labor of lifting his hat when he meets an will prevail is the main feature; then there acquaintance and his hands are otherwise is to slightly nod. The motion starts the machinery, which is in the luterior of the tile. The last is suidenly hoisted about one foot above the head, on an apparatus like these few can but agree that attached to a sulf-dumping coal cart. Then after remaining at rest a moment, it describes a semi-circle and settles back upon the cranium.

Conomission Disorby, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives, in an interview, is quoted as follows: "There is no issue between extreme and moderate protection, so that I do not like to discuss conditions which do not exist, Protection is protection, It is a broad, comomic policy, clearly defined, to which the Republican party has given as adherence, It is a policy based on principle, and the principle will not permit of being measured out in extreme or in moderation. There may be something more than protection, or omething less, but the principle of protection itself is a fixed thing not open to any issue It will be the broad anestion of protection not the measure of it, which will be before the National Convention, so that there can be no issue in that direction affecting individuals."

THE ISSUE.

The platform adopted by the Ohio Republican state convention is looked upon as the keynote of the campaign, and so far as the Republicans are concerned the battle of 1896 will be fought on those lines.

The terse, clear-cut tones of the Republicans of that state is heard as follows: "We are faithfully wedded to the great principal of protection by every tie of party featty and affection, and it is dearer to us now than ever before. It now has more devoted suppariers among the great masses of the American people, irrespective of party, than at any previous period in our national history. It is everywhere recognized and indersed as the great, musterful, triumphant American principle—the key to our prosperity in business, the rafest prop to the Treasury of the United States and the bulwark of our national independence and financial honor.

On the question of finance the party takes the bold stand for sound money in these words: "We contend for honest money; for a currency of gold, silver and paper with which to measure our exchange that shall be us sound as the government, and as nutarnished as its honor, and to that end we favor bimetallism and demand the use of both gold and silver as standard money, either in accordance with a ratio to be fixed by an international agreement, if that can be obtained, or under such restrictions and such provisions to be determined by legislation as BOTTLER will secure the maintenance of the parities of values of the two metals, so that the purchasing and debt-paying power of the dollar, whether of silver, gald or paper, shall be at all times equal.

In taking this stand for honest money, says the New York Advertiser, the Ohio convention has performed a public service of immense value. It will tend to strengthen hasiness confidence throughout the entire nation. It shows that the Republican party is not terrified by the threats and bluster of a handful of free silverite United States Senators. It demonstrates that the party which brought the Union out of the slough of cheap paper money to the solid rock of specie payments is inflexibly loyal to that record. Ohio has spoken. Let the Republicanism of other western Commonwealths be equally courageous and consistent.
