Col. Joseph L. Follett

One of Sheridan's Commanders Saved by Paine's Celery Compound.

Col. Joseph L. Follett of New York has a national reputation.

At the age of 21, Col. Follett enlisted in Battery G., First Missouri Light Artillery, and soon rose to its command. At Lookout Mountain, his was the only Battery that reached the summit.

Since the war he has devoted himself to mechanical engineering, and has invented several important improvements on the sewing machine, and a bicycle that promises to be one of the surprises of next season.

The tension on the nervous system of an inventor, kept up for months and months, seriously weakened the health of a busy brain worker like Col. Follett, and his constitution, which even the hardships of war did not weaken, threatened to succumb to nervous exhaustion.

What Col. Follett has to say in regard to his restoration to health, cannot fail to carry great weight. In a letter to Wells & Richardson Co., of Burlington, Vt., he writes:

"When suffering from mental exhaustion and a generally disorganized system, and overwork, I used Paine's celery compound.

"The compound acted like a charm on my bowels and kept them in fine condition, and I experienced great relief from my brain troubles.

"I have not used Paine's celery compound for six months, but I shall when in need of a tonic and general regulator of the system. I have recommended it to a great many, and every one who tried it got relief.

"It is the best general remedy I ever used or knew anything about."

When the nervous system has become weakened from any cause, Paine's celery compound builds it up as nothing else can. It makes people well.

People in every walk of life have reason to be grateful to Prof. Phelps, of Dartmouth, the eminent scientist who discovered Paine's celery compound. He understood the peculiar needs of the nervous system; he knew that the headache, dizziness, sleeplessness, loss of appetite, and disordered blood all mean that the nerves are weakened and inadequate to the demands upon them. The experience of thousands has proven all over this broad country that only Paine's celery compound will give health to the nerves, and through them to the entire body.

Colleges conferred upon Dr. Phelps their highest honors for his invaluable investigations in medicine, but all this seems insignificant in comparison with the chorus of gratitude that has gone up all over the world from men, women and children, who have outgrown weakness and the lack of health by the use of Paine's celery compound, the most wonderful nerve and blood restorative.

"The Derby Mascot."

With Little Katie Rooney as a star and a play of such excellence as that of "The Derby Mascot," it is no wonder manager Charles A. Taylor is getting rich. The play has met with nothing but success since its opening. It is up to date in every particular and has never before been so well staged. The horses are a wonderful attraction and have played their parts so long that they seem to understand every word that is spoken. The race scene is well mounted, the horses passing three times in view of the audience running at full speed. Fred Summerfield plays "George," the referee, this season; Martin Rooney, a sister of Katie, plays "Johnnie Blue," and little Fanny Willard, as "Tex," is considered just the thing. Katie appears this season as a Fifth Avenue Belle in a new scene, and makes the hit of her life. At Ferguson's theatre, Tuesday evening, the 18th inst.

Gone to Pastures New.

Tommy Savage, the old organ grinder who has been a familiar figure on the streets for a long time past, has changed his residence to Mt. Carmel, assigning as his reason his inability to secure work here. The boys, who have been his most interested patrons, will miss that asthmatic organ and Tommy's inspired look as he ground out, with a pertinacity worthy of Paderewsky, the sweet strains of Grandfather's Clock, Annie Rooney and Comrades, with such a number of variations as would bring joy to the heart of the most enthusiastic follower of Wagner. Although the old organ did not always render the same tune in exactly the same way, the effect was always the same. With his change of residence Tommy will change the tunes in his box, as it is now in New York being fitted up for Paradise Alley and "all the latest and most popular songs of the day."
