The friends of Senator Gray can congratulate themselves upon the fight they made in Allegany county, and the results attained. The officers and the entire party machinery were in the hands of the Magee faction, it was quite a victory for the Gray adherents to secure seven candidates for the Legislature out of a total of fifteen.

The June number of Harper's Round Table contains the following: "Does a girl love a cowboy riding a wheel? Enthusiastically. It is as proper to ride a wheel as to ride a pony or to walk. But a girl must ride with grace and fearless courage. She must have the right kind of saddle, must have her handbags at the right height, and be dressed so that her skirts will not entangle or entrap her. There is no pleasure which surpasses that of swift motion, when one is young and strong and the blood courses bravely through the veins; whether the motion comes from skating, running, riding, or going forward in any sort of progress which requires exercise. The old Greek goddess was always flying about. Look her up in your mythology, and you will find which one I mean. Her name is very short, and a popular American author wrote a beautiful story about her, which I am sure you all have read."

A second and more careful reading of Colonel Spalding's able card on the subject of bicycle prices, says the New York Advertiser, makes it clear that, in his judgment, manufacturers and dealers are making great sacrifices in order to accommodate the public, and the public is not properly appreciating the fact. Heading between the lines we see where the Colonel would say that to furnish wheels at $100 to $125 apiece is simply extending the hand of letting charity to those who want to ride, and it is time they know it. Every manufacturer and dealer in bicycles is according to this high authority, a public benefactor, giving his time and capital to the amelioration of the human race. In all this there is an important bit to which many concern, namely, that this protest against the price of wheels should come handily to test the manufacturer and dealer without their guileful wiles and permit the market to soar to its natural level, say about fifty points above present quotations. In the meantime the unfortunate public, not knowing a blessing from heaven when they see it, will continue to gnaw and gnaw, and growl.

Is Your Foot Big? Well, if it isn't too big you can buy a pair of shoes very cheap at the Factory Shoe Store. We have just received 200 pair of shoes, made from $3 to $5. They are all $1.50 and $2.00 good; bring them out at 75c.

A DISASTER RECALLED. Schwedt Here by a Hungarian to Recover for Damages. At 7:58 this morning Daniel Ouden and W. J. Wickley, of town, Pottsville, Schenandoah, were on a coal train at the mine owned by Albert Brown, outside of town. A fire started in the mine and spread to the coal train. The train was full of coal and the fire spread to the coal train. The train was full of coal and the fire spread to the coal train.

The fire recalls a disaster at one of the collieries, which dated about two years ago. On the night of the 28th of July, 1894, an explosion occurred in the boiler house at Packer, No. 4 colliery. The explosion was caused by a gas leak. The explosion was caused by a gas leak. The explosion was caused by a gas leak.

On the following morning Messrs. O'Brien, Scully, Watkins, representing the HERALD, and Albert Brown visited the hospital and interviewed Shelsick, the only survivor of the terrible affair, and got a well connected story of it. Shelsick, who was the assistant foreman, placed the whole responsibility upon Miller, the fireman, alleging that the latter had repeatedly ignored Shelsick's warnings. He also claimed to have called attention to the high water in the gauges, although the blow-off was opened all the way. Miller is alleged to have replied that it was none of Shelsick's business. Finally Shelsick said: "Then, mind me a crack some place," and at that instant the explosion occurred.

After leaving the hospital Shelsick was again given employment in the boiler house, but it is alleged, that his reinstatement was intended to bring upon him a severe attack of insanity. He applied to another foreman over the place and the outside foreman was obliged to remove him, but gave him a place on the platform in the breaker. This did not suit Shelsick, but he smothered his displeasure with as much grace as his nature would permit until some time after he suddenly disappeared. He was next heard of from New York City, when he entered the suit for damages referred to, alleging that the explosion occurred and he sustained his injuries, not on account of any neglect or negligence on the part of Miller in connection with the gauges, but because the boiler was defective. That he should go to New York City, where it is next to impossible to get a jury conversant with the construction and operation of boiler houses in the coal fields, and escape the laws of Pennsylvania, which allow in some respects from New York law on the question of injuries sustained through the carelessness of co-laborers, is considered a shrewd move on the part of Shelsick. The witnesses who left here this morning are subpoenaed by the company to prove the statements by Shelsick as to the cause of the accident, as made immediately after it occurred and to controvert the statements he now makes.

THE LOST CREEK ROBBERY. Foley, the Barber, Tells a Story of Persistent Persecution. On the night of the 29th of May, last, the barber shop of C. F. Foley, of Lost Creek, was broken open and robbed of $80 worth of razors, strops, clippers, cosmetics and hair oil. A still hunt was kept up until last week, when a line led to the arrest of two young men of Lost Creek named Richard Barrett and Michael Dean. They stoutly proclaimed their innocence, notwithstanding a search upon warrant, of Barrett's house by Detective Amour, and Constables Bunde and Phillips revealed a tooth brush and a lead pencil which Foley identified as his property. Barrett and his mother stated that the articles had been left in the house two years ago, when Barrett's sister returned to Philadelphia after a visit home. Justice Williams concluded to hold the young men under bail for a further hearing, which was fixed for last night.

On the following day Mrs. Barrett caused Foley to be arraigned before a Justice at Grantsville, charged with unlawfully breaking into her house. This act referred to the investigation made under the search warrant. Mrs. Barrett alleges that several articles in the house were damaged and that she has received $28. Foley waived a hearing and entered bail. Last night Barrett and Dean again appeared, waived a hearing and renewed the bail for trial at court.

The police authorities in charge claim they have evidence that after the first hearing Barrett went to one Martin Cosgrove, of Lost Creek, and demanded the return of it of the stolen razors, and they were given to him. The strops and many of the other articles are somewhere along the bottom of a creek at Lost Creek. Empty hair oil and other bottles have been found scattered in bushes.

Foley says he does not think the robbery was perpetrated with gain as the prime motive, but was simply a part of a system of persecution to which he has been subjected since he has been in Lost Creek. He originally came from Mahanoy Pass, but after spending some time in Philadelphia he opened a barber shop in Lost Creek and since that time certain people have been trying to drive him out of the place. He attributes the persecution to two things—his property in spite of opposition and his strong and open advocacy of the cause of temperance. He says he is a dyed-in-the-wool temperance advocate and he has never been afraid to ventilate his convictions. He declares that he will persevere to the end, maintain his place of business and uphold the cause of temperance with all the vigor in his command.

Full Details Gladly Given. A Railroad Official's Experience.

M. L. EDWARD EDMONDS, long connected with railroad construction in Nebraska, writes: "My heart troubled and pained me for 15 years. Shortness of breath was the constant and most common symptom. Intense, excruciating pain, generally followed any severe exertion. Faintness, hunger without any appetite; fluttering that made me clutch my breast, and palpitation that often staggered me as if I would fall, were frequent attacks. Again, everything would turn black if I arose from a stooping posture quickly. Sleepless nights with their protesting unrest were numerous and I could get no rest day or night. I consulted leading physicians and tried advertised remedies. They gave me no relief. One of Dr. Miles' circulars described my case so accurately that I took Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and I am now a well man. I hope every one troubled with heart disease will try Dr. Miles' remedy. If they will write me personally, I will gladly give them full details of my experience." EDW. EDMONDS. P. O. Box 55, David City, Nebraska. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is sold on guarantee that first bottle benefits or money refunded.
