THE PENNSYLVANIA HEROES.

Hancock and Meade Honored by Their Own Commonwealth.

ON THE FIELD OF GETTYSBURG!

Formal Dedication of the Equestrian Statues
Erected at the Expense of the State in Memory of Two of Her Distinguished Military Commanders.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., June 6.—The equestrian statues of Generals George G. Meade and Winfield S. Hancock, erected by the state of Pennsylvania in honor to the memory of those gallant warriors, were unveiled on the historic battlefield of Gettysburg yesterday. Thunders of artillery and bursts of martial music filled the warm summer air, and hundreds of battle-scarred veterans doffed their caps as the flags fell from the monuments of their former leaders. Over 6,000 persons stood uncovered under the perfect June skies and saw the impressive ceremonies.

The Meade statue was unveiled at 10:30 o'clock in the morning. George Gordon Meade, the boy grandson of the dead hero, pulled the cord which released the draperies, and as they fell from the beautiful monument Battery C, of the Third United States artillery, fired the major general's salute.

General P. J. S. Gobin was master of ceremonies, which were begun with a prayer by the Rev. Dr. Spencer, chaplain of Meade Post, of Philadelphia. The officers of the post then performed the act of dedication, and the unveiling followed. The members of the post then decorated the statue with laurel wreaths, and General Gobin formally transferred the memorial to Governor Hastings. In doing so he spoke of the campaign of 1863 as the darkest hour of the nation, and referred to the change of commanders on the eve of battle, concluding with a fitting eulogy of General Meade.

Governor Hastings responded at length, paying a brilliant tribute to the dead hero, and concluding as follows:

"Other nations said of us that America must go the way of all republics; it could not withstand the great conflict. But when the dreadful storm, which had been gathering for decades and raging for three years, had burst in all its relentless fury amidst these hills and valleys; when charge and counter charge had ended; when the cannon no longer gave forth defiant thunders; when death had claimed her own; and the high carnival of hate and passion was exhausted, and the smoke of musket and battery was lifted from the scene, here, on this very spot, upon his horse sat the victorious commander, the chief of the conquerors, the proud Pennsylvanian, George Gordon Meade.

"As the chief executive, for the time being, of the commonwealth wherein his most heroic services were rendered, for the people of the present generation, for the memory of his comrades who sleep in yonder cemetery, for the widows and orphans whose dear ones rest beneath the shadows of this statue, in behalf of the brave men of sister states who rushed to Pennsylvania's rescue in the hour of her peril, and for the generations yet to come in this keystone of the nation's arch, I accept this precious trophy. I notify you that no vandal hands shall mar its noble proportions, and I promise you that the patriotism, loyalty and pride of our people—our Pennsylvania freemen—will preserve it in honor to the latest generation.

Then General Gobin introduced the orator of the occasion, General D. McM. Gregg, who commanded the Second cavalry division in the battle of Gettysburg.

General Gregg said that the hero whose memory was thus honored was a citizen of Pennsylvania, although born in Cadiz, Spain, while his father was minister there in 1855. He spoke of Meade's military education and training; his services in the Mexican war, and his skillful work as chief of the topographical engineering corps, in all of which offices he held the respect and esteem of officers and men.

General Miles, commander-in-chief of the United States army, was introduced. He expressed his thanks, and then told of Meade's wonderful skill in handling his army. He referred to the enthusiasm which existed in the Confederate army on the eve of the battle, and of Lee's movement of 19,000 cavalry to attack the rear of the Union forces, believing that the Confederate general meant to make this another Austrelitz.

Brigadier General John R. Brooke, U. S. A., who commands the department of the Platte, was the next speaker. He was followed by H. K. Rush Brown, sculptor of the monument.

The Hancock statue was unveiled at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, with much the same ceremonies.

General Gobin also presided here, and prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. McKnight, president of Pennsylvania College. Miss Eleanor Nicholson, daughter of Colonel Nicholson, unveiled the statue. General Gobin made the formal transfer of the monument to the governor, who, in a brief speech, accepted it for the state.

General Henry H. Ritzman, congressman from Philadelphia, who was on General Hancock's staff at Gettysburg, was the orator.

General Bingham was followed by F. Edwin Elwell, the sculptor of the monument, who spoke briefly on American art, claiming supremacy for the American display at the World's fair.

Hundreds of Grand Army men who attended the annual encampment at Chambersburg stopped here on their way home and participated in the ceremonies.

The Hancock statue is 10 feet high, resting on a pedestal of blocks of granite, the whole 17 feet long, 10 feet wide and 12 feet high. The horse and rider face to the southwest, General Hancock as if directing the movement of troops on that line.

The statue to General Meade stands on an elevation west of his headquarters and quite near the "bloody angle." Its pedestal is composed of three massive granite blocks weighing twenty, twenty-eight and thirty-five tons respectively. It is almost 15 feet long, 8 feet wide and 10 feet high. Both statues are of the best quality of bronze, of heroic size, and are about 30 feet from the ground at the highest point. They cost over $100,000.

Jackson Would Not Fight Corbett.

New York, June 6.—J. H. Hildebrand of Johannesburg, South Africa, according to a cable to a local sporting paper, offered to match Peter Jackson against Corbett for $10,000, loser to receive $10,000, fight to take place at the National Sporting Club, London, in America or South Africa. Billy Brady, it appears, accepted the offer on Corbett's behalf, but Jackson refused giving no reason for doing so. Hildebrand then offered to match Denver Ed Smith against Jackson for $10,000. This Jackson also refused. The South African sport then matched Joe Goddard against Steve O'Donnell for $5,000 a side, to fight in Johannesburg in October.

Fearful Scene at a Hanging.

Chicago, June 6.—Mangled, but struggling feebly with his guards, and with incoherent cries ringing from his lips, Joseph Windrath was executed yesterday afternoon in the county jail. Even to the last second Windrath feigned insanity. As the steel bracelets were snapped on his wrists he kept up a continual cry of "Hang up Mannow," "Hang up Mannow." "Hang up Mannow." Then he changed to "I will sleep by and by." As the rope was placed around his neck his eyes glared and again he commenced shouting, this time "Put the straps on." "Loser, open the bad box." The cries came chaotically as the jailer tightened the noose. Not until the last time around Windrath's neck were the awful cries stilled. It was fourteen minutes before his heart ceased beating.

Trying to Save Captain Wilborg.

PHILADELPHIA, June 6.—Counsel for Captain Wilborg, late commander of the alleged filibustering steamer H-reser, yesterday received from Washington a petition to President Cleveland requesting Captain Wilborg's pardon, which was signed by Senators Sherman and Morgan, of the foreign relations committee, and forty-two other senators. Attached to the petition are the signatures of forty-eight members of the house in addition to the 103 received a few days ago. The petition is also signed by Chairman Carter, of the Republican national committee, and by ex-Chairman Brien, of the Democratic national committee. Captain Wilborg is still at liberty, and is awaiting the arrival of the record of the decision of the United States supreme court, confirming his sentence, before being sent to prison.

Edwin H. Fidler's Millions.

PHILADELPHIA, June 6.—The last will of ex-Mayor Edwin H. Fidler, who died last Sunday at his country residence, "Luzon," Torrington, was admitted to probate yesterday. The estate is valued at $100,000 "and upwards" by the executors, Josephine R. Fidler, Edwin H. Fidler, Jr., and William W. Fidler, but in this case "upwards" means a great deal, as the estate is said to be worth $3,000,000. The estate is left wholly to his family.

DEATH OF AN OLD RESIDENT

Christ, Schley Died From a Complication of Diseases.

HAD JUST RETIRED FROM BUSINESS

The Deceased Had Been a Resident of Town
For Over Thirteen Years and Was
One of the Oldest Hotelkeepers.
Early Days of Music Recalled.

Death last night removed another of the borough's oldest residents in the person of Christian Schley, who died at five o'clock last evening. He had been ailing for some time, but had been confined to bed only since last Sunday. Death was due to a complication of physical troubles, among them Bright's disease.

Mr. Schley was 59 years of age on the 21st of last March. He was born in Rhenish Prussia and came to the United States in 1854. About nine years later he settled in this town and worked in and about the mines until seventeen years ago, when he started in the saloon business. For a number of years he kept a place in the Durbach building, on East Centre street, and several years ago moved to the corner of West Coal street and Pear alley, where he continued in the business until about two weeks ago, when he sold out and retired to 214 North Main street to live privately.

The deceased is survived by his wife, Minnie, and two children, Mrs. Henrietta L. Meyrick and Christ, Schley, Jr. The other surviving relatives are a brother, William Schley, of Wilkesbarre, and Mrs. John Dorfstein, of Shamokin, and Mrs. Adam Stufenburger, of Chicago.

The Schley family was very prominent in the musical circles of this county several years ago and the place of business of the deceased was quite a resort for musicians, especially German people. William Schley organized the first band in this town about thirty years ago. It comprised ten Germans, nearly all being now dead. Subsequently he organized an orchestra, the seven members of his family comprising the organization with himself as leader, and the deceased's place was made the headquarters. William Schley arrived in town last night to attend the funeral.

Cane Presentation.

J. F. Collier, who has been promoted to a superintendency under the Prudential Insurance Company, at Dubois, Pa., left for that place at 11:45 this morning. Last night Mr. Collier was presented at his family residence on North Jardin street with a handsome gold-headed cane from Strouse's jewelry store, as testimonial of esteem from the gentlemen who constituted his staff here. The presentation address was made by Superintendent G. T. Llewellyn. Mr. Collier accepted it personally. Messrs. Thos. Dove, Jr., Michael T. Lilly, Lawrence Mangum, E. J. McNeill, R. M. Glover, W. P. Brown and Harry Exley, constituting Mr. Collier's late staff, P. J. Scanlan and Assistant Superintendents J. J. Creary, W. J. Walsh, J. F. McFadden and Thomas Morgans were in attendance.

Bickert's Cafe.

A special hot lunch will be served at our cafe on Monday morning.

Health Note Violated.

Lizzie Tobias, a 2-year-old Polish child, died at the residence of its parents on West Strawberry alley on Thursday from membranous croup, and notice of existence of the case was received for the first time yesterday. As membranous croup comes under the head of contagious diseases and must be placarded, the physicians in charge will be required to appear before the Board of Health and show why the case was not reported earlier.

Not Built for Sprinting.

Upon a wager made yesterday afternoon Patrick Gibbons and David Head, bartender at Costello's saloon, and a few intimate friends proceeded to the Trotting park to run a 100-yard race. Gibbons, who was confident of winning, was given a start of 25 yards. When the signal was given he started on a Maud S. gal around the track, closely pursued by his opponent, which caused him to look back and fall upon his left arm by standing over a stone. He received a severe sprain which was first thought to be a fracture. Had the race been finished Head would have been the lucky winner.

SPECIAL FOR FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

In fine hand-dyed Negligee shirts with collars and cuffs attached, at 38 cents. At MAX LEVIT'S, 15 East Centre street.

Case Continued.

The case against Richard Barrett and Michael Dean, who are charged with robbing the barber shop of C. F. Foley, of Lost Creek, has been continued until Monday evening at 7 o'clock. The hearing will take place in Justice Williams' office, when some startling evidence will be produced. The defendant will be represented by M. M. Burke, Esq.

Inquest Held.

Deputy Coroner Manley and a jury consisting of Messrs. P. J. Flaherty, J. J. Powell, Patrick Connors, John Scanlan, Joseph H. Manley and August Wankhouse, last night held an inquest in the case of Frank Guznafsky, who was killed in a breach above the west end of Line street, yesterday morning. Joe Perly testified that the deceased was getting coal out of the breach for him and worked with a pick. Guznafsky boarded with Perly and had never worked in the breach before. Many other people had worked in the place and it was not considered dangerous. Two other witnesses testified to the death of the deceased and the recovery of the body. It was testified that death must have been instantaneous. Several people went to the rescue, but they were unable to begin the work of recovery until the overhanging top of coal and clod stopped working. The jury decided that the deceased was killed by a fall of coal and rock while engaged in cutting coal for domestic purposes at a mine breach.
