An Impressive Observance of Memorial Day This Morning.

THE PARADE LARGE AND BRILLIANT

Ceremonies of a Glowing Patriotic Character at the Odd Fellows' Cemetery, in Which Many Public School Children Took Part.

The American people to-day are answering the master roll of the nation. They are answering the call to honor the memory of those who died that the Union might live. They uphold the day and hold it in memory that on this side of the Atlantic occan there is a country of self-government and civil liberty by reason of the sacrifices of the de-parted heroes. The gatherings in the cemes Following this part of the program came parted heroes. The gatherings in the ceme-teries is the old, old story, but it never grows parted heroes. The gatherings in the cemes-teries is the old, old story, but it never grows wearisone. Such is the case in Shranadoah to-day. The observance of Memorial Day in the town this morning was probably more general and the ceremonies more impressive than at any other place in the coal region. The weather was delightful, At an early hour the streets were crowded with people phaling in every direction and preparing for the celebration most of them carrying pushing in every direction and preparing for the celebration, most of them carrying bunches of flowers for the graves of the dead. The early dawn saw many residences and business places beautifully decorated with wreaths of evergreens, flags and bunting, and the time the hour for the line of parade to form arrived, many fronts of houses along the route attested the patriotism of the

The line of parade did not move punctually at the hour fixed, nine o'clock, which was due to many members of the various organizations listed to participate being required to visit the respective collieries at which they work to receive their wages, but they accomplished this in good time, as the

for a general observance of the day. It was very gratifying to all the workers, but the business people were not so well suited. They abhor pay days when they occur immediately before, or on a holiday, claiming that much money which should go to them is diverted into holiday jollification. But many re-joleed that it was pay day, and a holiday, and that the pay was dealt out early in the

The display was one of the most imposing ever held in the town on a Memorial Day. It embraced the representative patriotic, social, beneficial and other organizations of the town and each was well represented. A predicted, the demonstration by the schoo children was the feature. The educational idea in connection with the observance of the day is a good one and the public schools will no doubt take part in all observances of Memorial Day in this town.

The line of parade started from the corner. White street, thence to Coal, to Jardin, to Oak, to Chestnut, to Cherry, to Main, and then north to the Odd Fellows' cemetery. As usual Patriotic spirit.
