in which are not recognized to the same treaty in which are not recognized to the same treaty in which are not recognized to the same treaty in which are not recognized to the same treaty in which are not recognized to the same treaty in which are not recognized to the same treaty in which are not recognized to the same treaty in which are not recognized to the same treaty in which are not recognized to the same treaty in t the territory to which it had no right."

Earl Granville in reply informed him that the plan of a commission presented constitutional difficulties, and the plan was dropped from the discussion. In its place came a general treaty, which seemed about to be completed when the govern-ment changed. Lord Salisbury succeeded Granville, and he expressly disavowed any construction of the treaty or understanding by which it could apply to the bound-ary dispute, so the whole negotiation fell

A MODERN SUFFERING.

Venezuela's Attitude in Her Con- The Want of Sleep a Most Trying Condition.

> Surprise That the Body Can Stand Such a Strain.

Nature's Sweet Restorer an Inestimable Boon.

To restore the nervous energy spent during the day and invigorate the whole system a certain amount of sound, unbroken repose

Sleep is absolutely essential for the preservation of mental and physical health, and the loss of it for a long time must somer or later lead to serious results. Who has not atsome period suffered the misery of a sleepless night; the tossing about, the long hours, the weary thinking and thinking, the vain indexvors to court the fickle goddess of sleep, and the tired feeling, the utter weariness of mind and body on the following day?

Sleeplessness is essentially a modern suffering, the outcome of this nineteenth century life of harry, irregularity and competitive strife. Regularity of habits is an nducer of sound and healthy sleep, provided the nervous system is in good condition. If there is sleeplessness the blood and nervous system need to be strengthened and invigorated, Mrs. Emma Turner, of 256 15th St., New York City, was a victim of this disease, who had tried in every way to induce sleep without avail. At last she found the cure-natural sleep came to her and with it health and strength again.

The Bond Syndicate Dissolved.

New York, Jan. 16.-Members of the government bond syndicate received in J. P. In a letter to President Cleveland Mr. Morgan declares that the formation of the syndicate was not the result of any conference with government officials, but that he had, as a business man, anticipated clated by Grizman Blanco in 1883, when in a memorandum to Lord Salisbury, then foreign secretary, he says:

"Venezuela has repeatedly held forth to Great Britain her impossibility to alienate any part whatever of the territory of the republic, such a thing being explicitly prohibited by the constitution, so that there remains but arbitration for bringing the dispute about the boundary to an end."

This was partly in answer to the British offer of 1881 of a compromise boundary, and it appears further from the correspondence that the Venezuelan government of that day regarded any settlement by treaty involving the relinquishment of part of her claims as under the constitutional prohibition of alienating her lands. In 1884 General Guzman Blance went to England as a special envoy to settle the differences, and in a memorandum to Siguilan Paunecfote, then secretary of the foreign office, he said of the boundary question:

"The states of the confederation of Veneral Research of the confederation of the president, and prepared the action of the president, and prepared the action of the persident, and prepared the action of the pecial rest one of the time. I was confined to the sources of the popular loan.
