Futile Efforts to Release the American Liner St. Paul.

WRECKERS ALMOST DISCOURAGED

It Is Now Sald That the Wrecking People Do Not Expect to See the Vessel Affort Within a Month-Talk of Digging a Channel.

Lose Branch, Jan. 31.—The most concentrated effort to had the American line steamship St. Paul out of ser helpless condition on the basch at Long Brough was made yesterday, and, after two hours' hard labor, the work was temporarily su-pended on account of the tide. The men in charge of the work for the Merritt Wreeking company are now almost dis-couraged, for they had depended upon an extraordinary high tide yesterday. The direction of the wind. however, prevented the water from rising to the desired height.

The two rugs took up positions a quarter of a mile astern of the ship to the north-east on line with her position in the sand. They were arranged in tandem fashion, with a buge hawser leading from thustern of the ship attached to the stern post of the Merritt. Off to the port side of the St. Paul was another tug with another big hawser. Then there were five hawsers leading from the port quarterdeck of the ship to the leading anchors in the sand, Captain Merritt gave the signal threequarters of an hour before it was time for high water, and the tugs began to work. They pulled and hauled without any let but the helpiess ship did not give an

A gang of men on the ship's deck began hauling on the anchor bawsers, until it seemed as though the glant ropes, the strongest known, would snap like cotton thread. But the St. Paul stuck fast in her cradle of sand.

Some idea may be had of the immens strain on the hawsers used in hauling the St. Paul by a big one which now lies on her deck worn, comparatively speaking, to a thread. This hawser when first pressed Into service was a twenty-three inch rope. It has now been reduced to a fourteen inch
