The accident occurred at about 19:20 Saturday night. Car No. 2 was bound westward in charge of Conductor Jacob Gillespie and Martin Corrigan, motorman. The wagon had stopped on Centre street, a short distance west of Emerick and the driver left it to deliver a package. A young man named Robert Linton was left in charge of the wagon and there was an understanding between him and the regular driver that he was to cross the street and drive below Emerick street. He was trying to do this when the accident imprened, Linton lost control of the horse and it stepped in front of the car. The anima and vehicle were tumbled to the side of the track. Linton fell under the overturned wagon and the shock of the collision Corrigan, the motorman, from the platform Crabs of the car to the street. He had time only to shut off the motor power and as he fell he shouted, "Stop the car" Stop the car !" Con-ductor Gillespie had been making up his report for the trip. He rushed out on the platform and applied the brake, bringing the ar to a stop.

The horse, which belonged to the Reliable Hand Laundry Company, was almost in-stantly killed. Linton and Corrigan were considerably cut and bruised about the limbs, but neither was dangerously injured. Linton says he tried to drive across the street, but the horse seemed to become frightened by the headlight of the car. Linton waved his arms for the motorman to stop, but the car was running too fast and could not be stopped in time to avoid the accident. There seems to be no conflict of statements in the matter, except that the motorman claims that the effort to cross the track was made too late to give him a chance to stop the car, regardless of the rate of speed. The horse was valued at $100 and the damage to the wagon amounts to about $25. George W Keiter, Jr., hauled the careass of the horse away Saturday night with a team of mules
