CORONATION OF THE CZAR.

The Great Moscow Ceremonies Formally Inaugurated.

THE RUSSIANS' POMP AND PRIDE.

While the Wealth Producers Live in Virtual Slavery and Want, Fortunes Are Being Lavishly Expended in Brilliant Pageantry and Fine Decorations.

Moscow, May 19.—The arrival of the czar and zarina yesterday afternoon may be said to inaugurate the festival season in celebration of the coronation, and for which the city and the whole empire has made months of preparation. Their majesties arrived in their special train at the Simolensk station at 5:30 p. m. The station is about half way between the Kremlin and the Petrovsky palace, which is to be the abiding place of the czar until the triumphal entry into the city on Thursday. The rain was pouring down in torrents, as the train arrived at the station, but this seemed to have no effect on the loyal ardor of the people, and they were gathered at the station to accord a welcoming greeting to their sovereign and to catch a glimpse of his august person. The streets were full of mud, and the countless flags and streamers fluttered fitfully in a gusty breeze.

An imperial pavilion had been erected at the station, into which the imperial party stepped from their train, and from which they stepped into the equipages which carried them to the Petrovsky palace. The pavilion was carpeted and was bright with floral decorations. A squadron of the czar's regiment of Ulians was the guard of honor on the platform. The Grand Duke Sergius, uncle of the czar and governor general of Moscow, with a brilliant suite of officers, awaited the arrival of the imperial party at the station. The appearance of the approaching train was the signal for an outburst of great cheering, and the military band played a regimental march as the train entered the station and the czar left his car.

The czar and zarina descended the carpeted stairs from the pavilion, entered a carriage and were driven to the Petrovsky palace, escorted by cavalry officers of the highest rank. Following the carriage came three troikas, which were occupied by the Grand Duke Sergius and his grand duchess, the Grand Duke Michael-Mikhailovich, cousin of the late czar, and his grand duchess, and by the infant Grand Duchess Olga Nicolaevna, daughter of the czar, who is now 9 months old.

The passage of the party through the street was greeted with great enthusiasm, the route being lined with great crowds of cheering spectators.

One of the special features of the present events in Moscow is the doing away with the custom of employing special constables in citizens' dress to guard the route of the czar's coming and going. It has been the custom of late years for these special constables to stand behind the military. On the occasion of a spectacular progress the guards were about the only ones who could see the procession. On occasions the route of the czar's progress is guarded by a double line of military, a double rank of sworn civilians, the ordinary police in uniform, the police of the defense department and the detective police. The doing away with the sworn civilian ranks will give a better opportunity for the czar's subjects at large to witness his progress to the coronation.

Preparations for the grand entry into the city are not yet completed, though they are far advanced, and on all sides are evidences of the confusion and hurry of the last touches for every great celebration. The character of the preparations is most imposing. The palace of the Grand Duke Sergius is especially magnificent. This is situated upon the Tverskaja street, along which the czar goes from the Petrovsky palace to the Kremlin on Thursday. Opposite the governor general's residence is a great frame screen built to make an unobstructed building used as a guard room for the troops on official duty at the palace. Near at hand is a watch tower of the fire department, which was a clumsy and unattractive object, but has been modelled from base to top of tower with vigorous and thousands of loops for illumination by night.

Nearly all of the buildings in Moscow are built of wood and brick, covered indiscriminately with a white stucco, the general effect being a white wall. The coloring of the streets has been almost universally renewed and freshened for the occasion, thus lending to the city a peculiarly brilliant aspect, which lends itself very happily to the festival line.

The Tverskaja street, being the route of the czar's progress from the Petrovsky palace to the Kremlin, has concentrated within its length much of the preparation. This preparation has necessarily been very elaborate to insure a point of vantage for the vast number who are under official care. The competition for position among those not officially provided for has been unprecedented. Many houses along the street have been rented at high rates for the whole year, merely to secure the lessee a window for the procession on Thursday. For single windows fabulous prices have been offered.

The streets have along their entire length many pavilions set aside for the use of favorite ones. These pavilions are placed at the intersection of the Tverskaja street with the broad highways that follow the course of the various ramparts which have been built in concentric rings about the ancient city. The coloring of all these temporary structures is most brilliant.

Great iron columns have also been erected along the streets' length for a brilliant electric illumination. Huge wooden chandeliers, draped and vividly colored by day and carrying brilliant lights from top to bottom by night, are also features of the decorations. Electricity is used for the first time in the illuminations for a czar's coronation, and elaborate preparations have been made by the authorities to avail themselves of this new agent.

The movements of Li Hung Chang and Field Marshal Yamagata are followed with the keenest popular interest, while the emir of Bokhara and his suite, in their magnificent robes of gold cloth, and other eastern potentates in gala attire excite general wonder and admiration. Nearly every nation on earth has sent here its special ambassador or representative, and every province in the vast Russian empire has sent a delegation, making an assemblage which in itself forms an interesting ethnological congress.

TEACHERS NOT TO PARADE

Willing to Otherwise Assist in Memorial Day Exercises.

THEIR GROUNDS FOR THE ACTION

They Say It Would be a Hardship to the Children and the Teachers May Have Other Engagements—The School Board Had Made a Request.

The teachers in the public schools of town have decided not to accept the invitation of Wain Waters Post No. 149, G. A. R., to take part in the Memorial Day parade. This carries with it the presumption that none of the public schools will participate in the exercises, as without the teachers it would be impossible to have the schools appear in line in the order and under the discipline which the instructors can enforce.

The decision is also a rejection of an official request to the teachers made by the School Board at its last meeting.

At that meeting Superintendent Whitaker stated he did not feel that he had the power to require the teachers to parade on Memorial Day, as the event would fall on Saturday and he questioned his authority to exercise any jurisdiction over the teachers. He also stated that the teachers were not disposed to parade, but suggested that an intimation from the School Board might have the desired effect.

School Director Conry took up the subject and said that he did not think the G. A. R. expected the teachers and schools to parade all the way to the cemeteries, but thought a parade as far as the foot of the monument would be satisfactory. He also thought it would be well to have the pupils and teachers down to the third grade primary schools appear in the parade and moved that they be requested to do so. The motion was carried with the understanding that in case of rain the teachers have discretion to disband the pupils.

Last Monday evening the local Teachers' Institute met and the subject, after some discussion, was referred to a committee with instructions to report.

Last evening the Institute again met. Mr. Fred H. Hopkins, representing the G. A. R. of town, was in attendance and urged the teachers to weigh the matter carefully before taking final action. He read the instructions to the local post from the headquarters of the G. A. R., with special reference to the educational movement.

The committee appointed at the last meeting of the Institute made a report against the teachers and schools parading. During discussion on the subject it was stated that to comply with the request embodied by Mr. Conry's motion before the School Board would bring out 1,200 pupils and it would be too great a hardship to keep such a number of children under discipline on the streets from 8:30 in the morning until noon. It was also stated that many of the teachers may have friends and relatives as guests on that day, and many others will be called upon to assist in the private decoration of graves.

It was finally decided that the invitation from the G. A. R. be accepted, but that no part be taken in the parade. It was also decided to appoint a committee to devise a plan by which the teachers may aid the G. A. R. in some other way than by parading, and the committee is to report at the meeting next Monday evening.

Sprinkler Almost Dumped.
A front wheel of the Bascom Hook & Ladder Co.'s sprinkler to-day went into an excavation on South White street that had been made by the Shenandoah Trust & Power Company and the vehicle was almost upset. It was necessary to use jacks to get the sprinkler right again. The operation attracted a large crowd of people. The company had filled up the excavation, but on account of recent puddling and the rain the filling was soft.

He is Unfortunate.
E. Delemac, the West street liverman, is unfortunate. A few days ago he loaned a set of harness valued at $25 and a horse not been returned. The borrower was a stranger. One of his horses is now attacked by lockjaw, the result of an injury to one of its hoofs by stepping on an overturned nail. It is quite likely the animal will be shot. Mr. Delemac purchased it last fall from William Neiswander for $135.
